Angela Is Arraigned On Shoot-Out Role

Heavy Security Prevails Next To Haley's Chamber

By MARY LEYDECKER

The arraignment of Black Communist Angela Y. Davis took place today under heavy security in a Marin Superior courtroom next door to the one from which Judge Harold J. Haley was kidnapped on Aug. 7.

She was returned to Marin yesterday from New York to face charges of murder, kidnapping and conspiracy stemming from the shoot-out, in which the judge and three others died.

Miss Davis, wearing a bright print Empire-style dress and full Afro hairstyle, smiled at spectators, who included reporters, a few of her supporters and plainclothesmen, as she was led into the courtroom from a holding cell.

During the brief proceedings, Judge E. Warren McGuire placed persons involved in the case under stringent orders not to discuss the case with news media.

The attorneys who represented Miss Davis in her New York flight to avoid extradition, John J. Abt and Margaret Burnham, were in court today but said they will not represent her in subsequent California proceedings.

Miss Burnham, a young black woman who grew up with Miss Davis in Birmingham, asked a three-week continuance so that the militant leader may obtain a local attorney.

Judge McGuire finally granted a two-week continuance after Dist. Atty. Bruce B. Bales had suggested only one week. She will reappear in court at 9 a.m. Jan. 5 for further arraignment and other proceedings.

Bales introduced in court Albert W. Harris Jr., assistant attorney general, who will prosecute the case since Bales has withdrawn because of his close friendship with the late Judge and Asst. Dist. Atty. Gary W. Thomas, wounded in the shoot-out.

After Harris handed Miss Davis a copy of the indictment, Judge McGuire made his order regarding pretrial publicity.

Noting that the case has received extensive coverage in the press, he said that anyone, including lawyers, witnesses and court attaches, who violates the order not to discuss the case will be in contempt of court.

He also ordered that the transcript of the Marin County grand jury proceedings which led to the indictment of Miss Davis — a copy of which was given to Abt today — remain sealed until Jan. 6.

Miss Davis's appearance in court brought forth even more security precautions than had been customary at

Hanoi In More Benevolent Mood

By RAY F. HERNDON

PARIS (UPI)—North Vietnam scaled down its peace demands today. It apparently dropped its demand for the ouster of the present Saigon regime and it offered a ceasefire if the United States would halt reconnaissance flights over the north and withdraw its troops by mid-1971.

After the meeting the U.S. delegate dismissed the Communist proposals as "a repetition of the demand by the other side that we withdraw our forces by a given date without regard to the question of North Vietnamese withdrawals.

"We made it clear again that we were prepared to negotiate a timetable for complete withdrawals as part of an overall settlement," he said. "That must also encompass the question of North Vietnamese forces in Laos, Cambodia and South Vietnam."

In a related development to the Paris talks, Secretary of State William P. Rogers today in Washington condemned as "a contemptible maneuver" North Vietnam's release of a list of names of American prisoners.

The Secretary said Hanoi was using the prisoner lists simply to divert attention from the inhumanity of its treatment of POW's and smacked of "barbarism" because the action raised hopes of prisoners' families that more names might be included than were on previous lists.

All previous Hanoi statements demanded a provisional coalition government that excluded the three top Saigon leaders as a necessary step toward the restoration of total peace in South Vietnam. There was no mention of that demand today.

The statement delivered by chief North Vietnamese delegate Xuan Thuy said the question of South Vietnam's political future was open to discussion if the Nixon administration agreed to Hanoi's latest conditions.

U.S. Ambassador David K. E. Bruce also toned down the American statements today. Instead of using words like "inhumane" to describe Hanoi's treatment of war prisoners he said it was "unsatisfactory" in the North and "disgraceful" in Viet Cong controlled areas of the south.

The new Hanoi conditions for peace were inserted into the North Vietnamese statement after it had been mimeographed for distribution to newsmen.

Thuy's modified proposals were presented to the conference after the U.S. delegate

ONLY ONE MARINITE ON LIST

Only one Marinite — and he had long ago been reported a prisoner of war — was on the list of captured American pilots acknowledged by Hanoi to be in North Vietnamese hands.

He is Air Force Capt. William W. Butler of San Rafael, whose F-105 was shot down over Hanoi three years ago.

Not on the list were M/Sgt. Robert L. Hill of Loma Verde a flight engineer, and James D. Birchin, a Green Beret captain, who have been reported missing in action. North Vietnam said however, the list contained only pilots in its hands, but was a complete list of such prisoners.

Polish Premier Out; Death Toll Reported

WARSAW (API) —Jozef Cyrankiewicz, the longtime prime minister of Poland, was ousted in a government shakeup today.

Piotr Jaroszewicz, an army general and economics expert, was elected prime minister to succeed Cyrankiewicz. Cyrankiewicz was elected to the largely ceremonial job of president.

The government changes—like those in the top Communist Party leadership Sunday—were a direct outgrowth of the Baltic food riots last week.

Cyrankiewicz's "letter of resignation" was presented to a meeting of the Polish parliament.

A letter of resignation also came from President Marian Spychalski, who had been removed from the party's ruling politburo Sunday along with his close friend, former party leader Wladyslaw Gomulka.

Party First Secretary Edward Gierek, the man who succeeded Gomulka, immediately took the floor and nominated Cyrankiewicz for the presidency—a largely ceremonial job.

Cyrankiewicz, 59, had been premier since 1947, except for two years as deputy premier in 1952-54. A large, bald, jovial man, he is known as both a lover of good living and as a relatively liberal moderating influence on the Polish regime.

New details trickling out of Szczecin indicate last week's riots were more serious than official reports have shown, diplomatic sources said today.

Well-informed sources said the death toll in the seaport near the East German border was more than 50. They said workers occupied the Warski shipyard in Szczecin last Thursday and successfully held out for a 15 per cent pay rise in the face of army troops.

Diplomatic observers said the clashes were believed to have ceased since troops and police imposed control Thursday night and the situation appeared to be steadily returning to normal since the rise of Gierek.

Polish television announced Tuesday night that the government had annulled special emergency laws announced Dec. 17 that gave police and

New Crackdowns On Waste Dumping

WASHINGTON (UPI) —President Nixon, in a major crackdown on pollution, issued an order today requiring industries to obtain a federal permit to dump wastes and discharges into U.S. waters.

The chief executice, in an executive order, directed the establishment of a federal permit program under the Refuse Act of 1899 which would bar any firm from discharging pollutants such as chemicals into rivers and streams.

(Nixon's order came one day after a ban on dumping wastes into the ocean outside the Golden Gate. The ban, ordered by the San Francisco Bay Regional Water Quality Control Board — see page 15 — did not provide for permits to dump wastes.)

Nixon said the new program "will enhance the ability of the federal government to enforce water quality standards and provide a major strengthening of our efforts to clean up our nation's water."

Under the rarely enforced 71-year-old law, persons and firms are required to submit to state authorities and the federal government data concerning wastes they plan to dump into navigable waters.

Industrial plants now operating must obtain government permits by July 1. New plants will have to get government consent immediately.

The applications for permits are to be submitted to the Army Corps of Engineers which will work closely with the newly created Environmental Protection Agency as well as other federal and state authorities in determining water quality.

Guidelines on the new program will be printed in the Federal Register in the next day or so and comment will be invited.

Russell E. Train, chairman of the Council on Environmental Quality, said it would take about 45 days for the new regulations to become effective.

In the meantime, violators of water quality standards will be subject to prosecution under the refuse act, he said.

In his statement accompanying the order, Nixon said "implementation of a program of this magnitude will not be

Charles Ruggles Dies At 84

Famed for his wheezing, Casper Milquetoast portrayals, Ruggles appeared in scores of motion pictures in the 30s, 40s and 50s. He also starred in the theater and appeared on radio and television.

But it was his hesitant interpretations of confused little men in films for which he was best known.

Ruggles was admitted to St. John's Hospital in Santa Monica, Calif., in September. A family member said he was a victim of cancer.

Bicyclists Win Major Victories

Marin bicyclists won major victories on two fronts yesterday in their fight for an expanded bike pathy system.

In San Rafael, the Marin County Board of Supervisors approved an agreement under which it would receive a $30,000 state grant to link Sausalito and the Richardson Bay Bridge with a bike path — the last major obstacle blocking a cyclist's ride between Golden Gate Bridge and Sonoma County.

In Tiburon, the city council last night announced that Northwestern Pacific Railroad has agreed to sell one portion of its right-of-way and donate the balance to the city for a bike and pedestrian path — two miles in all.

County and Tiburon officials hailed the agreements as Christmas presents to bike enthusiasts.

The $30,000 grant to the county announced after lengthy negotiation among the county bike enthusiasts and the state Division of Highways, will provide a six-foot-wide paved path alongside the Northwestern Pacific Railroad right-of-way and adjacent to Highway 101.

The state Division of Highways at first resisted plans to place the path closer to the highway, but agreed to provide the $30,000 when propoents argued that the state had blocked pedestrian access between the Richardson Bay Bridge and Sausalito when the freeway was constructed.

Northwestern Pacific has agreed to lease an easement to the county for the bike path for $1,000 annually. The bike path will be fenced from the railroad tracks.

While the $30,000 grant still must be approved by the state highway commission, the board of supervisors was told, Pierre W. Joske, county parks and recreation director, said he thought chances of approval were excellent.

In Tiburon, Mayor Denis T. Rice said that Northwestern Pacific has agreed to sell a small portion of the right-of-way to the city for $100,000 and donate the bal-

Banks Cut Prime Rate Fifth Time

NEW YORK (UPI)—Commercial banks throughout the nation, following the lead of Chase Manhattan Bank, reduced their prime interest rates for the fifth time this year Tuesday and one authority said this could lead to lower mortgage rates by spring.

The trend in business loan rates and in business loan demand "promises lower mortgage rates by the beginning of the spring building season," Everett C. Spelman, president of the Mortgage Bankers Association, said. The White House voiced this hope.

Chase Manhattan started the cutback, the fifth within recent months, announcing early Tuesday it was lowering the rate it charges its most creditworthy corporate borrowers from 7 to3-4 per cent.

The move quickly spread to the West Coast where the Bank

6 Copter Deaths; Sihanouk Arrest

SAIGON (UPI) — The U.S. Command today reported the loss of a helicopter and said six Americans died in the crash. The Cambodian Command announced the arrest of the son of deposed Prince Norodom Sihanouk on a charge of terrorism.

Military spokesmen said a U.S. Navy UH1 Huey helicopter crashed from "unknown causes" in the Mekong Delta on Saturday more than 125 miles southwest of Saigon.

The Command attributed the delay in reporting the crash to the difficulty in locating the wreckage, buried in the Delta mud. There were no survivors.

Communiques from Phnom Penh said South Vietnamese paratroopers killed 26 Viet Cong and North Vietnamese in fighting early today 10 miles outside Kompong Cham, Cambodia's third largest city. It was the biggest battle reported in the past two days in Indochina.

One American was reported killed and two wounded Tuesday in fighting 67 miles northeast of Saigon. The clash involved elements of the U.S. 1st Air Cavalry Division and an unknown-sized Communist unit.

The arrest of Sihanouk's son came after imprisoned terrorists said he had provided money and grenades for terrorist activities. The man arrested was Norodom Ramarith, a former professor at Phnom Penh University of Law. He was the third of Sihanouk's children arrested since the prince was overthrown as Cambodian chief of state last March 18. Prince Sihanouk has established a government in exile in Peking.

Ramarith was taken to military police headquarters.

Last month, Sihanouk's daughter, Botom Bopha, and another son, Norodom Naradhipo, were arrested for what the government of Premier Lon Nol called "involvement in subversive activities."

Inconvenient War Finds Hotel Royale

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Phnom Penh's Hotel Royale — which until now served fine wines and escargots with a dignified disdain of events — finally has bowed to the war.

Tuesday, the waiters exchanged their white coats for fatigues and jungle boots to form a hotel guard, menu prices were hiked by 20 per cent and Cambodian beer was unavailable.

The waiters were only on guard duty four hours a day, alternating with the clerks and cooks, and there were only five M1 carbines to go around, but the guard was installed nevertheless.

The foreign visitors, journalists and diplomats frequenting the Royale —an old French colonial officers' barracks resplendent with swimming pool and dripping with bougainvillea and colonial comfort —still had little to complain about.

Cambodian beer, fast becoming unavailable because of the Communist occupation of the road to Cambodia's only seaport —and brewery —was smartly replaced with American canned beer imported from Saigon.

Pre-war signs in every room warning against desecrating the temples of Angkor Wat —now occupied by North Vietnamese troops —disappeared. In their place were apologetic notes warning of possible police checks.

"There would be" —the management hoped —"No inconvenience to the guests."

CIA Linked To My Lai Massacre

FT. MCPHERSON, Ga. (UPI)— A defense attorney placed the full blame for the alleged My Lai massacre on the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) Tuesday while military hearings resulted in court martials for two more soldiers in the 1968 assault.

Former Georgia Congressman Charles Weltner, representing Sgt. Esequiel Torres, 22, of Brownsville, Tex., won the right to subpoena three alleged CIA agents.

He also got one of the Mexican-American's four counts of premeditated murder reduced to assault, but Torres, and Pvt. Gerald A. Smith, 22, of Chicago, were ordered to stand court martial for allegedly participating in the March 16, 1968 sweep that resulted in death for between 102 and 310 Vietnamese civilians.

Torres was accused of machinegunning to death three civilians and charged with assault in the hanging of a fourth. Smith was charged with the premeditated murder of seven Vietnamese, at least one of them a woman, and of indecent assault upon a Vietnamese woman.

Weltner called the court's approval of subpoenas for the alleged three CIA agents a matter of "great significance."

"We will be able to show the function of the CIA in this case . . . was to set the whole stage for what happened at My Lai," Weltner said during a recess in hearings.

Disclosure of the CIA role at My Lai, said Weltner, would be "very, very valuable, not only in defending Sergeant Torres, but in opening up" how the CIA has operated in Southeast Asia.

Weltner, charging the CIA carried out terrorist activities including "assassinations and kidnapings" prior to the assault at My Lai, submitted testimony from 62 soldiers showing the "shooting, killing, assassination and torture of Vietnamese civilians pursuant to the director of the United States Army."

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Fuel Halt Over

NEW YORK (UPI) — A seven-day strike that left as many as 200,000 persons without heat and hot water ended Tuesday night when 2,800 fuel oil deliverymen and repairmen ratified a two-year contract which will give them $60 in wage and benefit increases.

Members of Teamsters Union Local 553 voted 901 to 415 to approve the contract in three hours of balloting. The contract, offered by the 300-member New York Oil Heating Association, provides $40 in increased wages and $20 in benefits. Drivers will receive $215 a week and repairmen $225 in two steps.

Riot Arrest

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — FBI agents Tuesday arrested Caroline M. Tanner, 22, sought on mob action charges stemming from the Weathermen's "four days of rage" in Chicago in the fall of 1969.

Miss Tanner, formerly of Greensburg, Pa., was arrested on a fugitive warrant. Agents said she changed her appearance "drastically," losing 20 pounds, cutting her hair and dyeing it blonde.

A federal warrant was issued in Chicago April 19, 1970, charging Miss Tanner with fleeing the state of Illinois to avoid prosecution on charges of connection with the Weathermen disorder.

Lunokhod Asleep

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union's Lunokhod moonrover today tucked itself in for a long winter's night, its batteries filled with enough stored sunshine to keep it warm until earth controllers wake it Jan. 7.

Tass, the official Soviet news agency, said ground control closed the lid Tuesday on the pot-shaped moon car as the sun dropped toward the horizon at the end of a two-week lunar day. The car began activating an internal air conditioning system, powered by solar energy stored up before sunset.

Struck Twice

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope Paul's physician said today the 73-year-old pontiff was struck twice last month when a Bolivian painter tried to assassinate him during his visit to Manila.

The physician, Dr. Mario Fontana, would not elaborate but Manila newspapers said at the time the Pope was actually hit or cut during the knife attack.

One newspaper said the blade of Mendoza's weapon, a Malay dagger, actually struck the Pope's stiff clerical collar.

"The Pope was struck twice," Fontana said, "But I am not in a position to say how or by whom."

Bayh told a press conference Tuesday he has received support for the race from the state party chairman of an unidentified large industrial state, and from a defeated gubernatorial candidate, also unidentified.

Tate Trial Bar To Manson Defendants

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—The three women defendants were ordered barred from further sessions of the Tate murder trial today after a wild scene before the jury in which one struggled with the state prosecutor.

Superior Court Judge Charles H. Older ruled that Leslie Van Houten, Susan Atkins and Patricia Krenwinkel be kept in an antechamber and listen to the proceedings by loudspeaker until the case goes to the jury —probably the first week in January.

Deputy District Attorney Vincent Bugliosi was summing up the state's case against Charles Manson and the three female codefendants Tuesday when Miss Van Houten, 20, interruped.

"Ladies and gentlemen, I would like to put on a defense..." she began.

Bugliosi grabbed her by the arm and said, "Wait a minute, wait a minute." Older ordered the girl taken from the room by bailiffs but she had no sooner been escorted out than Susan Atkins began haranguing the jury about a state witness taking LSD.

The judge ordered her removed, also, but as she went past Bugliosi at a lectern she reached over and crumpled up his notes on yellow legal pads. Bugliosi grabbed her hand with his left hand and swung in her direction with his right.

"You bitch," he said.

The young woman tried to kick him and fell against a table. Moments after she had been taken out, Patricia Krenwinkel rose and turned to the newsmen in the back of the room, calling out: "You people in your greed are trying to make this trial into your profits." She was led out screaming and dragging her feet.

Bugliosi was expected to conclude his summation Wednesday afternoon. The trial will be in recess Thursday until Monday when the defense will make final statements.

Alleged Hijacker Returns To U.S.

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Avin L. Glatowski, 21, one of two men accused of hijacking an American munitions ship bound for Thailand nine months ago, was returned here during the weekend and booked on federal charges of mutiny and piracy.

Glatowski, Long Beach, Calif., had asked for political asylum in Cambodia following seizure of the ship but turned himself over to the American embassy last Tuesday.

He said he surrendered to American officials because he feared harassment and "possible execution" by guards assigned to him by the Cambodian government.

Man, Nature Jar Holiday In Italy

ROME (UPI) — Snow, rain, an electricity strike and traffic jams combined today to make the Christmas season uncomfortable for 54 million Italians.

More than 120,000 electricity workers, demanding government ratification of their nine-mont-old contract, have been striking for four hours at the end of each shift since Tuesday. The series of strikes was scheduled to continue until next Monday.

The strikes and the electrical workers' refusal to answer breakdown calls left millions of homes, factories, offices and stores without light or heat for hours and trapped persons in halted elevators.

Stores and bars switched off millions of Christmas lights in response to a government appeal to conserve power.

The strike stopped traffic signals in some parts of Rome, making the usual pre-Christmas traffic jams worse.

The electricity strike coincided with a cold wave that froze water in some of Rome's famed fountains. Temperatures dropped to 22 degrees in Rome.

Rome and much of the south had rain. Windstorms swept Tuscany and whipped up the seas off Sardinia.

Congress Rests For The Holidays

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Weary senators and representatives, home for Christmas, hope the holiday spirit and a brief vacation might resolve all their problems. There was some indication the legislative logjam was breaking.

Congress shut down Tuesday night for the Christmas weekend, with the Senate returning next Monday and the House, which has most of its work done, the following day. Before the lawmakers left they killed off any chance there would be a Social Security increase, trade legislation or action on welfare reform this year.

—A filibuster against funding of the Supersonic Transport plane SST, a debate which Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield called a problem "almost impossible to solve." It is considered the major bottleneck to final adjournament.

—A $66.6 billion compromise defense appropriations bill, already approved by the House, which contains language diluting a no-loophole ban against the introduction of U. S. troops into Cambodia. That ban was written into a bill already sent to the White House. The Senate will seek to reject the compromise, ask for new negotiations with the House, and try to strike the language. The House might be adamant.

—A $2.5 billion foreign aid appropriations bill compromise, rejected Tuesday by the Senate because it contains $200 million in military credit sales which have not been approved.

—A $1.8 billion supplemental appropriations bill, which includes actual funds to carry out President Nixon's aid to Cambodia, Israel, and several other nations.

—A compromise food stamp program. Sen. George S. McGovern, D-S.D., has asked the Senate to reject the measure because it denies food stamps where the head of a family refused to take a job.

Before departing for Christmas, Congress managed to solve, one way or another, some of its most vexing problems, renewing hopes it could adjourn before Jan. 3 when, under the Constitution, the 91st Congress expires.

Chairman Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., of the House Ways and Means Committee, and Rep. John W. Byrnes, R-Wis., issued a joint statement which killed all prospects for Social Security, welfare, trade, and catastrophic illness insurance legislation.

The Senate, however, broke through one major barrier when it approved, 41 to 20, legislation authorizing Nixon's long-range plans of economic aid to Cambodia, starting with $255 million.

Israel To Decide On Peace Talks

JERUSALEM (UPI)—If Israel returns to Middle East peace talks, Premier Golda Meir has rejected in advance any settlement with the Arabs short of a binding peace treaty laying down new secure, agreed and recognized borders.

Mrs. Meir spelled out Israel's stand in a somber and stern appraisal Tuesday at a Jerusalem press luncheon on the prospects for a resumption of talks and the likelihood that peace might result.

Mrs. Meir said Israel has completed its dialogue with the United States to obtain "clarifications" of U.S. Middle East policy before deciding whether to return to talks under U.N. mediator Gunnar V. Jarring.

"To the best of our understanding, this process of question and answer has ended and now the government has reached the most idfficult moment . . . now we must take the risks and consider whether it is possible or impossible to go to the talks," she said.

6 Copter Deaths; Sihanouk Arrest

SAIGON (UPI) — The U.S. Command today reported the loss of a helicopter and said six Americans died in the crash. The Cambodian Command announced the arrest of the son of deposed Prince Norodom Sihanouk on a charge of terrorism.

Military spokesmen said a U.S. Navy UH1 Huey helicopter crashed from "unknown causes" in the Mekong Delta on Saturday more than 125 miles southwest of Saigon.

The Command attributed the delay in reporting the crash to the difficulty in locating the wreckage, buried in the Delta mud. There were no survivors.

Communiques from Phnom Penh said South Vietnamese paratroopers killed 26 Viet Cong and North Vietnamese in fighting early today 10 miles outside Kompong Cham, Cambodia's third largest city. It was the biggest battle reported in the past two days in Indochina.

One American was reported killed and two wounded Tuesday in fighting 67 miles northeast of Saigon. The clash involved elements of the U.S. 1st Air Cavalry Division and an unknown-sized Communist unit.

The arrest of Sihanouk's son came after imprisoned terrorists said he had provided money and grenades for terrorist activities. The man arrested was Norodom Ramarith, a former professor at Phnom Penh University of Law. He was the third of Sihanouk's children arrested since the prince was overthrown as Cambodian chief of state last March 18. Prince Sihanouk has established a government in exile in Peking.

Ramarith was taken to military police headquarters.

Last month, Sihanouk's daughter, Botom Bopha, and another son, Norodom Naradhipo, were arrested for what the government of Premier Lon Nol called "involvement in subversive activities."

Inconvenient War Finds Hotel Royale

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Phnom Penh's Hotel Royale — which until now served fine wines and escargots with a dignified disdain of events — finally has bowed to the war.

Tuesday, the waiters exchanged their white coats for fatigues and jungle boots to form a hotel guard, menu prices were hiked by 20 per cent and Cambodian beer was unavailable.

The waiters were only on guard duty four hours a day, alternating with the clerks and cooks, and there were only five M1 carbines to go around, but the guard was installed nevertheless.

County Zeroes In On Welfare Cases

By WAT TAKESHITA

Forty-four Marin families on welfare (Aid To Families With Dependent Children) have earnings in excess of $6,000 per year, the county director of public social services reported yesterday.

Director Betty L. Presley told the Marin County Board of Supervisors that the figures are based on reports received through Monday of this week and are not complete. (Other board of supervisor stories, page 28.)

The report shows 34 families earning between $6,000 and $7,200 per year; six between $7,200 and $8,400 per year; two earning between $8,400 and $8,700; one drawing between $8,700 and $9,000; and one grossing between $9,300 and $9,600 per year.

In AFDC cases with stepfathers as the wage earner, the total earnings in some cases exceed $10,000 per year because the law requires a stepfather to support his wife but not his stepchildren, said Miss Presley.

In the case of working mothers, an earned income exemption (first $30 plus one-third of the balance) is knocked off the gross as an incentive for the wage-earner to keep working and improving her position.

As she has pointed out in the past, Miss Presley repeated that this earned income exemption with no ceiling is what keeps wage earners in the $8,000 and $9,000 category on welfare.

Unless the federal laws are changed and a ceiling placed on income beyond which no public aid is allowed, welfare cases with high earnings will continue to crop up, she pointed out.

Among cases cited by Miss Presley were these:

A stepfather is grossing $868 per month, or $10,416 per year. He supports his wife, but his wife's child (who is not his responsibility) gets $72 per month in AFDC aid.

Another stepfather is grossing $795 per month, and his wife's two children draw $172 per month in AFDC aid.

"That comes to $11,604 per year," noted Supervisor Peter R. Arrigoni. "What is the law regarding the stepfather?"

County Counsel Douglas J. Maloney said that previously, the law said a stepfather was to help provide for the stepchildren. However, that law was changed, and now the stepfather is not required to support the stepchildren. The county has to prove that he is providing support for the children, Maloney explained.

The county counsel said Marin and Alameda County are challenging some of the loopholes in court. "If you want to do more, we'd have to ask Congress to put limits on the law or get the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to amend their regulations. In the final analysis, it will take legislation to button it up once and for all."

Supervisor William A. Gnoss suggested that the supervisors talk to Assemblyman William T. Bagley and Senator-elect Peter H. Behr to see what they can do in Sacramento.

"I'd like to take this up in a couple of weeks with some specifics on legislation," said Arrigoni.

Supervisors asked the county counsel to see when Bagley and Behr can sit down with the supervisors for a discussion on welfare law amendments.

In most welfare fraud cases, where recipients are suspected of failing to report income, Maloney said he finds that filing a civil suit is a waste of time because even if the county wins, the family has no assets from which to recover.

The best way to discourage welfare fraud is a speedy criminal action, said Maloney.

"I get a sort of helpless feeling," said Supervisor Michael Wornum.

On a motion by Arrigoni, the Supervisors asked Dist. Atty. Bruce B. Bales to give priority to welfare fraud prosecution.

Baby Dies In Crib At Santa Rosa

A 4-month-old Rohnert Park boy was pronounced dead yesterday at a Santa Rosa hospital after having apparently suffocated in his crib.

Sonoma County Coroner Andrew Johansen said Gary Michael Foster, 7471 Bridgit Drive, had been suffering from a cold and had vomited yesterday evening. His parents discovered he had stopped breathing at 7 p.m.

His father, Gary Foster, 23, attempted mouth-to-mouth resuscitation as did Rohnert Park safety officers, but did not succeed. An autopsy was scheduled.

Foster is stationed at the Two Rock Ranch Army Station, Petaluma.

Eisenhowers At Camp David

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Julie and David Eisenhower celebrated their second wedding anniversary yesterday in the privacy of Camp David, the presidential retreat in Maryland.

President Nixon's daughter and son-in-law flew by helicopter to the hideaway Sunday afternoon after church services, and will remain there until Christmas eve.

Seat Belts For Trains Proposed

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The National Transportation Safety Board has recommended that the Federal Railroad Administration explore whether seat belts should be used in passenger trains.

It made the recommendation as a result of its report on an Aug. 20, 1969, head-on crash of two commuter trains near Darien, Conn. The engineer and one passenger were killed, and 40 others were injured, the board said, mostly because of "the lack of restraining devices."

Undergrounding For Ridge Set

Utility lines will be undergrounded along the Ridge Avenue off Panoramic Highway near Muir Woods.

At the request of 11 property owners along Ridge Avenue, the Marin County Board of Supervisors yesterday set up an underground utility district. The district extends about 1,200 feet along Ridge Avenue.

Pacific Gas and Electric Co. estimated the cost of undergrounding at $5,000. Property owners will pay half, and PG&E the other half.

Denial To Dismissing Union Case

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — A U.S. District Court judge yesterday denied motions by defense attorneys to throw out civil and criminal contempt complaints against their union clients accused of a secondary boycott of Independent-Journal advertisers.

Judge William T. Sweigert ruled the National Labor Relations Board, which brought the complaints, had presented sufficient evidence during a seven-week-old hearing to compel the unions to present a defense.

The motions, in behalf of San Francisco Typographical Union 21, International Longshoremen's Local 10 of San Francisco and Teamster Locals 70 of Oakland and 85 of San Francisco, were made at the conclusion of the NLRB's case.

During the seven weeks, the NLRB, through a stream of witnesses and documents, sought to show that the unions violated an earlier order by Judge Sweigert against secondary boycott activity and are thus guilty of civil and criminal contempt.

The contempt complaints grew out of picketing of Marin stores in October.

W. David Smullin, an NLRB attorney, said the defense was to notify Judge Sweigert today whether it wished to present a defense to the complaints.

No Contest Plea To Felony Count

I-J Special Report

SANTA ROSA — Lewis E. Meyers, 59, of Petaluma, pleaded no contest yesterday in Sonoma County Superior Court to a charge of felony drunk driving.

Judge Kenneth E. Eymann requested a probation department report be submitted on Jan. 5. Meyers was arrested Nov. 17 after Petaluma police said his car struck Dennis Stankalis, 17, of 26 Huntington Drive, Petaluma, severing both legs.

Meyers is being held in the Sonoma County Jail in lieu of $6,000 bail.

Defense Rests In Feb. 14 Riot Case

I-J Special Report

FAIRFIELD — The defense has rested its case in the marathon trial of seven men arrested during the violent Valentine's Day rally outside the Independent-Journal.

Judge William E. Jensen instructed the jury to return to Solano Superior Court this afternoon to hear "any loose ends in evidence" before taking a four-day Christmas recess.

The prosecutor, Marin County Deputy Atty. Joshua W. Thomas said yesterday he wanted to check trial transcripts and might call one last witness today.

In the 10 weeks of trial, the jury has listened to 39 witnesses — 20 for the people and 19 for the defense — and been presented with 191 pieces of evidence ranging from two slingshots through a picket sign and scores of photographs of the Feb. 14 demonstration against the I-J.

The final defense presentation yesterday was a brief television film showing the arrest of John J. DeMartini, 47, of Mill Valley, vice president of San Francisco International Typographical Union 21. Local 21 struck the I-J Jan. 7.

The film showed DeMartini struggling with police who were trying to clear Julia Street on the afternoon of Feb. 14. During the few seconds the KPIX television photographer caught the action, DeMartini grappled with two officers. More police joined the fray. Club flashed from the struggling mass, sharply prodding at the union man.

The last of the seven defendants took the stand earlier yesterday. Joe Earl Reese, 32, of Hayward, said he arrived after 9 a.m. at the mass rally that Bay Area unions had called against the I-J.

Through an interpreter, the deaf-mute Reese described the confrontations in Julia Street. He denied seeing any objects thrown at police. He testified that when police formed a line to clear the street, "I think I did hesitate, but I was frozen in my tracks — by fear."

He demonstrated how he grabbed his picket sign stick by the middle, swinging its butt end in short arcs before him, "to protect myself." Thomas and defense attorney Robert D. Carrow argued whether he was "jabbing" with the stick. Judge Jensen said, "The jury saw his action; it will decide."

Reese denied knocking down California Highway Patrol Officer John Campion or striking him with his stick. He testified "someone else pushed Campion down."

Reese, a printer for the San Francisco Chronicle, complained that he was clubbed on the back by police, and handcuffed so tightly "that my fingernails turned blue."

The other defendants, whose cases were presented earlier, included James S. Brooke, 36, Alvis D. Bailey, 43, and Nimmes H. Shelton, 41, all of San Francisco; Charles P. Vance, 56, of South San Francisco and Terry W. Lansing, 20, of Oakland. The 34 charges against the seven men range from participating in a riot through possession of slingshots and blackjacks.

Joan Baez Says Husband Being 'Kicked Out'

PALO ALTO, Calif. (SPI) Folksinger Joan Baez says her husband, convicted draft resister David Harris, is being "kicked out" of prison rather than paroled.

Harris was sentenced July 16, 1969 to a three-year term for refusing induction, but the board of Parole Monday announced he would be released March 15 at La Tuna, Tex.

Miss Baez said Tuesday that the action "is proof of the fact that parole has nothing to do with good behavior in prison."

She said her husband had been involved "in four strikes and written up 28 times for nonos."

"I think he's being kicked out rather than paroled," she said.

Suicide Group Asks Space In Health Building

Marin Suicide Prevention will ask for use of part of the old county health department building in San Rafael as a telephone crisis center.

Kay Lyons, resident of the Suicide Prevention Board, sent a letter to the county board of supervisors, asking for use of the county facility at Fourfth Street and Grand Avenue.

"We have organized a corps of volunteers and obtained the acceptance of professionals in the community, using only our own time and resources," said Mrs. Lyons. "Lack of funding is preventing us at this time from obtaining a center facility and is leaving Marin residents without that 24-hour crisis phone service."

Marin Suicide Prevention hopes to start a round-the-clock telephone service, manned by trained volunteers, inJanuary or February.

Controversial Plan For Streets Backed

The San Rafael Planning Commission recommended last night that the city council adopt a long-shelved plan for improving the flow of downtown traffic.

The plan, offered to the city in June 1969 by D. Jackson Faustman, a Sacramento traffic consultant, envisions converting several downtown streets to one-way, as well as building an underground parking garage at the courthouse square.

Under the plan, two major east-west streets still two-way, Fourth Street and Fifth Avenue, would become one-way.

In making its unanimous recommendation, the commission suggested appropriating adequate funds in the event one-way movement on Fourth and Fifth didn't work out and they had to be changed back.

The plan, also proposing a new street in the G Street area to link Fifth and Fourth, would cost about $275,000 to implement, according to current city public works estimates.

Faustman's proposal had been pigeonholed by the council last year after merchants objected at a public hearing. But the council, acting on a recommendation by the city's traffic committee, has set another public hearing on the plan for Feb. 1.

Planning Commissioner Jorgen V. Lunding said last night that the public works department should look toward installing a "fully computerized-automatic traffic signal system for the entire downtown area."

The San Rafael Planning Commission also:

SUBDIVISION — Approved a lot split for Kenneth Solvason for 271 and 273 Locust Avenue with the provision that all utilities be undergrounded.

TRAILER — Approved the use of trailer for a car rental and sales lot at 170 Gary Place for Jack Brigham.

SIGN — Approved a free standing sign for San Rafael Auto Parts at 24 Ritter Street with the provision that the signs on the building be painted out. This is subject to review by the commission with 60 days after a sign ordinance is adopted.

POSTPONED — Postponed until its Jan. 12 meeting consideration of plans for an office building at 814 Fifth Avenue for Robert Greene and a 13-unit apartment building at 310 Bayview Street for Horst Hanf and Kenneth Levy.

REVERSION — Approved reversion from multiple residential to acreage lots at 180 Larkspur Street and 110 Novato Street for American Savings and Loan Association because the multiple residential buildings planned there had not been constructed.

ADJOURNED — Adjourned until 7:30 p.m. Jan. 5 for a public hearing on the proposed sign ordinance.

County Zeroes In On Welfare Cases

By WAT TAKESHITA

Forty-four Marin families on welfare (Aid To Families With Dependent Children) have earnings in excess of $6,000 per year, the county director of public social services reported yesterday.

Director Betty L. Presley told the Marin County Board of Supervisors that the figures are based on reports received through Monday of this week and are not complete. (Other board of supervisor stories, page 28.)

The report shows 34 families earning between $6,000 and $7,200 per year; six between $7,200 and $8,400 per year; two earning between $8,400 and $8,700; one drawing between $8,700 and $9,000; and one grossing between $9,300 and $9,600 per year.

In AFDC cases with stepfathers as the wage earner, the total earnings in some cases exceed $10,000 per year because the law requires a stepfather to support his wife but not his stepchildren, said Miss Presley.

In the case of working mothers, an earned income exemption (first $30 plus one-third of the balance) is knocked off the gross as an incentive for the wage-earner to keep working and improving her position.

As she has pointed out in the past, Miss Presley repeated that this earned income exemption with no ceiling is what keeps wage earners in the $8,000 and $9,000 category on welfare.

Unless the federal laws are changed and a ceiling placed on income beyond which no public aid is allowed, welfare cases with high earnings will continue to crop up, she pointed out.

Among cases cited by Miss Presley were these:

A stepfather is grossing $868 per month, or $10,416 per year. He supports his wife, but his wife's child (who is not his responsibility) gets $72 per month in AFDC aid.

Another stepfather is grossing $795 per month, and his wife's two children draw $172 per month in AFDC aid.

"That comes to $11,604 per year," noted Supervisor Peter R. Arrigoni. "What is the law regarding the stepfather?"

County Counsel Douglas J. Maloney said that previously, the law said a stepfather was to help provide for the stepchildren. However, that law was changed, and now the stepfather is not required to support the stepchildren. The county has to prove that he is providing support for the children, Maloney explained.

The county counsel said Marin and Alameda County are challenging some of the loopholes in court. "If you want to do more, we'd have to ask Congress to put limits on the law or get the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to amend their regulations. In the final analysis, it will take legislation to button it up once and for all."

Supervisor William A. Gnoss suggested that the supervisors talk to Assemblyman William T. Bagley and Senator-elect Peter H. Behr to see what they can do in Sacramento.

"I'd like to take this up in a couple of weeks with some specifics on legislation," said Arrigoni.

Supervisors asked the county counsel to see when Bagley and Behr can sit down with the supervisors for a discussion on welfare law amendments.

In most welfare fraud cases, where recipients are suspected of failing to report income, Maloney said he finds that filing a civil suit is a waste of time because even if the county wins, the family has no assets from which to recover.

The best way to discourage welfare fraud is a speedy criminal action, said Maloney.

"I get a sort of helpless feeling," said Supervisor Michael Wornum.

On a motion by Arrigoni, the Supervisors asked Dist. Atty. Bruce B. Bales to give priority to welfare fraud prosecution.

Baby Dies In Crib At Santa Rosa

A 4-month-old Rohnert Park boy was pronounced dead yesterday at a Santa Rosa hospital after having apparently suffocated in his crib.

Sonoma County Coroner Andrew Johansen said Gary Michael Foster, 7471 Bridgit Drive, had been suffering from a cold and had vomited yesterday evening. His parents discovered he had stopped breathing at 7 p.m.

His father, Gary Foster, 23, attempted mouth-to-mouth resuscitation as did Rohnert Park safety officers, but did not succeed. An autopsy was scheduled.

Foster is stationed at the Two Rock Ranch Army Station, Petaluma.

Eisenhowers At Camp David

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Julie and David Eisenhower celebrated their second wedding anniversary yesterday in the privacy of Camp David, the presidential retreat in Maryland.

President Nixon's daughter and son-in-law flew by helicopter to the hideaway Sunday afternoon after church services, and will remain there until Christmas eve.

Seat Belts For Trains Proposed

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The National Transportation Safety Board has recommended that the Federal Railroad Administration explore whether seat belts should be used in passenger trains.

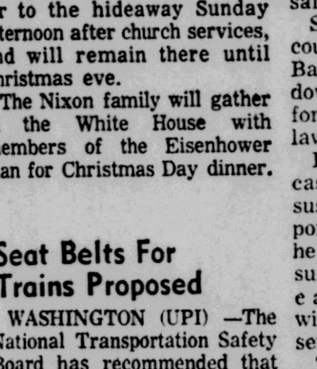
It made the recommendation as a result of its report on an Aug. 20, 1969, head-on crash of two commuter trains near Darien, Conn. The engineer and one passenger were killed, and 40 others were injured, the board said, mostly because of "the lack of restraining devices."

Undergrounding For Ridge Set

Utility lines will be undergrounded along the Ridge Avenue off Panoramic Highway near Muir Woods.

At the request of 11 property owners along Ridge Avenue, the Marin County Board of Supervisors yesterday set up an underground utility district. The district extends about 1,200 feet along Ridge Avenue.

Pacific Gas and Electric Co. estimated the cost of undergrounding at $5,000. Property owners will pay half, and PG&E the other half.



Denial To Dismissing Union Case

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — A U.S. District Court judge yesterday denied motions by defense attorneys to throw out civil and criminal contempt complaints against their union clients accused of a secondary boycott of Independent-Journal advertisers.

Judge William T. Sweigert ruled the National Labor Relations Board, which brought the complaints, had presented sufficient evidence during a seven-week-old hearing to compel the unions to present a defense.

The motions, in behalf of San Francisco Typographical Union 21, International Longshoremen's Local 10 of San Francisco and Teamster Locals 70 of Oakland and 85 of San Francisco, were made at the conclusion of the NLRB's case.

During the seven weeks, the NLRB, through a stream of witnesses and documents, sought to show that the unions violated an earler order by Judge Sweigert against secondary boycott activity and are thus guilty of civil and criminal contempt.

The contempt complaints grew out of picketing of Marin stores in October.

W. David Smullin, an NLRB attorney, said the defense was to notify Judge Sweigert today whether it wished to present a defense to the complaints.

No Contest Plea To Felony Count

I-J Special Report

SANTA ROSA — Lewis E. Meyers, 59, of Petaluma, pleaded no contest yesterday in Sonoma County Superior Court to a charge of felony drunk driving.

Judge Kenneth E. Eymann requested a probation department report be submitted on Jan. 5. Meyers was arrested Nov. 17 after Petaluma police said his car struck Dennis Stankalis, 17, of 26 Huntington Drive, Petaluma, severing both legs.

Meyers is being held in the Sonoma County Jail in lieu of $6,000 bail.

Defense Rests In Feb. 14 Riot Case

I-J Special Report

FAIRFIELD — The defense has rested its case in the marathon trial of seven men arrested during the violent Valentine's Day rally outside the Independent-Journal.

Judge William E. Jensen instructed the jury to return to Solano Superior Court this afternoon to hear "any loose ends in evidence" before taking a four-day Christmas recess.

The prosecutor, Marin County Deputy Atty. Joshua W. Thomas said yesterday he wanted to check trial transcripts and might call one last witness today.

In the 10 weeks of trial, the jury has listened to 39 witnesses — 20 for the people and 19 for the defense — and been presented with 191 pieces of evidence ranging from two slingshots through a picket sign and scores of photographs of the Feb. 14 demonstration against the I-J.

The final defense presentation yesterday was a brief television film showing the arrest of John J. DeMartini, 47, of Mill Valley, vice president of San Francisco International Typographical Union 21. Local 21 struck the I-J Jan. 7.

The film showed DeMartini struggling with police who were trying to clear Julia Street on the afternoon of Feb. 14. During the few seconds the KPIX television photographer caught the action, DeMartini grappled with two officers. More police joined the fray. Club flashed from the struggling mass, sharply prodding at the union man.

The last of the seven defendants took the stand earlier yesterday. Joe Earl Reese, 32, of Hayward, said he arrived after 9 a.m. at the mass rally that Bay Area unions had called against the I-J.

Through an interpreter, the deaf-mute Reese described the confrontations in Julia Street. He denied seeing any objects thrown at police. He testified that when police formed a line to clear the street, "I think I did hesitate, but I was frozen in my tracks — by fear."

He demonstrated how he grabbed his picket sign stick by the middle, swinging its butt end in short arcs before him, "to protect myself." Thomas and defense attorney Robert D. Carrow argued whether he was "jabbing" with the stick. Judge Jensen said, "The jury saw his action; it will decide."

Reese denied knocking down California Highway Patrol Officer John Campion or striking him with his stick. He testified "someone else pushed Campion down."

Reese, a printer for the San Francisco Chronicle, complained that he was clubbed on the back by police, and handcuffed so tightly "that my fingernails turned blue."

The other defendants, whose cases were presented earlier, included James S. Brooke, 36, Alvis D. Bailey, 43, and Nimmes H. Shelton, 41, all of San Francisco; Charles P. Vance, 56, of South San Francisco and Terry W. Lansing, 20, of Oakland. The 34 charges against the seven men range from participating in a riot through possession of slingshots and blackjacks.

Suicide Group Asks Space In Health Building

Marin Suicide Prevention will ask for use of part of the old county health department building in San Rafael as a telephone crisis center.

Kay Lyons, resident of the Suicide Prevention Board, sent a letter to the county board of supervisors, asking for use of the county facility at Fourfth Street and Grand Avenue.

"We have organized a corps of volunteers and obtained the acceptance of professionals in the community, using only our own time and resources," said Mrs. Lyons. "Lack of funding is preventing us at this time from obtaining a center facility and is leaving Marin residents without that 24-hour crisis phone service."

Marin Suicide Prevention hopes to start a round-the-clock telephone service, manned by trained volunteers, inJanuary or February.

Controversial Plan For Streets Backed

The San Rafael Planning Commission recommended last night that the city council adopt a long-shelved plan for improving the flow of downtown traffic.

The plan, offered to the city in June 1969 by D. Jackson Faustman, a Sacramento traffic consultant, envisions converting several downtown streets to one-way, as well as building an underground parking garage at the courthouse square.

Under the plan, two major east-west streets still two-way, Fourth Street and Fifth Avenue, would become one-way.

In making its unanimous recommendation, the commission suggested appropriating adequate funds in the event one-way movement on Fourth and Fifth didn't work out and they had to be changed back.

The plan, also proposing a new street in the G Street area to link Fifth and Fourth, would cost about $275,000 to implement, according to current city public works estimates.

Faustman's proposal had been pigeonholed by the council last year after merchants objected at a public hearing. But the council, acting on a recommendation by the city's traffic committee, has set another public hearing on the plan for Feb. 1.

Planning Commissioner Jorgen V. Lunding said last night that the public works department should look toward installing a "fully computerized-automatic traffic signal system for the entire downtown area."

The San Rafael Planning Commission also:

SUBDIVISION — Approved a lot split for Kenneth Solvason for 271 and 273 Locust Avenue with the provision that all utilities be undergrounded.

TRAILER — Approved the use of trailer for a car rental and sales lot at 170 Gary Place for Jack Brigham.

SIGN — Approved a free standing sign for San Rafael Auto Parts at 24 Ritter Street with the provision that the signs on the building be painted out. This is subject to review by the commission with 60 days after a sign ordinance is adopted.

POSTPONED — Postponed until its Jan. 12 meeting consideration of plans for an office building at 814 Fifth Avenue for Robert Greene and a 13-unit apartment building at 310 Bayview Street for Horst Hanf and Kenneth Levy.

REVERSION — Approved reversion from multiple residential to acreage lots at 180 Larkspur Street and 110 Novato Street for American Savings and Loan Association because the multiple residential buildings planned there had not been constructed.

ADJOURNED — Adjourned until 7:30 p.m. Jan. 5 for a public hearing on the proposed sign ordinance.

CLENCHED FIST SALUTE — Black militant Angela Y. flight, and then only to ask for cigarettes or books from a large box of reading material which she brought with her.

The plane was rented from the Air National Guard for $3,500, Bales said, explaining it was the cheapest mode of transportation the state could find.

It was flown by a five-man crew, and Miss Davis was guarded by five sheriff's officers, two women deputies and two investigators.

Once in the jail, Miss Davis was booked in the usual manner, fingerprinted and had her picture taken. She then was allowed to make two phone calls, the first of which she used to call collect to her mother in Alabama.

Later in the afternoon, she was visited by San Francisco attorney Terrence Hallinan, who said he did not know whether he would represent her.

Through Hallinan, she asked jailers for a toothbrush and toothpaste and a "natural" comb. Those requests were granted, he said.

She and a young woman serving a jail sentence for sex perversion and attacking a deputy sheriff were the only inmates last night on the womens section. They were in separate cells, according to jailers.

Through Miss Burnham, Miss Davis complained today of being in isolation, but jailers said she was being treated like any other prisoner. She was served spaghetti for dinner.

Yesterday, supporters of Miss Davis, their numbers estimated variously from 100 to 300 persons, rallied in San Francisco's Civic Center Plaza to protest her arrest and the accusations against her.

A Christmas Day vigil is planned by her sympathisers for Friday outside the Marin County Jail where she is imprisoned. Among them is expected to be her mother.

At 10:44 a.m. today, the sheriff's department announced it had just received a telephone threat that a bomb would go off at the Hall of Justice at noon.

The Hall of Justice and the Civic Center's administration wing were then evacuated, except for Miss Davis, other prisoners and their guards at the county jail.

In addition to being searched upon entering the building, persons entering the courtroom were pat-searched again and ordered to walk through a metal detector. The area in the corridor adjacent to the courtroom was roped off and heavily guarded, and in addition to the plainclothesmen in the courtroom, there were seven deputy sheriffs and two matrons.

Miss Davis was brought into the courtroom through a private corridor used only for bringing prisoners from the jail, which is two floors above.

Miss Davis spent last night in the women's section of the jail, where she was whisked yesterday afternoon after a highly guarded and secret flight across the United States.

The trip from McGuire Air Force Base in New Jersey took 12 hours aboard an old propellor plane rented by state authorities from the Air National Guard. Miss Davis was quiet and cooperative during the flight, those guarding her said.

When she reached the Hall of Justice, Miss Davis raised her handcuffed hands in a salute in answer to cries from a few supporters. She called out clearly "Power to the People."

Waiting to greet her when she arrived at 3 p.m. were scores of reporters, photographers and a handful of young militants. She rode from Hamilton Air Force Base in an unmarked car, guarded by four other cars, sitting in the back seat between Undersheriff Sidney Stinson and Deputy Evelyn Gosser.

Mrs. Gosser, who had accompanied Miss Davis on the plane, said that she spoke rarely during the long of America, largest in the nation, lowered its rates. The National City Bank of Minneapolis went even further, reducing its rate to 6¼ per cent.

Rep. Wright Patman, D-Tex., chairman of the House Banking Committee, said he still wants the rates, which have been as high as 8 1-2 per cent this year, reduced to 6 per cent. Some banking authorities said this might happen because current business loan demand has been light and has failed to respond to the usual end-of-the-year upturn.

The consumer will benefit from the prime rate cut only indirectly because they borrow from different markets to pay for homes, appliances and other durables.

Consumer loan rates have eased a bit within past weeks, but not on the scale of the prime rates. The Bank of America and Wells Fargo lowered their consumer rates a half per cent early this month and many banks in New York and elsewhere followed suit.

BIKES

ance of the strip to the city.

In exchange, Rice said, the city will drop its pending condemnation suit against Northwestern Pacific. The suit had been scheduled to go to Marin Superior Court in February.

The 60-foot-wide right-of-way which the city has acquired runs from the Reed Ranch Road-Blackie's pasture area for two miles to Tiburon Boulevard near Mar West Street. The railroad yards in downtown Tiburon are not included in the land transfer.

The terms of the agreement are structured to fit the railroad's desire for a tax loss in 1970. With the city paying $1 a square foot for 100,000 square feet of land in the Blackie's pasture area, Northwestern Pacific can write off the gift portion of the property as a business loss, applying the unit price to the entire right-of-way.

Under the agreement, the city will pay $50,000 to the railroad before Dec. 31 and the balance before Dec. 31, 1971. The first installment will come from Tiburon's $85,000 land acquisition fund and the rest from a similar fund in the 1971-72 budget. No interest will be charged.

The council met only briefly last night to approve two resolutions unanimously, one opening escrow on the land and the other appropriating the first payment.

Councilman Albert H. Sennett thanked those who helped to acquire the property, including fellow Councilman Branwell D. Fanning, who was mayor during much of the negotiations for the land.

He also recognized the efforts of resident Bonnie Raisin, who was in the sparse audience last night, and Larry E. Hoyt, Northwestern Pacific vice president. Sennett said he hoped the "good relationship" the city has with the railroad through Hoyt will continue.

Fanning pointed out that, although the purchase of the right-of-way is assured, the city does not have the $60,000 said to be needed to pave the pathway, landscape it, provide parks along its length and build crossings over Tiburon Boulevard.

"We've had offers of assistance over the years from the city of Belvedere and many individuals," he said, "and now that we have the land I hope they keep their wallets open."

An application now pending before the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development would, if approved, provide half of the cost of buying the right-of-way and improving it.

Diplomatic observers said the Szczecin workers were the only ones to win concession from the authorities. Deputy Premier Stanislaw Kociolek virtually dismissed demands for a 20 per cent pay increase for shipyard workers in Gdansk and Gdynia.

indirectly acknowledged recipt of a prisoner list from Hanoi by dropping its persistent demand for such a list in the U.S. statement.

Thuy alluded to the current Christmas season in his statement, and then said:

"The delegation of the Democratic Republic of (North) Vietnam, on this occasion, calls upon the Nixon administration to agree to the withdrawal from South Vietnam of all American troops and those of the other foreign countries before June 30, 1971, as the (Viet Cong's) provisional revolutionary government has proposed, in order to obtain an immediate cease-fire between the popular liberation armed forces of South Vietnam and the troops and military personnel of the United States and of the other foreign countries of the American camp, and in order to permit the parties to enter into immediate discussions on the question of guarantees for safety for the withdrawal of troops and military personnel in question and on the question of liberating captured military men.

"Moreover, the Nixon administration must immediately cease all acts threatening the sovereignty and the security of the Democratic Republic of (North) Vietnam. (Hanoi's term for reconnaissance flights.)

"If the government of the United States acts in this direction, the parties could equally enter into immediate discussion on the total cessation of the cruel war which is going on in Vietnam, and on the question of respect for the fundamental national rights and the right to self-determination of the Vietnamese people."

Bruce made no mention today of the prisoner lists handed over to representatives of Sens. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and J. William Fulbright, D-Ark.

Miss Davis was brought into the courtroom through a private corridor used only for bringing prisoners from the jail, which is two floors above.

Miss Davis spent last night in the women's section of the jail, where she was whisked yesterday afternoon after a highly guarded and secret flight across the United States.

The trip from McGuire Air Force Base in New Jersey took 12 hours aboard an old propellor plane rented by state authorities from the Air National Guard. Miss Davis was quiet and cooperative during the flight, those guarding her said.

When she reached the Hall of Justice, Miss Davis raised her handcuffed hands in a salute in answer to cries from a few supporters. She called out clearly "Power to the People."

Waiting to greet her when she arrived at 3 p.m. were scores of reporters, photographers and a handful of young militants. She rode from Hamilton Air Force Base in an unmarked car, guarded by four other cars, sitting in the back seat between Undersheriff Sidney Stinson and Deputy Evelyn Gosser.

Mrs. Gosser, who had accompanied Miss Davis on the plane, said that she spoke rarely during the long Television news showed scenes from Szczecin, with people shopping in the snowfall.

Diplomatic observers said the Szczecin workers were the only ones to win concession from the authorities. Deputy Premier Stanislaw Kociolek virtually dismissed demands for a 20 per cent pay increase for shipyard workers in Gdansk and Gdynia.

Official accounts have spoken of "many killed" in the riots.

of America, largest in the nation, lowered its rates. The National City Bank of Minneapolis went even further, reducing its rate to 6¼ per cent.

Rep. Wright Patman, D-Tex., chairman of the House Banking Committee, said he still wants the rates, which have been as high as 8 1-2 per cent this year, reduced to 6 per cent. Some banking authorities said this might happen because current business loan demand has been light and has failed to respond to the usual end-of-the-year upturn.

The consumer will benefit from the prime rate cut only indirectly because they borrow from different markets to pay for homes, appliances and other durables.

Consumer loan rates have eased a bit within past weeks, but not on the scale of the prime rates. The Bank of America and Wells Fargo lowered their consumer rates a half per cent early this month and many banks in New York and elsewhere followed suit.

ance of the strip to the city.

In exchange, Rice said, the city will drop its pending condemnation suit against Northwestern Pacific. The suit had been scheduled to go to Marin Superior Court in February.

The 60-foot-wide right-of-way which the city has acquired runs from the Reed Ranch Road-Blackie's pasture area for two miles to Tiburon Boulevard near Mar West Street. The railroad yards in downtown Tiburon are not included in the land transfer.

The terms of the agreement are structured to fit the railroad's desire for a tax loss in 1970. With the city paying $1 a square foot for 100,000 square feet of land in the Blackie's pasture area, Northwestern Pacific can write off the gift portion of the property as a business loss, applying the unit price to the entire right-of-way.

Under the agreement, the city will pay $50,000 to the railroad before Dec. 31 and the balance before Dec. 31, 1971. The first installment will come from Tiburon's $85,000 land acquisition fund and the rest from a similar fund in the 1971-72 budget. No interest will be charged.

The council met only briefly last night to approve two resolutions unanimously, one opening escrow on the land and the other appropriating the first payment.

Councilman Albert H. Sennett thanked those who helped to acquire the property, including fellow Councilman Branwell D. Fanning, who was mayor during much of the negotiations for the land.

He also recognized the efforts of resident Bonnie Raisin, who was in the sparse audience last night, and Larry E. Hoyt, Northwestern Pacific vice president. Sennett said he hoped the "good relationship" the city has with the railroad through Hoyt will continue.

Fanning pointed out that, although the purchase of the right-of-way is assured, the city does not have the $60,000 said to be needed to pave the pathway, landscape it, provide parks along its length and build crossings over Tiburon Boulevard.

"We've had offers of assistance over the years from the city of Belvedere and many individuals," he said, "and now that we have the land I hope they keep their wallets open."

An application now pending before the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development would, if approved, provide half of the cost of buying the right-of-way and improving it.

Man Shoots Self Twice, Lives

Louis Cervantes, 39, of Petaluma, was reported in poor condition at Community Hospital of Sonoma County after suffering two gunshot wounds yesterday.

The Sonoma County Sheriff's Department said Cervantes shot himself in the head and chest with a .22-caliber rifle at 11 a.m. yesterday at his home at 1102 Bodega Avenue.

He underwent emergency surgery at Hillcrest Hospital and was transferred to the intensive care unit of the Santa Rosa Hospital.

Deputies said Cervantes, a janitor for Pacific Gas and Electric Co. in San Rafael, had been despondent over low wages.

indirectly acknowledged recipt of a prisoner list from Hanoi by dropping its persistent demand for such a list in the U.S. statement.

Thuy alluded to the current Christmas season in his statement, and then said:

"The delegation of the Democratic Republic of (North) Vietnam, on this occasion, calls upon the Nixon administration to agree to the withdrawal from South Vietnam of all American troops and those of the other foreign countries before June 30, 1971, as the (Viet Cong's) provisional revolutionary government has proposed, in order to obtain an immediate cease-fire between the popular liberation armed forces of South Vietnam and the troops and military personnel of the United States and of the other foreign countries of the American camp, and in order to permit the parties to enter into immediate discussions on the question of guarantees for safety for the withdrawal of troops and military personnel in question and on the question of liberating captured military men.

"Moreover, the Nixon administration must immediately cease all acts threatening the sovereignty and the security of the Democratic Republic of (North) Vietnam. (Hanoi's term for reconnaissance flights.)

"If the government of the United States acts in this direction, the parties could equally enter into immediate discussion on the total cessation of the cruel war which is going on in Vietnam, and on the question of respect for the fundamental national rights and the right to self-determination of the Vietnamese people."

Bruce made no mention today of the prisoner lists handed over to representatives of Sens. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and J. William Fulbright, D-Ark.

Permit For Dancing Instruction Approved

Over the objections of neighbors, the San Anselmo Planning Commission has granted a use permit for dancing instruction at 205 The Alameda.

However, the commission action Monday also imposed stringent restrictions upon the applicant, Beatrice H. Blum, according to commission secretary Catherine Mullins.

She said the board also tightened up the requirements on the existing use permit which permits guitar and accordion classes in the residence now owned by Helen O. Gui, according to Mrs. Mullins

Mrs. Blum has an option to buy the house that depended on obtaining a use permit from the city

Protesting neighbors who presented a petition signed by 20 at the Dec 7 meeting, again argued last night that the permit would mean increased traffic and noise.

To assuage the complaints the commission ruled classes must be held between 9 a.m and 6 p.m. with no classes on Sunday and no more than three dance students at a time, the secretary said.

There are to be no signs, no employees and no noise except a record player, the commission decided, according to the secretary.

The permit is to be effective on surrender of the one for music lessons, Mrs. Mullins said.

In the existing permit the commission cut Mrs. Gui's hours from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. to 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. and set a limit of two students at a time, Mrs. Mullins said.

VARIANCES — Asked Harry Heifetz to come back with a plan for a single family dwelling on his lot at 210 Red Hill Avenue which is zoned for duplex development The commission felt that since eight variances would be needed to build a duplex, the plot ought to be developed as single family, according to the commission secretary

William Wade Crabb, 32, of Fairfax, has pleaded guilty in Marin Superior Court to a reduced misdemeanor charge of joyriding.

Policy On Pensions Reversed

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Treasury has ruled that private pension plans may no longer reduce payments to retired workers because of Social Security benefit increases voted by Congress, Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N. Y., said Tuesday.

Javits told the Senate that John S. Nolan, deputy assistant treasury secretary, wrote him that the department had reversed its 1967 policy regarding "offset" pension plans in which benefits were integrated with a retired worker's Social Security payments.

Javits said when Congress increased Social Security benefits by 15 per cent last year, he learned that some retired workers lost a like amount from their private pension plans.

He said he prepared an amendment to this year's Social Security bill, now pending in the Senete, to forbid this practice. In light of the Treasury ruling, he said, he was withdrawing his amendment.

The Senate bill calls for boosting all benefits by 10 per cent and raising the minimum Social Security payment to $100. The House has passed a bill calling for an across-the-board 5 per cent increase. If the Senate acts on its measure, the Senate and House bills will have to be reconciled in compromise legislation.

McCormack Tells Succession Plan

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Retiring House Speaker John W McCormack says he and President Lyndon B. Johnson drew up a written agreement which designated him president in the event of Johnson's disability.

The agreement was made one month after the November, 1963, assassination of President John F. Kennedy, McCormack said.

At the time, the constitution did not specify a successor once the vice president had moved to the presidency, and McCormack said the nation would have been without a leader if Johnson had become disabled before the 1964 election. A constitutional amendment adopted in 1967 designated the house speaker next in the line of succession.

The Most Exciting Headache News In Years!
Doctors' Tests In Treating Nervous Tension Headaches Now Made Public
Non-Narcotic Tablet That Needs No Prescription Proves Just As Effective As The Expensive, Leading Pain-Relief Prescription Of Doctors.

If you're one of the many who get tense, nervous headaches, these latest tests by doctors should be of the greatest importance

In recent medical tests doctors proved a famous tablet that needs no prescription gives the same complete headache relief as the expensive, leading prescription of doctors.

These doctors' tests proved, beyond a doubt, that Anacin is just as effective to relieve tension headaches, yet Anacin needs no prescription and is far more economical.

WATCH OUT, DADDY

Lou Ann Blevins, 9, told a woman in Detroit last summer that she wanted a snowball to throw at her father on Christmas. She had never seen a snowball in her home town of Clutte, Texas. On Monday 50 pounds of Detroit snowballs arrived, and now Lou Ann wonders if her father is ready for Christmas. (UPI Telephoto)

Permit For Dancing Instruction Approved

Over the objections of neighbors, the San Anselmo Planning Commission has granted a use permit for dancing instruction at 205 The Alameda.

However, the commission action Monday also imposed stringent restrictions upon the applicant, Beatrice H. Blum, according to commission secretary Catherine Mullins.

She said the board also tightened up the requirements on the existing use permit which permits guitar and accordion classes in the residence now owned by Helen O. Gui, according to Mrs. Mullins

Mrs. Blum has an option to buy the house that depended on obtaining a use permit from the city

Protesting neighbors who presented a petition signed by 20 at the Dec 7 meeting, again argued last night that the permit would mean increased traffic and noise.

To assuage the complaints the commission ruled classes must be held between 9 a.m and 6 p.m. with no classes on Sunday and no more than three dance students at a time, the secretary said.

There are to be no signs, no employees and no noise except a record player, the commission decided, according to the secretary.

The permit is to be effective on surrender of the one for music lessons, Mrs. Mullins said.

In the existing permit the commission cut Mrs. Gui's hours from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. to 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. and set a limit of two students at a time, Mrs. Mullins said.

The San Anselmo Planning Commission Also:

SUNNY HILLS — Deferred action on an application by the Ross Valley Co. to rezone part of Sunny Hills Children's Services on Sunny Hills Drive from commercial to planned development and decided to undertake rezoning of Sunny Hills to ensure it is developed as a school only.

REZONING — Rezone a parcel at 800 Sir Francis Drake Boulevard owned by A.H. Tucker Co. from general commercial to single family residential.

VARIANCES — Asked Harry Heifetz to come back with a plan for a single family dwelling on his lot at 210 Red Hill Avenue which is zoned for duplex development The commission felt that since eight variances would be needed to build a duplex, the plot ought to be developed as single family, according to the commission secretary

Gas Chamber Sentence Given

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Folsom prison convict Joseph Broughton, 36, was sentenced to the San Quentin gas chamber Monday for the knife attack on a fellow inmate

A Superior Court jury deliberated for three hours before returning the death penalty

Broughton was charged with attacking convict Salvatore Gandara on June 25

Plea of Guilty To Joyriding

William Wade Crabb, 32, of Fairfax, has pleaded guilty in Marin Superior Court to a reduced misdemeanor charge of joyriding.

He earlier had been charged with felony car theft in connection with the taking of a car from a San Francisco rental agency and abandoning it in San Rafael.

Judge Joseph G. Wilson set sentencing Monday for Jan. 29.

Policy On Pensions Reversed

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Treasury has ruled that private pension plans may no longer reduce payments to retired workers because of Social Security benefit increases voted by Congress, Sen. Jacob K Javits, R-N. Y., said Tuesday.

Javits told the Senate that John S. Nolan, deputy assistant treasury secretary, wrote him that the department had reversed its 1967 policy regarding "offset" pension plans in which benefits were integrated with a retired worker's Social Security payments.

Javits said when Congress increased Social Security benefits by 15 per cent last year, he learned that some retired workers lost a like amount from their private pension plans.

He said he prepared an amendment to this year's Social Security bill, now pending in the Senete, to forbid this practice. In light of the Treasury ruling, he said, he was withdrawing his amendment.

The Senate bill calls for boosting all benefits by 10 per cent and raising the minimum Social Security payment to $100. The House has passed a bill calling for an across-the-board 5 per cent increase. If the Senate acts on its measure, the Senate and House bills will have to be reconciled in compromise legislation.

3 Employees Retire From San Quentin

Three employees of San Quentin Prison, with a total of 63 years' service, have retired, Warden Louis S. Nelson announced.

They are Horace L. Shadle of San Anselmo, Norman K Harrington of San Rafael and William R. Dyer of Vacaville.

Shadle, of 12 Barber Avenue, was employed in the accounting department at the prison since 1945, and was working as an accounting officer III at the time of his retirement.

Harrington, of 132 Blackstone Drive, was a correctional counselor and began work at San Quentin as a correctional officer in 1948 .

Dyer, a correctional sergeant, is scheduled to receive a disability retirement at the end of this month after 15 years' service.

LA PAZ, Bolivia (UPI)— Bolivia today released French Marxist Regis DeBray, who had been serving a 30-year prison term on a charge of complicity in the guerrilla movement headed by Ernesto "Che" Guevara

DeBray had been held since November of 1967 when Bolivian troops shot and killed Guevara in the mountains of Bolivia

McCormack Tells Succession Plan

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Retiring House Speaker John W McCormack says he and President Lyndon B. Johnson drew up a written agreement which designated him president in the event of Johnson's disability.

The agreement was made one month after the November, 1963, assassination of President John F. Kennedy, McCormack said.

At the time, the constitution did not specify a successor once the vice president had moved to the presidency, and McCormack said the nation would have been without a leader if Johnson had become disabled before the 1964 election. A constitutional amendment adopted in 1967 designated the house speaker next in the line of succession.

Is Africa Charting New Path?

By U.P. INTERNAYIONAL

Fears of wholesale racial war in Africa —especially in the South—appeared to recede in 1970 and there were signs the danger will become more remote in the year ahead. But the war drums still beat and Rhodesia took a defiant step towards greater racial segregation.

South African Premier John Vorster reaffirmed his government's "outward" policy of seeking to expand contacts with Black Africa. He became the first South African Premier to visit a Black African country when he flew to Malawi in May.

South Africa signed an agreement providing for a $3.2 million loan to Madagascar and urged South African businessmen to take steps to stimulate Malagasy's economy.

URGES TALKS

The Ivory Coast's President Felix Houphouet-Boigny urged the 41-nation Organization of African Unity to open negotiations with South Africa and Portugal aimed at improving relations between the OAU and those countries.

The OAU remains opposed to white minority rule in South Africa, Rhodesia and Portuguese Africa, but most member-states favor diplomacy rather than force to achieve black control of those areas. This principle was embodied in the OAU's 1969 "Lusaka Manifesto" which said:

"We would prefer to negotiate rather than kill. We do not advocate violence: we advocate an end to the violence against human dignity which is now being perpetrated by the oppressors of Africa."

At home, Vorster's ruling National Party won resounding national and provincial election victories over the ultraright-wing Herstigte Nasionale Party (HNP), which views any rapport with Black Africa as the beginning of the end of white rule in southern Africa.

The Rhodesian government, still defiant of world opinion five years after seizing independence from Britain, is expected to open negotiations in 1971 with the British Conservative government, which appears more inclined towards a reconciliation than its Laborite predecessors. But the Conservatives remain committed to eventual black majority rule in Rhodesia and observers on both sides give the talks little chance of succeeding.

MORE REMOTE

Prospects of a settlement grew more remote when the Rhodesian government introduced legislation in 1970 providing for the eviction of blacks and other non-whites from white residential areas, and announced plans to segregate cinemas, swimming pools and other facilities.

In Portugal's African territories, the costly war against guerrilla forces fighting for independence enters its 10th year in 1971 with little prospect of victory for either side. In an effort to undercut any popular support for the guerrillas, Portuguese Prime Minister Marcello Caetano introduced constitutional changes granting self-government to Angola, Mozambique and Portuguese Guinea.

About 35,000 Portuguese troops are stationed in swampy Portugese Guinea on Africa's western coast. Foreign observers agree that guerilla forces, well-equipped with Communist

POW Plans Under Study By Nixon

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The White House says President Nixon is considering several recommendations to win the release of American war prisoners in Vietnam, including an offer to unilaterally free 1,500 North Vietnamese prisoners being held by the allies.

Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler did not elaborate on what all the approaches were, but he called attention to a proposal made by South Vietnam at the Paris peace talks for the release of 8,000 North Vietnamese prisoners in exchange for U.S. POWs.

arms, roam freely in about two-thirds of the territory.

Portugal claims the insurgents operate from bases inside the neighboring Republic of Guinea, a former French colony. The Republic's President Ahmed Sekou Toure said his Marxist-oriented regime repelled an invasion of African and European mercenaries in November, launched with Portugal's help. A United Nations mission which visited Guinea supported the claim. Portugal denied any involvement.

In Mozambique, Portuguese troops went over to the offensive in 1970, sallying forth from fortified outposts and employing the hit-and-run tactics of the guerrillas. The insurgents have suffered serious setbacks, including the loss of huge arms and ammunition dumps.

In the former French colony of Chad the revolt of the Chadian National Liberation Front against pro-French President Francois Tombalbaye enters its fifth year in 1971. France has said it will withdraw its 1,500-man force from the country by mid-1971.

Economically, Africa made substantial strides in 1970.

In the Congo, Belgians who fled the country's five-year civil war began returning to run industry, mining and schools. Gen. Joseph Mobutu, who seized power in 1965, was overwhelmingly elected president for a seven-year term in the nation's first presidential elections.

COPPER INDUSTRY

Mobutu has thrown the doors open to all but Communist investment. The state-controlled copper industry is expanding. Trade, even with South Africa, is booming. But education, transport and agriculture are still backward and soaring inflation has made Kinshasa, the capital, a more expensive city to live in than New York.

War failed to slow massive economic development in Angola and Mozambique. Oil flowed in increasing quantities from the Portuguese enclave of Cabinda at the mouth of the Congo river. Angola yielded diamonds and some of the world's richest high-grade iron ore. The economies of both countries gained from the presence of 100,000 Portuguese troops divided equally between them.

EXPORT TROUBLE

But in Portuguese Guinea exports were down by more than a half and the administration there remained wholly dependent on financial aid from Portugal.

Rhodesia's economy remained basically sound despite the economic sanctions impost against that country under the United Nations.

But in South Africa, economic experts said inflation is likely to worsen in 1971. A shortage of skilled labor has caused wages to rise faster than productivity. The shortage stems from the government's reluctance to tap South Africa's vast labor market of blacks and other non-whites to fill jobs normally given to whites. But continued pressure from labor-short businessmen and industrialists may force a reversal of this policy.

The East African Community linking Kenya, Uganda and Tanzania enters its fourth year with leaders of the three countries convinced teething troubles will soon be overcome in unifying the area in such areas as posts and telecommunications, and harbors, railways and customs and exercise.

Shelter Ridge Unit Rejected

The president of the Richardson Bay Sanitary District has said a 67-unit low-income apartment project on Shelter Ridge in Mill Valley cannot be served by his district.

Douglas De La Fontaine said directors have expressed interest in the project but stated that Shelter Ridge is within Mill Valley city limits and so will be served by the city's sewage treatment plant.

The Independent-Journal, on information supplied by the district, erroneously reported last Thursday that the project probably would be allowed to join the Richardson Bay District.

"We would prefer to negotiate rather than kill. We do not advocate violence: we advocate an end to the violence against human dignity which is now being perpetrated by the oppressors of Africa."

At home, Vorster's ruling National Party won resounding national and provincial election victories over the ultraright-wing Herstigte Nasinale Party (HNP), which views any rapport with Black Africa as the beginning of the end of white rule in southern Africa.

The Rhodesian government, still defiant of world opinion five years after seizing independence from Britain, is expected to open negotiations in 1971 with the British Conservative government, which appears more inclined towards a reconciliation than its Laborite predecessors. But the Conservatives remain committed to eventual black majority rule in Rhodesia and observers on both sides give the talks little chance of succeeding.

MORE REMOTE

Prospects of a settlement grew more remote when the Rhodesian government introduced legislation in 1970 providing for the eviction of blacks and other non-whites from white residential areas, and announced plans to segregate cinemas, swimming pools and other facilities.

In Portugal's African territories, the costly war against guerrilla forces fighting for independence enters its 10th year in 1971 with little prospect of victory for either side. In an effort to undercut any popular support for the guerrillas, Portuguese Prime Minister Marcello Caetano introduced constitutional changes granting self-government to Angola, Mozambique and Portuguese Guinea.

About 35,000 Portuguese troops are stationed in swampy Portugese Guinea on Africa's western coast. Foreign observers agree that guerilla forces, well-equipped with Communist

POW Plans Under Study By Nixon

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The White House says President Nixon is considering several recommendations to win the release of American war prisoners in Vietnam, including an offer to unilaterally free 1,500 North Vietnamese prisoners being held by the allies.

Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler did not elaborate on what all the approaches were, but he call d attention to a proposal made by South Vietnam at the Paris peace talks for the release of 8,000 North Vietnamese prisoners in exchange for U.S. POWs.

CIA's Guerrilla Army In Laos Worries Generals, Politicians

VIENTIANE (UPI) —The burgeoning size of the secret "special guerrilla unit" army of Laotians, which is armed, trained, paid and led by the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) is beginning to worry both Laotian generals and Laotian politicians.

The Army has grown from 10,000 men—most of them fighting for Meo tribesman Gen. Vang Pao in north Laos—to a total of about 25,000 fighting in all sections of the country in the past two years, high-ranking Laotian military sources report.

It is so large that it is now operating in units of battalion size (about 500 men), and its recruiters are draining troops away from the regular Laotian army, according to these sources. The regular army is, in fact, in a period of declining strength—its size is being brought down from a maximum of 70,000 men about a year ago to a goal of 45,000 men next year, mainly because U.S. officials believe they can run the war better than the Laotian High Command.

That is one of the things that worries Laotian generals a good deal these days. The other is that the Pathet Lao Communist army is on the upswing—intelligence says it is expanding toward a goal of about 50,000 active troops—and if a peace settlement in Laos should come out of current negotiations between the Communists and the government there will be serious problems over integrating a force that size with a regular army of equal strength.

The guerrilla units, or "SUGs" got their start back in the early 1960s when the CIA first recruited Vang Pao—then a major in the Laotian army—and hired a group of young Americans who had grown up in this part of the world and spoke the Meo dialect to go into northern Laos and help organize and train an army that could be capable of harassing Communist lines of communication from a series of hilltop outposts scattered across Xieng Khouang and Sam Neua provinces in the north.

When the American bombing campaign against North Vietnam began in 1964, and hundreds of American airmen poured into this allegedly neutral country to set up helicopter landing pads and refueling sites in support of rescue operations, plus radar and communications stations to monitor North Vietnamese air and ground traffic and other military movements, the SGU army was expanded to about 10,000 men and assigned the primary task of defending these bases.

Some smaller units also were assigned directly to monitor and occasionally raid supply shipments moving down the Ho Chi Minh Trail toward North Vietnam. The previous ambassador to Laos, William Sullivan, tried to restrict the scope of these operations, and to handle most Laotian military operations through the regular army command.

Now, however, a new American team is running the show here, led by Ambassador G. McMurtrie Godley.

Godley has encouraged an expansion of the SGU concept, and these troops fall directly under U.S. command.

As well as expanding in size, the SGUs have expanded their combat role. There now are more of them along the trail. Moreover, they have begun mounting sizable operations—such as the still-secret raid on the Ho Chi Minh Trail staging area around Tohephone, just east of the old U.S. Marine base at Khe Sanh in mid-November, which was conducted by four battalions of SGUs.

The SGUs are being expanded by paying them more money than regular Laotian troops get, according to Finance Minister Sisouk Na Champassak, who is also the number two man in the Defense Ministry.

Laotian soldiers receive base pay of $6 to $10 a month. The SGUs get $20 a month, and what's more, they get special combat bonuses of $1 to $2 a day. Laotian regulars get only token combat bonuses.

The SGUs also are better armed. All of them carry the M16 rifle, whereas only 20 per cent of the Laotian regulars have this powerful automatic weapon.

There are two things that particularly worry the Laotian command about the current SGU status. One is that the SGU recruiters are picking up not only the best privates and sergeants, but also are stealing Laotian army officers away from the regular army to run their own units.

The other is that the SGUs are beginning to remove from the Laotian command itself the last vestiges of government control over the military fate of the country.

Sally Stanford Joins Fight For Lady Bartenders

Sally Stanford has joined the debate over women's rights to serve liquor. She's all for it. The Sausalito restaurant owner had her attorney file application with the State Supreme Court on behalf of her Valhalla Inn.

Her attorney, Richard Gladstein, wants to file a "friend of the court brief" in the case of three Los Angeles County pubs which were cited by the state for having women bartenders.

Gladstein filed suit in Marin County because of the "threat of suspension or revocation" of the Valhalla license because "female employees are permitted to assist male bartenders in mixing alcoholic beverages."

The high court is expected to hear the case Jan. 7 in Los Angeles.

Pleas Entered In Drug Case

Three of four young men arrested Dec. 10 in a drug raid on a Santa Venetia house have pleaded innocent to felony charges.

A preliminary hearing was set for Jan. 19 for Kevin Sumner Orr, 20, of Ross, charged with possession of marijuana, and cocaine, and John Russell Warne, 23, of Corte Madera, and James Steven Preston, 20, both accused of possessing marijuana.

A fourth youth, Timothy Patrick Yarish, 20, of Fairfax, is to return to court later to enter a plea to a charge of being in a place where drugs were used.

Legislator Would Lower Adulthood

By ROBERT P. LAURENCE

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —A Republican assemblyman today announced he would reintroduce a constitutional amendment to lower the age of legal adulthood in California and propose a special election next year to resolve the issue.

John V. Briggs of Fullerton said a similar amendment, which failed in the Senate last year after passing the Assembly, would allow 18-year-olds to vote in state and local elections as well as for federal candidates. It would also drop to 18 the age limit for signing contracts, serving on juries, buying liquor and other adult activities.

He told a news conference he would also introduce a companion bill calling for a special election in November 1971 on the amendment, which would require approval by the people.

The Supreme Court Monday upheld the right of more than 1 million Californians now as young as 16 to vote in the 1972 presidential election.

The court supported the section of the 1970 voting rights law giving 18-year-olds the right to vote for congressional and presidential candidates, but it reserved to the states the right to set age limits for state and local elections.

Democrats welcomed the development as a help to their party, noting that younger voters are traditionally more liberal. But Republicans said the GOP could benefit.

Two other legislators—Assemblyman John J. Miller, D-Berkeley, and Sen. George R. Moscone, D-San Francisco—also said they would introduce legislation in January to lower the California voting age for all elections.

AFRICA

arms, roam freely in about two-thirds of the territory.

Portugal claims the insurgents operate from bases inside the neighboring Republic of Guinea, a former French colony. The Republic's President Ahmed Sekou Toure said his Marxist-oriented regime repelled an invasion of African and European mercenaries in November, launched with Portugal's help. A United Nations mission which visited Guinea supported the claim. Portugal denied any involvement.

In Mozambique, Portuguese troops went over to the offensive in 1970, sallying forth from fortified outposts and employing the hit-and-run tactics of the guerrillas. The insurgents have suffered serious setbacks, including the loss of huge arms and ammunition dumps.

In the former French colony of Chad the revolt of the Chadian National Liberation Front against pro-French President Francois Tombalbaye enters its fifth year in 1971. France has said it will withdraw its 1,500-man force from the country by mid-1971.

Economically, Africa made substantial strides in 1970.

In the Congo, Belgians who fled the country's five-year civil war began returning to run industry, mining and schools. Gen. Joseph Mobutu, who seized power in 1965, was overwhelmingly elected president for a seven-year term in the nation's first presidential elections.

COPPER INDUSTRY

Mobutu has thrown the doors open to all but Communist investment. The state-controlled copper industry is expanding. Trade, even with South Africa, is booming. But education, transport and agriculture are still backward and soaring inflation has made Kinshasa, the capital, a more expensive city to live in than New York.

War failed to slow massive economic development in Angola and Mozambique. Oil flowed in increasing quantities from the Portuguese enclave of Cabinda at the mouth of the Congo river. Angola yielded diamonds and some of the world's richest high-grade iron ore. The economies of both countries gained from the presence of 100,000 Portuguese troops divided equally between them.

EXPORT TROUBLE

But in Portuguese Guinea exports were down by more than a half and the administration there remained wholly dependent on financial aid from Portugal.

Rhodesia's economy remained basically sound despite the economic sanctions impost against that country under the United Nations.

But in South Africa, economic experts said inflation is likely to worsen in 1971. A shortage of skilled labor has caused wages to rise faster than productivity. The shortage stems from the government's reluctance to tap South Africa's vast labor market of blacks and other nonwhites to fill jobs normally given to whites. But continued pressure from labor-short businessmen and industrialists may force a reversal of this policy.

The East African Community linking Kenya, Uganda and Tanzania enters its fourth year with leaders of the three countries convinced teething troubles will soon be overcome in unifying the area in such areas as posts and telecommunications, and harbors, railways and customs and exercise.

Shelter Ridge Unit Rejected

The president of the Richardson Bay Sanitary District has said a 67-unit low-income apartment project on Shelter Ridge in Mill Valley cannot be served by his district.

Douglas De La Fontaine said directors have expressed interest in the project but stated that Shelter Ridge is within Mill Valley city limits and so will be served by the city's sewage treatment plant.

The Independent-Journal, on information supplied by the district, erroneously reported last Thursday that the project probably would be allowed to join the Richardson Bay District.

U.S. Will Pay Dearly For New Lease On Panama Canal

PANAMA CITY, R.P. (UPI) —The Panamanian government thinks the 67-year-old "lease" on the Panama Canal and Canal Zone has expired but "tenant" Uncle Sam is going to be a tough customer to budge out of the Zone.

But Panama, like most landlords, is going to ask the United States to pay dearly, and the price won't be in dollars and cents, to remain.

Panama seeks to abrogate the 1903 treaty. That treaty was granted "in perpetuity" and allows the United States to rule the Canal Zone "as if it were sovereign."

Twice before, in 1936 and 1955, the two countries negotiated revisions in the treaty.

Political observers say that sometime before the end of the year Panama will tell the United States exactly what it wants in a new treaty governing the Panama Canal.

By early 1971 Panama's ambassador to the United States, Jose Antonio de la Ossa, is expected to begin talks over the U.S. controlled Canal with U.S. negotiator Robert G. Anderson in Washington.

Diplomatic relations are now at their highest point since Strong Oan Omar Torrijos overthrew President Arnulfo Arias in October, 1968. Last month President Nixon told Panamanian President Demetrio Lakas that the U.S. was willing to negotiate to resume negotiations. It was the first assurance Panama has had at the White House level since August, when Lakas and Torrijos rejected three treaty drafts finished in 1967 as a basis for future negotions.

Those treaty drafts—dealing with the present canal, a possible sea-level canal and canal defense—set up an autonomous board with five U.S. and four Panama appointees. They guaranteed Panama a percentage of the Canal's revenues, a share that could have reached $15 million a year.

Before negotiations start both sides will study the recommendations of the U.S.-financed Atlantic - Pacific Interoceanic Canal Study Commission, headed by negotiator Anderson.

The $22.2 million feasibility study of building a sea-level canal was given to President Nixon Tuesday, December 1.

Informed sources on both sides of the negotiating table said Panama doesn't want control of the present Panama Canal nor the responsibility of defending the Canal Zone area.

"We only want what is fair for our country," Gen. Torrijos once told UPI. "We are certainly not getting what is fair at present."

Panamanian sources said at the bargaining table the Isthmian country would demand:

—Control of the Canal Zone police department and court system, which enforces law for 55,000 zone residents.

—Control of the Zone's customs's houses and collection duties.

— Guarantees the United States will stop improving and widening the Canal, which Panama considers a violation of the 1936 treaty revision.

—A reduction in the 12,000 military personnel connected with the U.S. Southern Command in the zone, that is now in charge of U. S. military missions in all of Latin America, and not only the Canal Zone as the 1903 treaty prescribes.

Restoring Medi-Cal Cuts Asked

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— The California Medical Association today petitioned the Reagan Administration to restore recent Medi-Cal cuts by Jan. 8.

The CMA said that emergency regulations cutting back health care services are "illegal" and said the order should be rescinded "to prevent irreparable injury, including serious illness and threat of death" to needy patients.

Doctors may be forced out of the program because of "burdensome and onerous conditions" imposed by the new regulations, said Dr. Ralph W. Burnett, CMA president.

The CMA asked for a public hearing on the regulations by Jan. 5 and for repeal of the cutbacks by Jan. 8.

The petition said under the new guidelines "Such care as is available is required to be substandard, because Medi-Cal patients will be denied necessary services, medication and continuity of care."

Dr. Burnett said it is possible that Medi-Cal could be lost completely with the 50 per cent of expenses now paid by the federal government falling directly upon the taxpaying citizens of California. He said that denial of health care services under Medi-Cal will require county governments to provide medical care to the poor.

Burnett particularly attacked a provision of prior authorization of specific medical treatments which he said actually works against the provision of care.

"Many times the physician must see his patient before he can determine whether the ailment is an emergency condition or is merely needed but non-emergency, and thus subject to prior authorization," Burnett said. "If the latter, while the visit was necessary to the patient's health, the patient isn't covered by Medi-Cal."

Other services deprived the Medi-Cal patient are restrictions in psychiatric services and medications, which are inadequate and can lead to dangerous situations, Burnett said.

Christmas Crush: 10 Million Calls

NEW YORK (UPI) —The American Telephone and Telegraph Co. is adding more than 4,000 circuits and putting 1,300 others in service ahead of schedule to handle an expected record number of interstate and foreign telephone calls this Christmas.

Company spokesmen said Monday they expect to handle more than 10 million calls during the holiday season, 12 to 26 per cent more than last year. AT&T said reduced interstate rates will begin at 5 p.m. EST Thursday and extend through the holiday weekend.

CIA's Guerrilla Army In Laos Worries Generals, Politicians

VIENTIANE (UPI) —The burgeoning size of the secret "special guerrilla unit" army of Laotians, which is armed, trained, paid and led by the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) is beginning to worry both Laotian generals and Laotian politicians.

The Army has grown from 10,000 men—most of them fighting for Meo tribesman Gen. Vang Pao in north Laos—to a total of about 25,000 fighting in all sections of the country in the past two years, high-ranking Laotian military sources report.

It is so large that it is now operating in units of battalion size (about 500 men), and its recruiters are draining troops away from the regular Laotian army, according to these sources. The regular army is, in fact, in a period of declining strength—its size is being brought down from a maximum of 70,000 men about a year ago to a goal of 45,000 men next year, mainly because U.S. officials believe they can run the war better than the Laotian High Command.

That is one of the things that worries Laotian generals a good deal these days. The other is that the Pathet Lao Communist army is on the upswing—intelligence says it is expanding toward a goal of about 50,000 active troops—and if a peace settlement in Laos should come out of current negotiations between the Communists and the government there will be serious problems over integrating a force that size with a regular army of equal strength.

The guerrilla units, or "SUGs" got their start back in the early 1960s when the CIA first recruited Vang Pao—then a major in the Laotian army—and hired a group of young Americans who had grown up in this part of the world and spoke the Meo dialect to go into northern Laos and help organize and train an army that could be capable of harassing Communist lines of communication from a series of hilltop outposts scattered across Xieng Khouang and Sam Neua provinces in the north.

When the American bombing campaign against North Vietnam began in 1964, and hundreds of American airmen poured into this allegedly neutral country to set up helicopter landing pads and refueling sites in support of rescue operations, plus radar and communications stations to monitor North Vietnamese air and ground traffic and other military movements, the SGU army was expanded to about 10,000 men and assigned the primary task of defending these bases.

Some smaller units also were assigned directly to monitor and occasionally raid supply shipments moving down the Ho Chi Minh Trail toward North Vietnam. The previous ambassador to Laos, William Sullivan, tried to restrict the scope of these operations, and to handle most Laotian military operations through the regular army command.

Now, however, a new American team is running the show here, led by Ambassador G. McMurtrie Godley.

Godley has encouraged an expansion of the SGU concept, and these troops fall directly under U.S. command.

As well as expanding in size, the SGUs have expanded their combat role. There now are more of them along the trail. Moreover, they have begun mounting sizable operations—such as the still-secret raid on the Ho Chi Minh Trail staging area around Tohephone, just east of the old U.S. Marine base at Khe Sanh in mid-November, which was conducted by four battalions of SGUs.

The SGUs are being expanded by paying them more money than regular Laotian troops get, according to Finance Minister Sisouk Na Champassak, who is also the number two man in the Defense Ministry.

Laotian soldiers receive base pay of $6 to $10 a month. The SGUs get $20 a month, and what's more, they get special combat bonuses of $1 to $2 a day. Laotian regulars get only token combat bonuses.

The SGUs also are better armed. All of them carry the M16 rifle, whereas only 20 per cent of the Laotian regulars have this powerful automatic weapon.

There are two things that particularly worry the Laotian command about the current SGU status. One is that the SGU recruiters are picking up not only the best privates and sergeants, but also are stealing Laotian army officers away from the regular army to run their own units.

The other is that the SGUs are beginning to remove from the Laotian command itself the last vestiges of government control over the military fate of the country.

Sally Stanford Joins Fight For Lady Bartenders

Sally Stanford has joined the debate over women's rights to serve liquor. She's all for it. The Sausalito restaurant owner had her attorney file application with the State Supreme Court on behalf of her Valhalla Inn.

Her attorney, Richard Gladstein, wants to file a "friend of the court brief" in the case of three Los Angeles County pubs which were cited by the state for having women bartenders.

Gladstein filed suit in Marin County because of the "threat of suspension or revocation" of the Valhalla license because "female employees are permitted to assist male bartenders in mixing alcoholic beverages."

The high court is expected to hear the case Jan. 7 in Los Angeles.

Pleas Entered In Drug Case

Three of four young men arrested Dec. 10 in a drug raid on a Santa Venetia house have pleaded innocent to felony charges.

A preliminary hearing was set for Jan. 19 for Kevin Sumner Orr, 20, of Ross, charged with possession of marijuana and cocaine, and John Russell Warne, 23, of Corte Madera, and James Steven Preston, 20, both accused of possessing marijuana.

A fourth youth, Timothy Patrick Yarish, 20, of Fairfax, is to return to court later to enter a plea to a charge of being in a place where drugs were used.

Legislator Would Lower Adulthood

By ROBERT P. LAURENCE

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —A Republican assemblyman today announced he would reintroduce a constitutional amendment to lower the age of legal adulthood in California and propose a special election next year to resolve the issue.

John V. Briggs of Fullerton said a similar amendment, which failed in the Senate last year after passing the Assembly, would allow 18-year-olds to vote in state and local elections as well as for federal candidates. It would also drop to 18 the age limit for signing contracts, serving on juries, buying liquor and other adult activities.

He told a news conference he would also introduce a companion bill calling for a special election in November 1971 on the amendment, which would require approval by the people.

The Supreme Court Monday upheld the right of more than 1 million Californians now as young as 16 to vote in the 1972 presidential election.

The court supported the section of the 1970 voting rights law giving 18-year-olds the right to vote for congressional and presidential candidates, but it reserved to the states the right to set age limits for state and local elections.

Democrats welcomed the development as a help to their party, noting that younger voters are traditionally more liberal. But Republicans said the GOP could benefit.

Two other legislators—Assemblyman John J. Miller, D-Berkeley, and Sen. George R. Moscone, D-San Francisco—also said they would introduce legislation in January to lower the California voting age for all elections.

INCOME TAX FACTS

By PETER J. WIKEL

Start Now To Think About Business Automobile Expenses

Now is the time to take a good hard look at your business automobile expense for 1970.

Under the new rules you can deduct 12 cents per mile for the first 15,000 miles of business use of your automobile, plus nine cents per mile for every business mile thereafter.

If you have been itemizing your automobile expenses and they don't amount to 12 cents a mile including straight line depreciation then perhaps you should consider using 12 cents per mile this year instead of itemizing.

On the other hand, suppose you had been using the old 10 cents per mile allowance and you find this year that you have a big bill for repairs, tires, transmission or something, then you might change to itemizing.

You can change each year on the same or different cars provided you have not previously taken the extra first year depreciation allowance on your car or if you have not depreciated by one of the accelerated methods.

STRAIGHT LINE

You must always use the straight line method of depreciation in the years in which you itemize, and you must figure that you have used the straight line method of depreciation for the years you took the standard deduction.

If you are going to itemize this year then have all that needed repair work done, buy those new tires and get the old bus in shape so that next year you will have no expenses on the car and can use the standard rate profitably.

If your itemized expenses are a little soft, that is if your records are not complete, then you would be a lot better off to use the mileage rate because all you have to prove here is the number of miles traveled and the business use of the car.

If you are reimbursed for the business use of your car by your employer at less than 12 cents a mile you can include the reimbursement in income and deduct 12 cents a mile up to the first 15,000 miles and nine cents a mile thereafter.

OVER 12 CENTS

If your reimbursement is over 12 cents a mile but not over 15 cents a mile you wouldn't use this system but you do not have to account for your automobile expenses because you are considered to have accounted to your employer. If your reimbursement is over 15 cents a mile, you will have to include the reimbursement in income and itemize your automobile expenses.

You can use this system and in addition deduct parking fees, bridge tolls, etc.

Also, the mileage allowance for use of your car for charitable purposes or for medical purposes has been increased from five to six cents a mile.

Applications Now Accepted

Applications for admission in the spring semester at the College of Marin will be accepted through Jan. 4, the college has announced.

There have been 1,593 applications received, the college reported, and new students are now being registered.

Registration is closed for returning students, the school said. Almost 2,700 returning students registered, according to the college.

Registration of new students is being held from 9 to 11:30 a.m. and 1 to 4 p.m. weekdays, the college reported.

Burglar Discovers Safe Combination

A burglar descovered the combination and then took $214 from a floor safe at E. L. Egger and Sons Nursery, 2000 Novato Boulevard, Novato, late Sunday or early Monday, police reported.

The burglar discovered a card containing the safe combination atop a cabinet shelf and then opened the safe, police said. The burglary occurred between 5:15 p.m. Monday and 8:20 a.m. yesterday.

U.S. Will Pay Dearly For New Lease On Panama Canal

PANAMA CITY, R.P. (UPI) —The Panamanian government thinks the 67-year-old "lease" on the Panama Canal and Canal Zone has expired but "tenant" Uncle Sam is going to be a tough customer to budge out of the Zone.

But Panama, like most landlords, is going to ask the United States to pay dearly, and the price won't be in dollars and cents, to remain.

Panama seeks to abrogate the 1903 treaty. That treaty was granted "in perpetuity" and allows the United States to rule the Canal Zone "as if it were sovereign."

Twice before, in 1936 and 1955, the two countries negotiated revisions in the treaty.

Political observers say that sometime before the end of the year Panama will tell the United States exactly what it wants in a new treaty governing the Panama Canal.

By early 1971 Panama's ambassador to the United States, Jose Antonio de la Ossa, is expected to begin talks over the U.S. controlled Canal with U.S. negotiator Robert G. Anderson in Washington.

Diplomatic relations are now at their highest point since Strong Oan Omar Torrijos overthrew President Arnulfo Arias in October, 1968. Last month President Nixon told Panamanian President Demetrio Lakas that the U.S. was willing to negotiate to resume negotiations. It was the first assurance Panama has had at the White House level since August, when Lakas and Torrijos rejected three treaty drafts finished in 1967 as a basis for future negotions.

Those treaty drafts—dealing with the present canal, a possible sea-level canal and canal defense—set up an autonomous board with five U.S. and four Panama appointees. They guaranteed Panama a percentage of the Canal's revenues, a share that could have reached $15 million a year.

Before negotiations start both sides will study the recommendations of the U.S.-financed Atlantic - Pacific Interoceanic Canal Study Commission, headed by negotiator Anderson.

The $22.2 million feasibility study of building a sea-level canal was given to President Nixon Tuesday, December 1.

Informed sources on both sides of the negotiating table said Panama doesn't want control of the present Panama Canal nor the responsibility of defending the Canal Zone area.

"We only want what is fair for our country," Gen. Torrijos once told UPI. "We are certainly not getting what is fair at present."

Panamanian sources said at the bargaining table the Isthmian country would demand:

—Control of the Canal Zone police department and court system, which enforces law for 55,000 zone residents.

—Control of the Zone's customs's houses and collection duties.

— Guarantees the United States will stop improving and widening the Canal, which Panama considers a violation of the 1936 treaty revision.

—A reduction in the 12,000 military personnel connected with the U.S. Southern Command in the zone, that is now in charge of U. S. military missions in all of Latin America, and not only the Canal Zone as the 1903 treaty prescribes.

Restoring Medi-Cal Cuts Asked

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— The California Medical Association today petitioned the Reagan Administration to restore recent Medi-Cal cuts by Jan. 8.

The CMA said that emergency regulations cutting back health care services are "illegal" and said the order should be rescinded "to prevent irreparable injury, including serious illness and threat of death" to needy patients.

Doctors may be forced out of the program because of "burdensome and onerous conditions" imposed by the new regulations, said Dr. Ralph W. Burnett, CMA president.

The CMA asked for a public hearing on the regulations by Jan. 5 and for repeal of the cutbacks by Jan. 8.

The petition said under the new guidelines "Such care as is available is required to be substandard, because Medi-Cal patients will be denied necessary services, medication and continuity of care."

Dr. Burnett said it is possible that Medi-Cal could be lost completely with the 50 per cent of expenses now paid by the federal government falling directly upon the taxpaying citizens of California. He said that denial of health care services under Medi-Cal will require county governments to provide medical care to the poor.

Burnett particularly attacked a provision of prior authorization of specific medical treatments which he said actually works against the provision of care.

"Many times the physician must see his patient before he can determine whether the ailment is an emergency condition or is merely needed but non-emergency, and thus subject to prior authorization," Burnett said. "If the latter, while the visit was necessary to the patient's health, the patient isn't covered by Medi-Cal."

Other services deprived the Medi-Cal patient are restrictions in psychiatric services and medications, which are inadequate and can lead to dangerous situations, Burnett said.

Christmas Crush: 10 Million Calls

NEW YORK (UPI) —The American Telephone and Telegraph Co. is adding more than 4,000 circuits and putting 1,300 others in service ahead of schedule to handle an expected record number of interstate and foreign telephone calls this Christmas.

Company spokesmen said Monday they expect to handle more than 10 million calls during the holiday season, 12 to 26 per cent more than last year. AT&T said reduced interstate rates will begin at 5 p.m. EST Thursday and extend through the holiday weekend.

NEW ATTORNEYS

Her Interest Is Criminal, His Is Tax Law

By PAT BALMES

"I was just scared to death my first semester at law school. I worked my head off," says new attorney Mary Lu Everett of Tiburon. "When my final grades were good, I relaxed and thought, 'This is just like anything else.' "

Now the Law Review graduate from Boalt Hall Law School at University of California is celebrating the news that she and her husband, Ken, both passed the recent California bar examination.

THE YOUNG couple spent their first year and a half of marriage finishing law school and studying for the exam.

"Friends asked us how we could stand to be together 24 hours a day all summer studying for the exam. We were too busy to have a fight! There wasn't even time to clean the house, but we both understood," says Mary Lu.

Attending a bar review course every night, the Everetts studied at the Civic Center law library daily from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

"The day before the three-day exam started, we hiked all day along Tiburon's railroad tracks, talking about law," says the young wife.

During the long exam, Mary Lu noticed, "My arm hurt from so much writing, ink in the pen wouldn't flow fast enough and there were too many people."

EACH NIGHT after the exam the Everetts relaxed at the movies.

"Afterward, we didn't care if we passed," remembers Mary Lu, explaining that only 50 per cent of the candidates pass.

"We just took off in our little car and drove for two months from coast to coast."

Will they practice together? Honor student Mary Lu is decisive: husband and wife should not compete.

"Maybe someday the position of women in marriage may be different, but right now I have to live in the system. My marriage is important to me," explains the young woman. She feels her husband is a practical, energetic oral advocate. Ken, a Hastings Law School graduate, plans a career in tax law. Mary Lu has waited to decide on her job, until Ken chose his and confirmed them as San Franciscans.

Since she is interested in criminal law, Mary Lu plans an interview with the Public Defender's Office in Oakland.

"They won't hire you until you pass the bar. Anyway somebody had to work on the house and do the Christmas shopping," remarks the young attorney, who is taking an interior decorating course at night. She has stitched draperies and huge toss pillows to brighten their neat, rented ranch house in Belveron West.

THE NEW graduate has already learned that being a woman in law is fashionable.

"Law firms like to have a woman to show how progressive they are," she remarks wryly. "A black, a Chicano and a woman lawyer are in demand, especially if they are at the top of their class." She is concerned, however, that the woman, though hired might not be promoted.

Being on Law Review dramatically increased interviewing law firms' interest in Mary Lu. She won her place on Law Review, reserved for the top 10 per cent of the class, through a writing competition.

"Writing is the trick in law school," she reveals.

MARY LU explains law firms' attitude toward an unmarried woman lawyer: she might marry a man who would take her to another city, so the firm would lose their investment in training her. "A car could hit me and they'd lose their investment, too," remarks Mary Lu. "Anyway, it's a myth that you are of no value to the firm for the first two years."

"If a woman lawyer seeking a job is married," continues Mary Lu," they may say, 'Let's be really frank. Women have children. How soon?' It's a legitimate complaint, but there is a high turnover of men, too.

"I really got mad at one attorney who interviewed me: 'What are you going to be doing in 10 years?' How do I know what I am going to be doing in 10 years?" she complains.

Mary Lu had a summer job with a Los Angeles law firm for $200 a week. Discussing her future after graduation, an attorney there suggested that if she wanted to be at home in the future with children, the firm could send a secretary to her home.

Legal work can fit into a married woman's life, according to Mary Lu. It can be done part-time. It can be gone back to after 10 years absence, without her education being obsolete.

SELF-CONFIDENT and with good credientials, Mary Lu finds it hard to be sympathetic to women's liberation movement, although she has attended a number of meetings.

"I have had more education and opportunities than many, many women. I don't need women's liberation. I can do it on my own. Those women are fighting the biological fact that they have the children. It's hard to be sympathetic, except for lower class women who have to have the money and have a lower pay scale. I am sure there is discrimination.

"I have gotten benefits from being a woman," says the young attorney.

Mary Lu didn't date other students in Boalt Hall very often. "It was hard to have good friends because they would ask you out. If you stopped dating someone, you still had to sit next to him in class through the next three years. I decided to make friends outside the law school. I made many friends my last year, after I was married."

At Boalt Hall there were about 18 women in her graduating class of 270.

"TEACHERS WHO tell dirty jokes in class keep right on doing it whether there are girls there or not," reports the new graduate. "Girls are call upon more by teachers. A hush would fall when I was called on. If a girl sounds stupid, they all laugh and think, 'Boy, what a dumb blonde!' They don't react at all if a man makes a dumb mistake."

In the three graduating classes preceding hers a woman stood at the top of the class, according to Mary Lu. There is a weeding out process among women students. The conflicts and taxes professors at Boalt Hall are women, she reports.

Mary Lu worked her way through law school. Summer jobs paid for her fees and books and to pay for her room and board, Mary Lu was student advisor in an upper classmen and graduate co-ed dormitory. She was on duty alternate nights and weekends. "Because I'm from a big family I could stand the noise" says Mary Lu, the second of seven children.

During her second year she was student advisor in a co-ed dorm for 200 students over 21, located near People's Park.

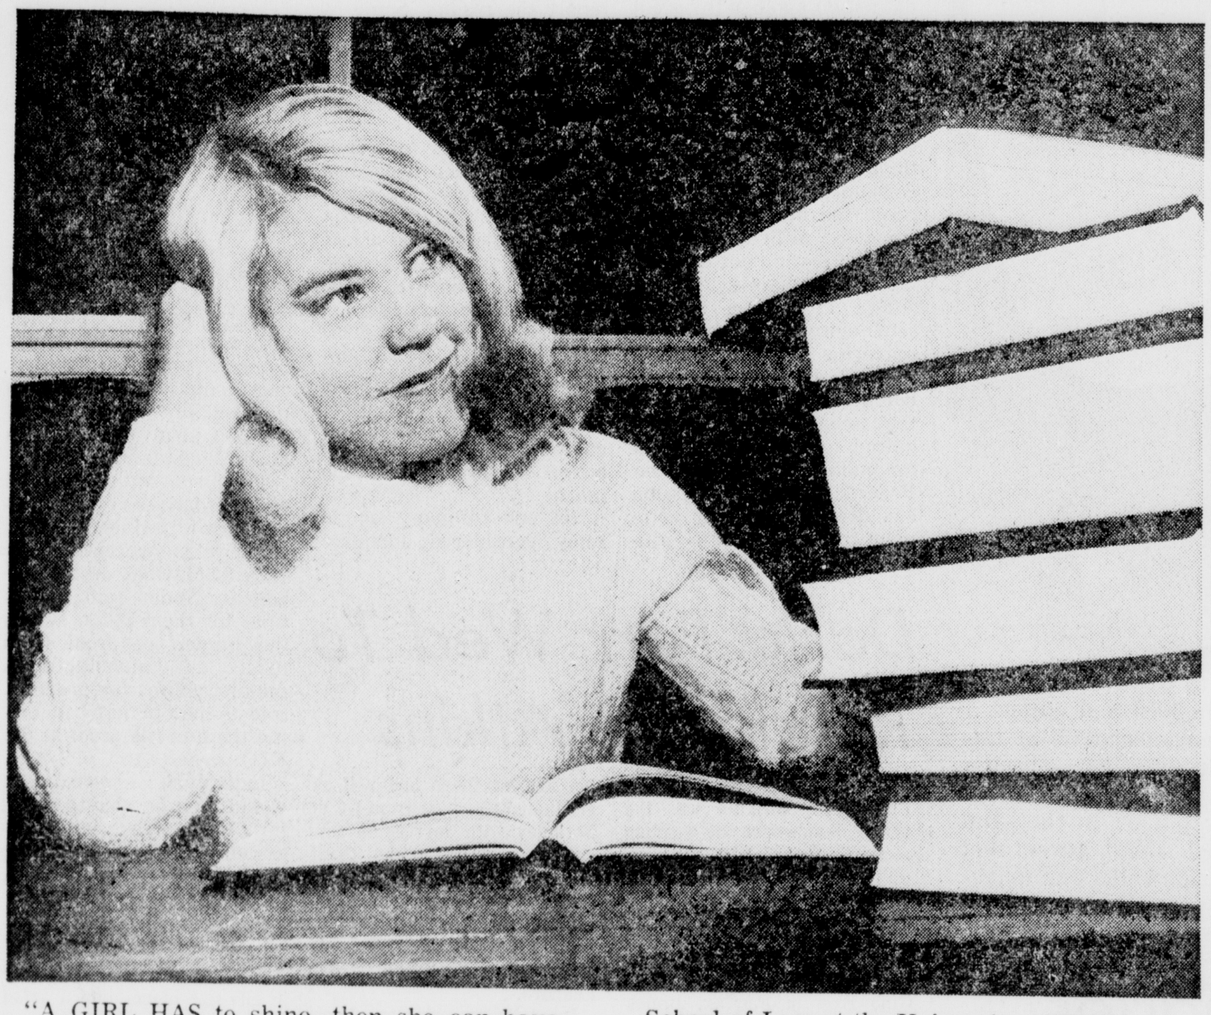
"They used it like a hotel. They had no together-spirit. Nobody would clean up coffee spilled on the stars. They didn't worry about others who would come tearing down those stairs. They wouldn't lock the front door, so there was stealing. Even clothes that were just dried in the laundry would be stolen. All kinds of strange men were walking around on the firls' floors. Strangers would come in and lie right down in their sleeping bags. Rsidents supposed they were somebody's friend," says Mary Lu.

MARY LU and Ken had an apartment in Berkeley after they were married in 1969 at the beginning of their third year in law school. They first met as undergraduates at University of California. Later Mary Lu invited Ken to crew for her father during a week of sailboat races in San Diego. The romance bloomed.

Relating her family background she says, "I think being from a big family makes you more competitive and selfish. You look out for yourself, because if you don't no one is going to.

A trip to the FBI crime laboratory in Washington, D.C., with her mother interested Mary Lu in a scientific and detective career. Studying chemistry at UCLA, she then majored in criminalistics at Berkeley in her junior and senior year. After a summer job as a trainee at Orange County crime laboratory Mary Lu was promised a job upon graduation. Later she learned that Governor Reagan's cut on state hiring closed her job opportunity.

"I had no other plans," relates Mary Lu. When I decided to go to law school my mother was appalled. All the time I was in college she was afraid I'd get married and not finish. But after I graduated she said, 'Don't you think it's time to settle down?' says Mary Lu. "I am sure they would have put me through law school if it did not look like I could do it on my own."



"A GIRL HAS to shine, then she can have her choice of jobs in law firms," says Mary Lu Everett of Tiburon, who with her husband, Ken, just received notice that they had passed the California bar examination. Mary Lu was one of the 18 women of the class of 270 who were graduated from Boalt Hall School of Law at the University of California this year. She was named to the Law Review for her writing ability. She thinks that being a woman in law is becoming fashionable. "A black, a Chicano and a woman lawyer are in demand," she says.

INCOME TAX FACTS

By PETER J. WIKEL

Start Now To Think About Business Automobile Expenses

Now is the time to take a good hard look at your business automobile expense for 1970.

Under the new rules you can deduct 12 cents per mile for the first 15,000 miles of business use of your automobile, plus nine cents per mile for every business mile thereafter.

If you have been itemizing your automobile expenses and they don't amount to 12 cents a mile including straight line depreciation then perhaps you should consider using 12 cents per mile this year instead of itemizing.

On the other hand, suppose you had been using the old 10 cents per mile allowance and you find this year that you have a big bill for repairs, tires, transmission or something, then you might change to itemizing.

You can change each year on the same or different cars provided you have not previously taken the extra first year depreciation allowance on your car or if you have not depreciated by one of the accelerated methods.

STRAIGHT LINE

You must always use the straight line method of depreciation in the years in which you itemize, and you must figure that you have used the straight line method of depreciation for the years you took the standard deduction.

If you are going to itemize this year then have all that needed repair work done, buy those new tires and get the old bus in shape so that next year you will have no expenses on the car and can use the standard rate profitably.

If your itemized expenses are a little soft, that is if your records are not complete, then you would be a lot better off to use the mileage rate because all you have to prove here is the number of miles traveled and the business use of the car.

If you are reimbursed for the business use of your car by your employer at less than 12 cents a mile you can include the reimbursement in income and deduct 12 cents a mile up to the first 15,000 miles and nine cents a mile thereafter.

OVER 12 CENTS

If your reimbursement is over 12 cents a mile but not over 15 cents a mile you wouldn't use this system but you do not have to account for your automobile expenses because you are considered to have accounted to your employer. If your reimbursement is over 15 cents a mile, you will have to include the reimbursement in income and itemize your automobile expenses.

You can use this system and in addition deduct parking fees, bridge tolls, etc.

Also, the mileage allowance for use of your car for charitable purposes or for medical purposes has been increased from five to six cents a mile.

Applications Now Accepted

Applications for admission in the spring semester at the College of Marin will be accepted through Jan. 4, the college has announced.

There have been 1,593 applications received, the college reported, and new students are now being registered.

Registration is closed for returning students, the school said. Almost 2,700 returning students registered, according to the college.

Registration of new students is being held from 9 to 11:30 a.m. and 1 to 4 p.m. weekdays, the college reported.

Burglar Discovers Safe Combination

A burglar descovered the combination and then took $214 from a floor safe at E. L. Egger and Sons Nursery, 2000 Novato Boulevard, Novato, late Sunday or early Monday, police reported.

The burglar discovered a card containing the safe combination atop a cabinet shelf and then opened the safe, police said. The burglary occurred between 5:15 p.m. Monday and 8:20 a.m. yesterday.

Besides Their Own, Addicts Ruin The Lives Of Loved Ones

DEAR HELEN:

I hope you print this so hat some of the kids who et their "highs" and say 's their thing, "don't hase us," will think about the her lives they ruin, or are out to ruin.

I am married to a drug ldict. It is pure hell for me go to work in the morng, try to do my job, while orrying if my husband has und a way to get down day.

Of course there have been ograms — $25 a week and u're cured. Or so many lls, or so much methadone om a center and you don't t sick any more. To all ese programs I say nuts! just wish I could sit at the .N. table and do someing to stop drugs coming to this country, or find the ishers and get them bust- l . . . something, anything . to turn back this epimic.

Helen, I love my guy so uch. His "friends" who ll him "to go and cop for em" think I am the one at is wrong. According to em, a little high doesn't rt . . .And then you're oked.

I found out a year ago, ien I came across a set of works" while cleaning. aybe I was blind before, t in our short marriage, I d never suspected. Dors don't act that much ferent at first. Only those close association with ers know the tortures I nt through while he tried quit, then shot up again, ne after time, when he s tempted.

Now he's on another proam, and he works steadi- But will it last? There'll a day when someone will , "I'll turn you on if you d me $2.00." Then there's e stuff. The best thing an dict can do for a buddy l addicts are "friends") give tastes. That's how u know you have a friend. But I don't have to tell u there are no real pals er a bag of dope. An adct will steal from his own other to support his habit. husband learned, when mother's house was bbed by a "close friend" o borrowed his car supsedly to look for a job, but lly for a cover-up. He d the loot for heroin.

Things have been good for nost a month, but I'm in nstant fear. I take care of the money, see to it he ver carries more than enough for lunch, because he can't trust himself. He's broken off with all his old friends, but they're still around, waiting, and his habit is just asleep for a while. He doens't miss a day saying he's sorry but, Helen, my insides have been torn apart by fear and hurt and not knowing. Is it really finished? I pray!

That's the other side of dope — the slow death users bring to people who love them. — ADDICT'S WIFE

P.S. My husband didn't think he had a habit — "H." was just a little something extra to do with your "brothers" — until he tried to quit.

DEAR WIFE:

Try not to expect the worst: Defeatism in you can make the needle awfully tempting. Addicts aren't doomed for life, especially when their habit is new and fairly small. Perhaps your husband has slipped because "friends" won't leave him alone. Would a move to a new location — away from the heavy drug scene — be an answer? — H.

DEAR HELEN:

In the past week my son paid out almost $200 for car repairs only to find that the repairman didn't install the parts he paid for. It's his word against the man's, and my son is under 19, has fairly long hair (though earns good money) and is therefore not listened to. The car runs no better than before — in fact worse. A lawyer would charge more than he'd get back. What can we do? — MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER:

Try the Small Claims Court. Though limits vary in different states, most such courts handle claims the size of yours — and filing costs are small. Good luck. — H.

LUMINARIOS WILL burn throughout Novato on Christmas Eve and Christmas night. Roxanne Kidder, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kidder shows Mrs. Jane Parsel, a new resident and neighbor in Novato, the way to make them. An old Spanish custom "to light the path to the birthplace of Christ." The custom was brought to Novato by a military family in 1959 and is now a tradition in various areas of the city. The luminarios —brown paper bags with sand in them and a candle placed in the sand — are placed about three feet apart on the sidewalks and driveways.

Christmas Eve Luminarios Are Tradition In Novato

Lighting candles on Christmas Eve and Christmas night has become a tradition in Novato.

The luminarios, as the candles are called are placed on the sidewalk and leading to the doorstep of the home. An old Spanish custom, several versions have been given for the custom but two of them are "to light the path to the birthplace of Christ and the lights will guide the Christ Child to the home."

In 1959, a military family back from the Southwest started the tradition on Hillswood Drive in South Novato with six families participating. Now it has spread throughout the Novato area.

More than 9000 luminarios will be placed in San Marin alone on Christmas Eve. However, if it rains, they will light them Christmas night. Other homeowners associations and neighborhood families are also participating.

The Robert Kidder's daughters, Maryanne 13, Roxanne 11, and Luanne, eight years old, supplied some of their neighbors with the luminarios and demonstrated making them. They are made by filling a 10-inch paper sack with two inches of sand, then turning the top of the bag down to form a cuff and anchoring the candle in the sand. The luminarios should be placed about three feet apart on the sidewalks and driveways.

Shaggy Rug Story Told

NEW YORK (UPI) — Some 300 years ago Scandinavians were permitted to pay their taxes with shaggy rugs.

But past isn't prologue in this case. Not even the rugs remain the same. Contemporary shag rugs are made of nylon, which wasn't even invented say back then, says Karastan, a rug maker.

Santa Claus Is Alive And Well In The Body Of Ralph Nader . . .

By ARTHUR E. ROWSE

WASHINGTON — Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus, and his name is Ralph Nader.

If the editor of the New York Sun who wrote the famous letter to Virginia were still alive, he probably would have started the letter with the above words today.

For the people of the United States have received more presents already from Ralph Nader than they have received from any other source. And they are likely to go on collecting benefits from this man for many years to come even if Nader did not do another thing but play golf, which he would never do.

NADER'S LATEST caper — asking manufacturers for proof of their advertising claims — is the closest thing to a perfect gift for consumers, for it may become the most effective in the most difficult area for buyers: sorting out conflicting product claims.

This move has already sent more shock waves quivering through Madison Avenue than a thousand bombs. And his suggestion that manufacturers be required to submit the proof for public inspection at the Federal Trade Commission has drawn approving comment from several FTC officials.

Yet what Nader has done should not be so shocking. Almost any consumer could write to manufacturers and report the results. Some of the letters were signed by an associate, Aileen Adams, who also received replies although not as many as Nader received.

In their letters to manufacturers, Nader and Miss Adams simply reported what they saw in magazines and on television and asked company presidents for scientific evidence to back up the statements made.

PRODUCTS INCLUDED tires, tonics, soaps, enzymes, bleaches, cold remedies, analgesics, shampoos and gasolines. They included some of the most widely advertised products on the market.

Not one company sent a reply considered adequate by Nader and Miss Adams. Only three of the 58 firms chose to send any clinical data, the value of which was called "dubious" by Nader and Miss Adams.

Sixteen of the companies chose not to reply at all even after subsequent reminder letters were sent in some cases.

Six others refused flatly to furnish any information, saying they would do so only on request of an appropriate government agency.

FOUR ANSWERS included brief descriptions of company tests rather than detailed scientific data which was requested.

Fifteen companies sought to clarify vague statements. These included a suggestion from the maker of a weight-reducing product that Miss Adams "consult your physician and develop alternate methods of reducing your weight."

Eight letters contained personal assurances from company presidents or their representatives that promotional claims were truthful. Another firm retracted an advertising claim.

Two firms offered to send representatives to discuss their advertisements, one of which retracted this offer.

IN SUMMING up the responses, Nader said it was time for the FTC to switch the burden of proof from itself to manufacturers making claims for products sold to the public by requiring them to file proof at the FTC.

Individual consumers would then be able to check for themselves with renewed assurance that the truth still lives in American advertising.

NEW ATTORNEYS

Her Interest Is Criminal, His Is Tax Law

By PAT BALMES

"I was just scared to death my first semester at law school. I worked my head off," says new attorney Mary Lu Everett of Tiburon. "When my final grades were good, I relaxed and thought, 'This is just like anything else.' "

Now the Law Review graduate from Boalt Hall Law School at University of California is celebrating the news that she and her husband, Ken, both passed the recent California bar examination.

THE YOUNG couple spent their first year and a half of marriage finishing law school and studying for the exam.

"Friends asked us how we could stand to be together 24 hours a day all summer studying for the exam. We were too busy to have a fight! There wasn't even time to clean the house, but we both understood," says Mary Lu.

Attending a bar review course every night, the Everetts studied at the Civic Center law library daily from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

"The day before the three-day exam started, we hiked all day along Tiburon's railroad tracks, talking about law," says the young wife.

During the long exam, Mary Lu noticed, "My arm hurt from so much writing, ink in the pen wouldn't flow fast enough and there were too many people."

EACH NIGHT after the exam the Everetts relaxed at the movies.

"Afterward, we didn't care if we passed," remembers Mary Lu, explaining that only 50 per cent of the candidates pass.

"We just took off in our little car and drove for two months from coast to coast."

Will they practice together? Honor student Mary Lu is decisive: husband and wife should not compete.

"Maybe someday the position of women in marriage may be different, but right now I have to live in the system. My marriage is important to me," explains the young woman. She feels her husband is a practical, energetic oral advocate. Ken, a Hastings Law School graduate, plans a career in tax law. Mary Lu has waited to decide on her job, until Ken chose his and confirmed them as San Franciscans.

Since she is interested in criminal law, Mary Lu plans an interview with the Public Defender's Office in Oakland.

"They won't hire you until you pass the bar. Anyway somebody had to work on the house and do the Christmas shopping," remarks the young attorney, who is taking an interior decorating course at night. She has stitched draperies and huge toss pillows to brighten their neat, rented ranch house in Belveron West.

THE NEW graduate has already learned that being a woman in law is fashionable.

"Law firms like to have a woman to show how progressive they are," she remarks wryly. "A black, a Chicano and a woman lawyer are in demand, especially if they are at the top of their class." She is concerned, however, that the woman, though hired might not be promoted.

Being on Law Review dramatically increased interviewing law firms' interest in Mary Lu. She won her place on Law Review, reserved for the top 10 per cent of the class, through a writing competition.

"Writing is the trick in law school," she reveals.

MARY LU explains law firms' attitude toward an unmarried woman lawyer: she might marry a man who would take her to another city, so the firm would lose their investment in training her. "A car could hit me and they'd lose their investment, too," remarks Mary Lu. "Anyway, it's a myth that you are of no value to the firm for the first two years."

"If a woman lawyer seeking a job is married," continues Mary Lu," they may say, 'Let's be really frank. Women have children. How soon?' It's a legitimate complaint, but there is a high turnover of men, too.

"I really got mad at one attorney who interviewed me: 'What are you going to be doing in 10 years?' How do I know what I am going to be doing in 10 years?" she complains.

Mary Lu had a summer job with a Los Angeles law firm for $200 a week. Discussing her future after graduation, an attorney there suggested that if she wanted to be at home in the future with children, the firm could send a secretary to her home.

Legal work can fit into a married woman's life, according to Mary Lu. It can be done part-time. It can be gone back to after 10 years absence, without her education being obsolete.

SELF-CONFIDENT and with good credientials, Mary Lu finds it hard to be sympathetic to women's liberation movement, although she has attended a number of meetings.

"I have had more education and opportunities than many, many women. I don't need women's liberation. I can do it on my own. Those women are fighting the biological fact that they have the children. It's hard to be sympathetic, except for lower class women who have to have the money and have a lower pay scale. I am sure there is discrimination.

"I have gotten benefits from being a woman," says the young attorney.

Mary Lu didn't date other students in Boalt Hall very often. "It was hard to have good friends because they would ask you out. If you stopped dating someone, you still had to sit next to him in class through the next three years. I decided to make friends outside the law school. I made many friends my last year, after I was married."

At Boalt Hall there were about 18 women in her graduating class of 270.

"TEACHERS WHO tell dirty jokes in class keep right on doing it whether there are girls there or not," reports the new graduate. "Girls are call upon more by teachers. A hush would fall when I was called on. If a girl sounds stupid, they all laugh and think, 'Boy, what a dumb blonde!' They don't react at all if a man makes a dumb mistake."

In the three graduating classes preceding hers a woman stood at the top of the class, according to Mary Lu. There is a weeding out process among women students. The conflicts and taxes professors at Boalt Hall are women, she reports.

Mary Lu worked her way through law school. Summer jobs paid for her fees and books and to pay for her room and board, Mary Lu was student advisor in an upper classmen and graduate co-ed dormitory. She was on duty alternate nights and weekends. "Because I'm from a big family I could stand the noise" says Mary Lu, the second of seven children.

During her second year she was student advisor in a co-ed dorm for 200 students over 21, located near People's Park.

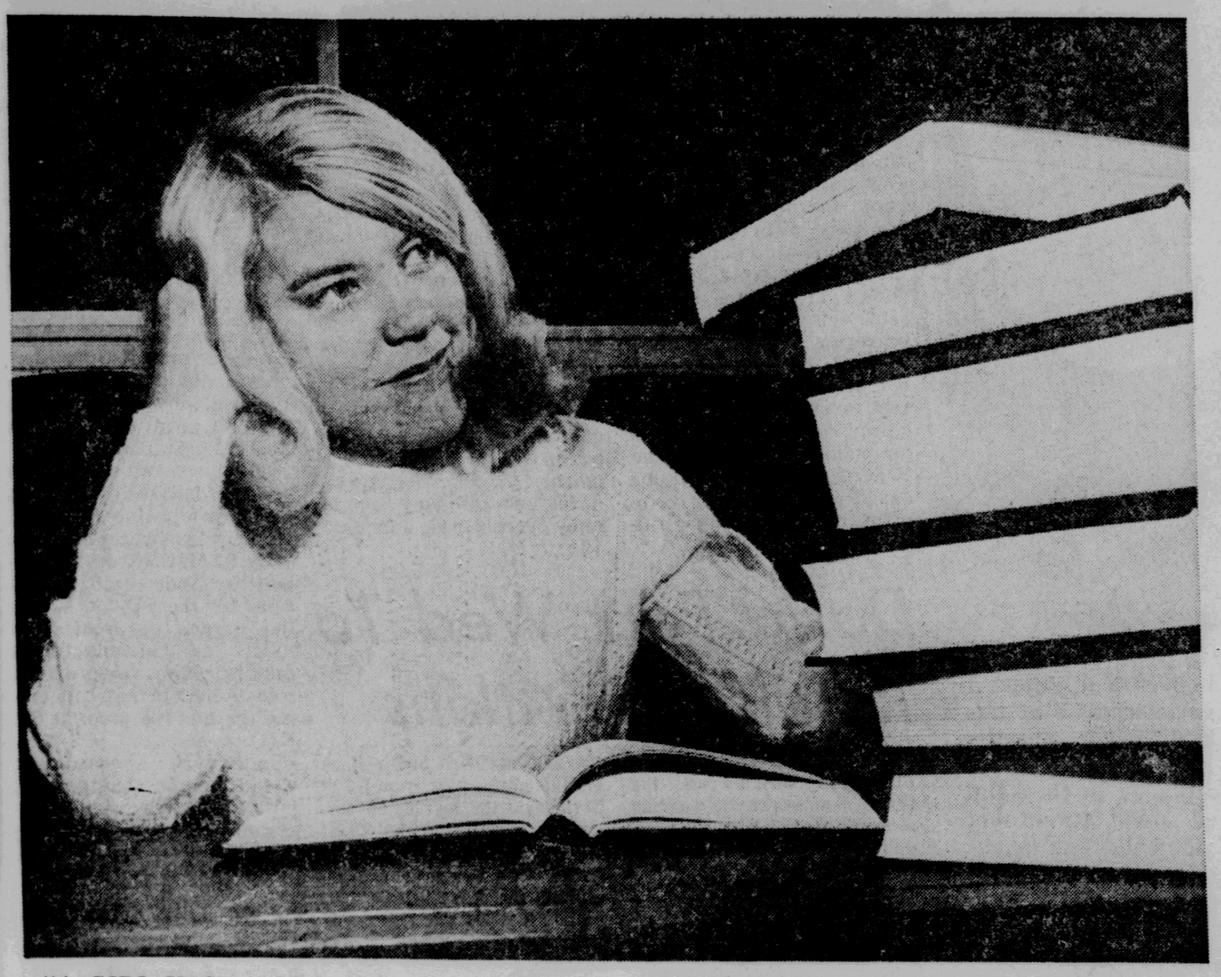
"They used it like a hotel. They had no together-spirit. Nobody would clean up coffee spilled on the stars. They didn't worry about others who would come tearing down those stairs. They wouldn't lock the front door, so there was stealing. Even clothes that were just dried in the laundry would be stolen. All kinds of strange men were walking around on the firls' floors. Strangers would come in and lie right down in their sleeping bags. Rsidents supposed they were somebody's friend," says Mary Lu.

MARY LU and Ken had an apartment in Berkeley after they were married in 1969 at the beginning of their third year in law school. They first met as undergraduates at University of California. Later Mary Lu invited Ken to crew for her father during a week of sailboat races in San Diego. The romance bloomed.

Relating her family background she says, "I think being from a big family makes you more competi. tive and selfish. You look out for yourself, because if you don't no one is going to.

A trip to the FBI crime laboratory in Washington, D.C., with her mother interested Mary Lu in a scientific and detective career. Studying chemistry at UCLA, she then majored in criminalistics at Berkeley in her junior and senior year. After a summer job as a trainee at Orange County crime laboratory Mary Lu was promised a job upon graduation. Later she learned that Governor Reagan's cut on state hiring closed her job opportunity.

"I had no other plans," relates Mary Lu. When I decided to go to law school my mother was appalled. All the time I was in college she was afraid I'd get married and not finish. But after I graduated she said, 'Don't you think it's time to settle down?' says Mary Lu. "I am sure they would have put me through law school if it did not look like I could do it on my own."



"A GIRL HAS to shine, then she can have her choice of jobs in law firms," says Mary Lu Everett of Tiburon, who with her husband, Ken, just received notice that they had passed the California bar examination. Mary Lu was one of the 18 women of the class of 270 who were graduated from Boalt Hall School of Law at the University of California this year. She was named to the Law Review for her writing ability. She thinks that being a woman in law is becoming fashionable. "A black, a Chicano and a woman lawyer are in demand," she says.

Police, Maids In Ticket Battle

CHARLESTON, W.Va., (708)—Policemen in this capital city, apparently resenting the recent addition of Meter Maids to the force, are trying to give more parking tickets than the women, according to a municipal judge.

The judge, John Charnock, called for a cease fire in the latest version of the battle of the sexes.

Charnock said a lawyer had shown him two parking tickets issued to the same car on the same day: one time-stamped 1:00 p.m., the other 1:01 p.m.

He Got Powder

CINCINNATI (UPI)—James Dixon said he wanted a breath of fresh air, but he took a powder instead.

Following sentencing, Dixon told police he felt ill and needed some fresh air. He was permitted to step outside a rear door. He failed to return.

Revised Student Code Adopted Quietly By San Rafael Board

The San Rafael Board of Education last night adopted a revised student policy, including rights and responsibilities. It drew little comment.

The quiet adoption was in contrast to the controversy that erupted when the citizens policy review committee proposed a student bill of rights in October.

The revised policy, described by Supt. John F. Plank as a "modification" of the originally proposed policy, reads:

"The board believes that the rights guaranteed to all citizens within the law shall not be denied to any student . . . so long as student conduct does not impair the safety, health, well-being or rights of the individual or others.

"The board extends to students those constitutional rights and corollary responsibilities which are consistent with orderly educational processes and goals of the San Rafael City Schools.

"Students shall be encouraged, through student government and other types of student activity appropriate to their levels of maturity, to assume responsibility for controlling their own conduct."

Student Member Charles Feden successfully argued that the section covering corporal punishment should provide for notice to parents before any punishment is administered.

Under the policy, the use of corporal punishment "is discouraged, but if a certificated employee finds that, in his opinion, it is necessary to administer corporal punishment, such punishment shall be allowed."

Supt. Plank said such punishment hadn't been "officially" administered since he became superintendent, about four years ago.

The only mention of grooming was a section that said students participating in interschool athletics are expected to be neat and well groomed and their hair "should be worn at a length consistent with good practice of health, safety and performance."

The policy also covers terms of attendance and transfers, handling of school records, discipline, tutoring and student body activities.

It bans hazing, and provides for removing any student possessing or under the influence of drugs or alcohol from the school premises.

Rail Fare Hike

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The State Public Utilities Commission has approved a 10 per cent increase in intrastate railroad passenger fares for the Santa Fe, Southern Pacific, Northwestern Pacific and Union Pacific.

Tupas of 2501 Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, Fairfax; Donald S. Whitecar, son of Mr. and Mrs. Allan K. Whitecar Sr. of 74 Tollingwood Drive, San Rafael, and John D. Paterson son of Mary Paterson of San Rafael.

Local Control Of Physical Education Rules Is Urged

The San Rafael Board of Education was urged last night to seek local control of physical education requirements for high school students.

John L. Levinsohn of 21 Lunada Court opposed the state mandate that requires students to take physical education for four years of high school.

Under the present system, a local board can't take any action of its own regarding physical education requirements, Levinsohn said.

The school board should have the opportunity to make changes in the requirements if it desires, Levinsohn contended.

A check of 23 states disclosed that 16 states "have no graduation requirements for physical education," as California does, he said.

Levinsohn suggested that the board seek to have the physical education requirement dropped for juniors and seniors.

Board member Carl J. Brown, a coach at Sir Francis Drake High School, agreed, saying that the mandated physical education requirement could be limited to the freshman and sophomore years.

Members agreed to consider Levinsohn's proposal Jan. 12 after hearing from the physical education department staff.

After board member Paul L. Jones expressed reservations about spending funds for sabbatical leaves in view of the district's financial state, the board voted to grant sabbatical leaves to four teachers in the high school district and one in the elementary district.

Supt. John F. Plank estimated the leaves would cost $10,600 in the high school district and $4,500 in the elementary district.

Jones felt the funds might better be spent to improve schools, and he questioned the value received by the school districts from sabbatical leaves.

Board president Herman L. Childress said he felt the districts had benefitted. "I've been quite pleased by the result of our sabbaticals to date," he said.

Sue Weinheimer, Richard Bayba and Sally Rupp, teachers at Terra Linda High School and Alan Barahal, San Rafael High School teacher, were granted sabbaticals for the 1971-72 school year at half pay.

Walter Benson, elementary district teacher, was granted a sabbatical for the spring semester, 1972, at full pay.

The San Rafael Board of Education also:

ANNEXATION — Petitioned the City of San Rafael to annex the San Pedro School site, about 10 acres, with the intent of increasing fire and police protection at the site.

FEDERAL GRANT — Authorized application for federal grants for library equipment under the program to improve education of disadvantaged children, $3,900 in the elementary district and $3,914 in the high school district.

NEW COURSES — Approved 18 new elective high school course offerings for the 1971-72 school year.

BUDGET — Received a report from Business Mgr. Charles L. Condrotte that as of Oct. 31, the elementary school district budget reserve was at $313,296, and the high school district budget reserve at $491,949.

CAFETERIAS — Received a report that high school cafeterias showed a profit of $521 and the elementary cafeterias a profit of $102 during November.

FIRING — After a closed hearing on an appeal by Lewis Watkins, custodian 1, Terra Linda High School, voted in open session to follow the recommendation of Supt. John F. Plank that Watkins, a probationary employee, be fired.

CLAIM DENIED — Denied a claim by Janet J. Peters for $10,000 for injuries to her right leg reportedly suffered in a fall at Coleman School grounds, Aug. 29.

The bank is one of 230 outlets statewide through which paid reservations may be made.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

Besides Their Own, Addicts Ruin The Lives Of Loved Ones

DEAR HELEN:
I hope you print this so hat some of the kids who et their "highs" and say 's their thing, "don't has- e us," will think about the her lives they ruin, or are out to ruin.

I am married to a drug ldict. It is pure hell for me go to work in the morn- g, try to do my job, while orrying if my husband has und a way to get down day.

Of course there have been ograms — $25 a week and u're cured. Or so many lls, or so much methadone om a center and you don't t sick any more. To all ese programs I say nuts! just wish I could sit at the N. table and do some- ing to stop drugs coming to this country, or find the ishers and get them bust- l . . . something, anything . to turn back this epi- mic.

Helen, I love my guy so uch. His "friends" who ll him "to go and cop for em" think I am the one at is wrong. According to em, a little high doesn't rt . . .And then you're oked.

I found out a year ago, hen I came across a set of works" while cleaning. aybe I was blind before, t in our short marriage, I d never suspected. Do- rs don't act that much ferent at first. Only those close association with ers know the tortures I nt through while he tried quit, then shot up again, e after time, when he s tempted.

Now he's on another pro- am, and he works steadi- But will it last? There'll a day when someone will , "I'll turn you on if you d me $2.00." Then there's e stuff. The best thing an dict can do for a buddy l addicts are "friends") give tastes. That's how u know you have a friend. But I don't have to tell u there are no real pals r a bag of dope. An ad- t will steal from his own other to support his habit. husband learned, when mother's house was bed by a "close friend" o borrowed his car sup- sedly to look for a job, but lly for a cover-up. He d the loot for heroin.

Things have been good for nost a month, but I'm in nstant fear. I take care of the money, see to it he ver carries more than en- ough for lunch, because he can't trust himself. He's broken off with all his old friends, but they're still around, waiting, and his habit is just asleep for a while. He doens't miss a day saying he's sorry but, Helen, my insides have been torn apart by fear and hurt and not knowing. Is it really finished? I pray!

That's the other side of dope — the slow death users bring to people who love them. — ADDICT'S WIFE

P.S. My husband didn't think he had a habit — "H." was just a little something extra to do with your "brothers" — until he tried to quit.

DEAR WIFE:
Try not to expect the worst: Defeatism in you can make the needle awfully tempting. Addicts aren't doomed for life, especially when their habit is new and fairly small. Perhaps your husband has slipped because "friends" won't leave him alone. Would a move to a new location — away from the heavy drug scene — be an answer? — H.

DEAR HELEN:
In the past week my son paid out almost $200 for car repairs only to find that the repairman didn't install the parts he paid for. It's his word against the man's, and my son is under 19, has fairly long hair (though earns good money) and is therefore not listened to. The car runs no better than before — in fact worse. A lawyer would charge more than he'd get back. What can we do? — MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER:
Try the Small Claims Court. Though limits vary in different states, most such courts handle claims the size of yours — and filing costs are small. Good luck. — H.

LUMINARIOS WILL burn throughout Novato on Christmas Eve and Christmas night. Roxanne Kidder, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kidder shows Mrs. Jane Parsel, a new resident and neighbor in Novato, the way to make them. An old Spanish custom "to light the path to the birthplace of Christ." The custom was brought to Novato by a military family in 1959 and is now a tradition in various areas of the city. The luminarios —brown paper bags with sand in them and a candle placed in the sand — are placed about three feet apart on the sidewalks and driveways.

Christmas Eve Luminarios Are Tradition In Novato

Lighting candles on Christmas Eve and Christmas night has become a tradition in Novato.

The luminarios, as the candles are called are placed on the sidewalk and leading to the doorstep of the home. An old Spanish custom, several versions have been given for the custom but two of them are "to light the path to the birthplace of Christ and the lights will guide the Christ Child to the home."

In 1959, a military family back from the Southwest started the tradition on Hillswood Drive in South Novato with six families participating. Now it has spread throughout the Novato area.

More than 9000 luminarios will be placed in San Marin alone on Christmas Eve. However, if it rains, they will light them Christmas night. Other homeowners associations and neighborhood families are also participating.

The Robert Kidder's daughters, Maryanne 13, Roxanne 11, and Luanne, eight years old, supplied some of their neighbors with the luminarios and demonstrated making them. They are made by filling a 10-inch paper sack with two inches of sand, then turning the top of the bag down to form a cuff and anchoring the candle in the sand. The luminarios should be placed about three feet apart on the sidewalks and driveways.

Santa Claus Is Alive And Well In The Body Of Ralph Nader . . .

By ARTHUR E. ROWSE

WASHINGTON — Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus, and his name is Ralph Nader.

If the editor of the New York Sun who wrote the famous letter to Virginia were still alive, he probably would have started the letter with the above words today.

For the people of the United States have received more presents already from Ralph Nader than they have received from any other source. And they are likely to go on collecting benefits from this man for many years to come even if Nader did not do another thing but play golf, which he would never do.

NADER'S LATEST caper — asking manufacturers for proof of their advertising claims — is the closest thing to a perfect gift for consumers, for it may become the most effective in the most difficult area for buyers: sorting out conflicting product claims.

This move has already sent more shock waves quivering through Madison Avenue than a thousand bombs. And his suggestion that manufacturers be required to submit the proof for public inspection at the Federal Trade Commission has drawn approving comment from several FTC officials.

Yet what Nader has done should not be so shocking. Almost any consumer could write to manufacturers and report the results. Some of the letters were signed by an associate, Aileen Adams, who also received replies although not as many as Nader received.

In their letters to manufacturers, Nader and Miss Adams simply reported what they saw in magazines and on television and asked company presidents for scientific evidence to back up the statements made.

PRODUCTS INCLUDED tires, tonics, soaps, enzymes, bleaches, cold remedies, analgesics, shampoos and gasolines. They included some of the most widely advertised products on the market.

Not one company sent a reply considered adequate by Nader and Miss Adams. Only three of the 58 firms chose to send any clinical data, the value of which was called "dubious" by Nader and Miss Adams.

Sixteen of the companies chose not to reply at all even after subsequent reminder letters were sent in some cases.

Six others refused flatly to furnish any information, saying they would do so only on request of an appropriate government agency.

FOUR ANSWERS included brief descriptions of company tests rather than detailed scientific data which was requested.

Fifteen companies sought to clarify vague statements. These included a suggestion from the maker of a weight-reducing product that Miss Adams "consult your physician and develop alternate methods of reducing your weight."

Eight letters contained personal assurances from company presidents or their representatives that promotional claims were truthful. Another firm retracted an advertising claim.

Two firms offered to send representatives to discuss their advertisements, one of which retracted this offer.

IN SUMMING up the responses, Nader said it was time for the FTC to switch the burden of proof from itself to manufacturers making claims for products sold to the public by requiring them to file proof at the FTC.

Individual consumers would then be able to check for themselves with renewed assurance that the truth still lives in American advertising.

Council Hears Noise Ordinance, Protests

The San Anselmo City Council deferred action last night on a new antinoise ordinance after residents objected it didn't go far enough.

The council, worried about rising noise levels in the community, announced its intention to beef up the current law, which prohibits only "nerve-wracking noises between 9 a.m. and 8 p.m."

City Atty. John G. Buresh submitted a model ordinance which declares unlawful "excessive, unnecessary or unusually loud" noise and sets general standards for the playing of radios, phonographs, loudspeakers, honking of horns and construction and industrial noises.

An optional section of the proposed ordinance establishes precise noise levels permissible in certain districts.

While Mayor James F. Reed was prepared to take steps toward adopting only the first section of the measure, two residents objected that the standards were vague and made little improvement on the existing ordinance. They recommended adopting the optional section as well.

Reed, heeding the advice of Buresh, said, "I agree there is weakness in the first section but I'd rather have something that at least defines noise."

The council hedged at adopting the optional section as well because of enforcement cost. City Administrator-Controller Alfred C. Kaeppel said a portable noise measuring unit of the type needed would cost up to $2,900.

The council decided to present the model ordinance at the next meeting of the Marin County Mayors and Councilmen to determine interest in county-wide adoption of the full measure. Costs could be divided among participating cities.

The San Anselmo City Council also:

LIBRARY — Asked for endorsement of a proposed reciprocal agreement with the Larkspur Library from the newly reorganized San Anselmo Library Board of Trustees before such a pact is considered. Several councilmen expressed concern an agreement with Larkspur was premature.

STUDY — Voted 4-1 to make a preliminary application for federal matching funds under the 701 program toward a project to determine how the city can lessen the tax burden on its residents for services. Mayor Reed stressed the application was not binding and the city could withdraw at a future time. Councilman Woodrow V. Capurro dissented, saying such a project would unduly encumber city funds.

CRIME — Endorsed creation of a crime laboratory in Marin after Police Chief Raymond R. Buchignani reported state officials would no longer accept for analysis narcotics seized in the county because of a heavy workload. It asked the council of mayors and councilmen to endorse the project as well.

WIDENING — Was told by City Engineer Charles R. Leitzell of the City of San Rafael's plans to widen the Miracle Mile to six lanes to the San Anselmo city line. Leitzell foresaw no adverse effect on San Anselmo traffic.

ZONING — Modified uses permitted in C-1 districts to allow greater flexibility in the types of businesses permitted in such zones.

SALARIES — Changed its negotiation procedure with city employees to try to avoid prolonged salary talks which require the city to give pay raises retroactive to July 1, the start of a fiscal year. The new procedure makes raises effective July 1, if adopted before that date, or on the first day of the month following adoption, if the raises are approved after July 1. The council also included department heads and the police captain and assistant fire chief in a negotiating unit.

SENIORS — Authorized Kaeppel and the local senior citizens' group to work out a program under which aged persons would sell permits to city parking lots to commuters, taking a percentage of the proceeds.

PARK — Decided to see if an employee of the San Francisco Parks and Recreation Department, who has said he would donate time to help master plan the Robson-Harrington Park, is available to attend public hearings on the issue. It also said it wanted planning cost estimates from a professional park planner.

COMMITTEE — Named James Cowperthwaite to the citizens committee on zoning and housing.

Bridge Mishap Injures Three

One person was hospitalized and two others treated at Marin General Hospital after a head-on collision at 12:05 a.m. today on the Richardson Bay Bridge, the California Highway Patrol has reported.

Patrick W. Finlay, 44, of 835 South McDowell Boulevard, Petaluma, was reported in good condition today at Marin General Hospital with multiple scrapes and bruises.

Officers said his car collided with one driven by Eugene Marty, 28, of San Francisco, who was treated at the hospital for a scraped right leg and low back strain. A passenger, Maureen Doherty, 23, also of San Francisco, was treated for scalp, knee and hand bruises and a possible concussion.

Four-Car Crash Injures Two

Two persons received minor injuries yesterday at 5:40 p.m. in a four-car pileup on the Manuel Freitas Parkway overcrossing of Highway 101 in San Rafael, according to the California Highway Patrol.

Lois L. Collard, 45, of Santa Clara, was treated at Marin General Hospital for a cut lip and bruised right knee and fingers. David A. Watts, 43, of 101 Garden Avenue, San Rafael, was to see his own doctor for pain of the right leg.

The highway patrol identified the other two drivers as Deborah J. Lundgren, 16, of 14 Cresah J. Lundgren, 16, of 14 Cresthaven Drive, Santa Venetia, and Lynn D. Carter, 16, of 94 De La Guerra Road, San Rafael.

Two Change Their Pleas On Cocaine

SAN FRANCISCO — Two of seven Marinites charged with conspiracy to sell cocaine have changed their pleas to guilty in U.S. District Court here.

Maureen Booth, 24, and Sharon Ann Needleman, 26 of San Anselmo have pleaded guilty and are to appear for sentencing Jan. 15.

To appear on that date for trial are Mitchell J. Howard, 22, of Marin City, Steve Howard, 24, of Sausalito and Marcia Freet, 27 of Sausalito.

Robert Bernard Ford, 21, and Mark Robert Shanahan, also 21, both of Kentfield, are to appear Jan. 8 for setting of a trial date.

All but the two Howards were arrested May 22 at San Francisco International Airport after undercover agents purchased cocaine worth $250,000 on the drug market.

The Howards were arrested in Sausalito.

The arrests came after a lengthy investigation that included three purchases of cocaine by narcotics agents.

Nine Enter Race For Junior Miss

Nine Central Marin high school senior girls have entered the Junior Miss Pageant sponsored by the San Rafael Jaycees.

Judging of the girls for the pageant will be at 8:30 p.m. Jan. 2 at San Rafael High School auditorium, said Robert Callahan, publicity chairman. The winner will receive $100 in cash and go on to the state finals Jan. 23 to 30 in Santa Rosa, according to Callahan.

The Junior Miss program is not a beauty contest. Girls are judged on scholarship, mental alertness, youth fitness, poise and appearance, and talent in creative and performing arts.

Entrants are: Anita Stover, Peggy Jean Chater, Ruth Mackay and Anne Claire Fagley, all of Redwood High School; Amy Marie Strand and Suzanne Dee La Belle of Sir Francis Drake High School; Rebecca Olivia Jones of San Rafael High School; Alice Jacobs of Tamalpais High School and Karyn Nikas of Terra Linda High School.

Car Flips Over, Petalumans Hurt

Two Petalumans were treated today at Novato General Hospital for leg bruises after a single-car accident on Highway 101 south of Novato, the California Highway Patrol has reported.

Lula Georgeatos, 40, and Robert L. Georgeatos, 14, both of 75 Queens Lane, were injured when their car left the freeway and overturned at 12:05 a.m. today.

Officers said Lula Georgeatos apparently dozed at the wheel.

Immunity Tests Can Save Babies

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI) — A revolution in microbiology may insure the health of millions of babies before they are born, says President J. P. Barger of Dynatech Corp.

Dynatech is presently developing a broad-range of low cost kits to test young women before pregnancy for specific immunities to diseases during pregnancy that cause birth defects and mental retardation.

Although tests for these specific immunities have been available in the past, costs of the tests made them prohibitive for most women. But Barger says doctors all over the world have been clamoring for a drastic reduction in costs and companies such as Dynatech are producing low cost test kits that eventually will put them within the reach of most couples.

Christmas Bonus In Bridge Commute Books: Ferry Tickets

Two one-way tickets for the ferry will be inserted in each bridge commute ticket book sold after Dec. 31.

The aim of the 90-day trial will be to see if the promotional scheme succeeds in shifting more bridge commuters to the ferry. The tickets will be valid only during weekday commuter hours.

The regular one-way fare on the ferry is 50 cents.

Bridge directors also set a special dime-per-person, round-trip fare for supervised groups of children.

Gen. Mgr. Dale W. Luehring pushed unsuccessfully for limiting the privilege to groups of 15 or more children and to midday ferry runs from Sept. 1 to June 15. But bridge directors brushed off his argument that the ferry often was too crowded at other times, agreeing to restrict the special fare if his fears were confirmed by experience.

Golden Gate Bridge District directors also:

COMMUTERS — Received report from Luehring that 71 per cent of the autos during commuter hours, counted last Wednesday, carried only the driver, that 24 per cent had one passenger and only 2 per cent carried three or more passengers.

FERRY RIDERS — Received report that 261,690 passengers rode the Sausalito ferry in its first four months of operation, and that the district earned $1,934 in November from the ferry concessionaire.

BUSES — Received report that 169 persons rode the bus run between North and Central Marin during its first week of operation, and that revenue totaled $45.

SHAFT — Bought a spare propeller shaft for the Sausalito ferry at a cost of $3,803 from the Pacific Dry Dock & Repair Co. of Oakland, which proposed the lowest price offered by three companies.

FUNERALS — Extended the definition of immediate family to include in-laws for purposes of taking sick leave to attend funerals. The extension was asked by the Teamsters Union.

CLUB BUS — Referred to the transportation-finance committee a proposal to subsidize a charter bus between Mill Valley and the University of California Medical Center in San Francisco. The cost of subsidy will be under $6 a month per person if the 38-passenger bus is filled.

Police, Maids In Ticket Battle

CHARLESTON, W.Va., (708) —Policemen in this capital city, apparently resenting the recent addition of Meter Maids to the force, are trying to give more parking tickets than the women, according to a municipal judge.

The judge, John Charnock, called for a cease fire in the latest version of the battle of the sexes.

Charnock said a lawyer had shown him two parking tickets issued to the same car on the same day: one time-stamped 1:00 p.m., the other 1:01 p.m.

He Got Powder

CINCINNATI (UPI)—James Dixon said he wanted a breath of fresh air, but he took a powder instead.

Dixon, 29, was convicted of driving without a license and sentenced to 10 days in the workhouse in traffic court here.

Following sentencing, Dixon told police he felt ill and needed some fresh air. He was permitted to step outside a rear door. He failed to return.

Police say they may have some difficulty in locating Dixon because he listed three home addresses.

Revised Student Code Adopted Quietly By San Rafael Board

The San Rafael Board of Education last night adopted a revised student policy, including rights and responsibilities. It drew little comment.

The quiet adoption was in contrast to the controversy that erupted when the citizens policy review committee proposed a student bill of rights in October.

The revised policy, described by Supt. John F. Plank as a "modification" of the originally proposed policy, reads:

"The board believes that the rights guaranteed to all citizens within the law shall not be denied to any student . . . so long as student conduct does not impair the safety, health, well-being or rights of the individual or others.

"The board extends to students those constitutional rights and corollary responsibilities which are consistent with orderly educational processes and goals of the San Rafael City Schools.

"Students shall be encouraged, through student government and other types of student activity appropriate to their levels of maturity, to assume responsibility for controlling their own conduct."

Student Member Charles Feden successfully argued that the section covering corporal punishment should provide for notice to parents before any punishment is administered.

Under the policy, the use of corporal punishment "is discouraged, but if a certificated employee finds that, in his opinion, it is necessary to administer corporal punishment, such punishment shall be allowed."

Supt. Plank said such punishment hadn't been "officially" administered since he became superintendent, about four years ago.

The only mention of grooming was a section that said students participating in interschool athletics are expected to be neat and well groomed and their hair "should be worn at a length consistent with good practice of health, safety and performance."

The policy also covers terms of attendance and transfers, handling of school records, discipline, tutoring and student body activities.

It bans hazing, and provides for removing any student possessing or under the influence of drugs or alcohol from the school premises.

Local Control Of Physical Education Rules Is Urged

The San Rafael Board of Education was urged last night to seek local control of physical education requirements for high school students.

John L. Levinsohn of 21 Lunada Court opposed the state mandate that requires students to take physical education for four years of high school.

Under the present system, a local board can't take any action of its own regarding physical education requirements, Levinsohn said.

The school board should have the opportunity to make changes in the requirements if it desires, Levinsohn contended.

A check of 23 states disclosed that 16 states "have no graduation requirements for physical education," as California does, he said.

Levinsohn suggested that the board seek to have the physical education requirement dropped for juniors and seniors.

Board member Carl J. Brown, a coach at Sir Francis Drake High School, agreed, saying that the mandated physical education requirement could be limited to the freshman and sophomore years.

Members agreed to consider Levinsohn's proposal Jan. 12 after hearing from the physical education department staff.

After board member Paul L. Jones expressed reservations about spending funds for sabbatical leaves in view of the district's financial state, the board voted to grant sabbatical leaves to four teachers in the high school district and one in the elementary district.

Supt. John F. Plank estimated the leaves would cost $10,600 in the high school district and $4,500 in the elementary district.

Jones felt the funds might better be spent to improve schools, and he questioned the value received by the school districts from sabbatical leaves.

Board president Herman L. Childress said he felt the districts had benefitted. "I've been quite pleased by the result of our sabbaticals to date," he said.

Sue Weinheimer, Richard Bayba and Sally Rupp, teachers at Terra Linda High School and Alan Barahal, San Rafael High School teacher, were granted sabbaticals for the 1971-72 school year at half pay.

Walter Benson, elementary district teacher, was granted a sabbatical for the spring semester, 1972, at full pay.

The San Rafael Board of Education also:

ANNEXATION — Petitioned the City of San Rafael to annex the San Pedro School site, about 10 acres, with the intent of increasing fire and police protection at the site.

FEDERAL GRANT — Authorized application for federal grants for library equipment under the program to improve education of disadvantaged children, $3,900 in the elementary district and $3,914 in the high school district.

NEW COURSES — Approved 18 new elective high school course offerings for the 1971-72 school year.

BUDGET — Received a report from Business Mgr. Charles L. Condrotte that as of Oct. 31, the elementary school district budget reserve was at $313,206, and the high school district budget reserve at $491,949.

CAFETERIAS — Received a report that high school cafeterias showed a profit of $521 and the elementary cafeterias a profit of $102 during November.

FIRING — After a closed hearing on an appeal by Lewis Watkins, custodian 1, Terra Linda High School, voted in open session to follow the recommendation of Supt. John F. Plank that Watkins, a probationary employee, be fired.

CLAIM DENIED — Denied a claim by Janet J. Peters for $10,000 for injuries to her right leg reportedly suffered in a fall at Coleman School grounds, Aug. 29.

GIFTS — Acknowledged as gifts, for San Rafael High School, 64 science books from William Dresia, three fish tanks from Seymour Kashin, and a used refrigerator from Tom Ushino; for Terra Linda High School, a vacuum cleaner from Mr. and Mrs. Burton Bergstrom, a photo enlarger and assorted darkroom equipment from Robert Links, and assorted paints, varnishes and colors from Mrs. G. N. Compagno; and $800 from the San Pedro School Parent-Teacher Association for the school library.

NEXT SESSION — Adjourned until 8 p.m. Jan. 5 for a general discussion on education, with the next regularly scheduled meeting to be held at 8 p.m. Jan. 12, both sessions at the district office, Third and E streets.

TEXTBOOK — Approved "Tune In To Health," by Felice and Carolan as a textbook for a pilot course in health education at Terra Linda High School.

Board member John C. Pfeiffer was absent.

SACRAMENTO — Marin and Southern Sonoma residents wishing to beat the rush for state campground space next summer may make reservations beginning Jan. 4 at the Sierra National Bank, 16 Petaluma Boulevard North, Petaluma.

The bank is one of 230 outlets statewide through which paid reservations may be made.

Director William Penn Mott Jr. of the state Parks and Recreation Department said the reservations are being handled by a newly contracted firm, Ticketron, Inc. The computer company used by the state last year went out of business.

Apartment Plan Reprieve

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — A threatened bar to a 102-unit apartment project on Strawberry Cove was dropped yesterday by the San Francisco Bay Regional Water Quality Control Board.

The board's staff earlier this month had indicated that sewage treatment facilities may be inadequate to handle the project, but the board yesterday agreed it would not know until May whether its staff's fear justified blocking the project.

The board has no power to block the project, but its recommendation has been sought by the Bay Conservation and Development Commission, which is considering a fill permit for the project. Yesterday's decision was to agree not to recommend denial of the permit by the BCDC.

But the board warned that it may order a ban on all new sewer connections — in effect a ban on all new construction in the area — if the study due in May shows the sewerage system already is overloaded.

The study is to be done by the Sausalito-Marin City Sanitary District, which also treats wastes from the Tamalpais Valley and Richardson Bay sanitary districts. The board ordered the study as part of tough new standards set for the Sausalito-Marin City district's sewage treatment.

Cyril Hansen, president of the district board, assured the regional board that his board already had ordered steps to upgrade its sewage treatment. He disputed a statement by the regional board's staff that the district still was dumping raw sewage into the bay during heavy rainfall.

Dennis Mishek, the regional board's engineer for Marin, however, said that construction of the Strawberry Cove project would mean that raw sewage would be dumped into Richardson Bay above the Richardson Bay Bridge. Board members did not respond to this point.

Paul Broman, developer of the Strawberry Cove project, said he would not object to a ban on all new connections, but successfully urged the board not to make him "the whipping boy" by singling out his project for denial by the BCDC.

Broman said it would be "unfair" to make him postpone the BCDC permit until after the sanitary district's study is done in May. He noted that he was facing inflation at the rate of three-quarters of a per cent a month on the $2 million project.

Inmate Who Left Gets New Term

A San Quentin prison inmate has been sentenced to a year in state prison by Judge E. Warren McGuire of Marin Superior Court for failing to report back to the prison from a work furlough job Aug. 18, 1969.

Peter Dunham, 35, had less than a month remaining until his parole date when he did not return to the prison from his job on a Contra Costa County newspaper.

Judge McGuire on Monday ordered the new sentence to run concurrently with a five years to life term Dunham is serving for a 1958 Los Angeles County conviction for furnishing and possessing narcotics.

Tiburon Sanitary District Plans Hit

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Tiburon Sanitary District's battle to go it alone in Southern Marin was dealt an apparently fatal blow yesterday by the San Francisco Bay Regional Water Quality Control Board.

The district has refused to join other Southern Marin sanitary districts in a study of a joint sewerage system to solve the problem of pollution in Richardson Bay. Both the district board, and the City of Belvedere, which pipes its wastes to the district for treatment, have insisted that they were not polluting Richardson Bay because their wastes are dumped in Raccoon Straits.

The district has banked its opposition to joining the study on the basis of its plans for a new treatment system — a system that will require federal matching funds to build. But the regional board would have to approve the district's application for federal funds.

The regional board did not review the district's application yesterday, but it declared it will require the district to "participate" in the study as a condition of the regional board's approval of any construction grant application. The board cited a 1968 state study that recommended all Southern Marin sanitary districts consolidate and dump their treated waste in the ocean.

ROSS'S TB PATIENTS

Lonely Time Of Year

By LARRY MOWELL

The Christmas season is a joyous time for most families. Trimming the tree, exchanging presents and singing carols provide a closeness missing at other times of the year.

While most families will enjoy Christmas morning opening presents together, the 20 tuberculosis patients at Ross General Hospital will be forced by the requirements of their cure to remain in their segregated wing.

Modern drugs have saved sufferers of the respiratory disease from hopeless years in a sanatorium, but the disease still forces several months of hospitalization.

For the patients whose months of treatment overlap Christmas, the holiday season is a bittersweet time.

Mary Horn, 45, of Berkeley, who had learned of her illness less than a month before Christmas, said it knocked her Christmas plans "all to pieces."

Her four children and her husband will visit on Christmas, she said, but it won't be the same. Although the customary Christmas celebration is precluded, "we are decorating our own little cubbyholes and trying to get the Christmas spirit," Mrs. Horn said.

Mrs. Horn, Kathleen Sullivan, a San Francisco secretary, and Sausalito housewife Julie Taylor were the only ones on the ward the other day willing to discuss their situations and admitted being perhaps more optimistic than their counterparts.

Miss Sullivan, a fine-boned graying woman who said she hasn't been unhappy during her four months in the ward, told of a woman who has.

The woman was transferred from the ward to Marin General Hospital for two days last month to deliver a daughter. The young mother, Miss Sullivan said, has been upset since about being separated from her child.

Separations are required at first to protect others from the infection so the patient is cloistered for about two weeks. Patients are released when samples of sputum contain no tuberculosis, but must continue to take drugs for about two years.

Mrs. Taylor, 27, who lives at 95 Santa Rosa Avenue, also has small children, the youngest born only four months before she entered the hospital Oct. 16.

Nevertheless, she said, "I am beginning to enjoy the hospital better and better which worries me a little bit."

She said she has enjoyed the opportunity to pamper her artistic bent through ceramics, sculpting and weaving.

Those are only three of the crafts taught to patients by the Terrace's two occupational therapists during almost nine daily hours of free time, according to Mrs. B. Peterson, nursing supervisor.

Mrs. Peterson said the patients are awakened at 7 a.m. for breakfast, given medication and examined by a doctor. They are free from 9 a.m. until lunch at 11:30 a.m.

Following a rest period from noon to 2 p.m., they have free time until dinner for watching television, playing the piano, shooting pool, sunbathing or learning a craft, she said.

Dinner is followed by more free time, Mrs. Peterson said. Patients retire at 9:30 or 10 p.m.

The Terrace was established in 1925 when treatment consisted primarily of bed-rest and good food, according to Dr. Robert W. Clark, chief of the ward.

Because tuberculosis has declined since that time and a cure has been discovered, other sanatoriums went out of business leaving Ross's the only one in Marin. It attracts patients from all over Northern California, according to Clark.

While Mrs. Taylor said she is enjoying her stay and receives numerous visits from her family, she had misgivings about spending Christmas in the hospital.

"It is very sad when all the carolers come. It makes me feel awful. It makes me want to cry. It is easier if you are here not to celebrate," the slim, dark-haired housewife said in the slightly hoarse voice that typifies her ailment.

"It is just difficult to celebrate Christmas in the hospital and give it much meaning because so much of Christmas is being with the family and presents and the dinner," she said.

Two Of 15 Plants Are Up To Par

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Only two of 15 sewage treatment plants in Marin are in continuous compliance with disinfection requirements.

That report was issued yesterday by the San Francisco Bay Regional Water Quality Control Board.

The two, based on data for January through September, are the Sausalito-Marin City Sanitary District and the San Rafael Sanitation District's main plant.

The summary of performance issued by the regional board's staff did not deal with compliance with treatment requirements other than disinfection of bacteria.

Ocean Dumping Ban Set For Bay Area

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — The nation's first ban on ocean dumping of poisonous industrial wastes was imposed yesterday by the San Francisco Bay Regional Water Quality Control Board.

The action formally ordered the ban asked by the board after state biologists branded the wastes as the prime suspect in the long decline of the region's crab catch. (The ban and the reason for it were reported in detail by the Independent-Journal on Dec. 2.)

Board chairman William C. Weber of San Mateo said "we've got to stop using the ocean as a garbage can."

The board's staff explained that the ban will apply to wastes coming from the bay region. "We're not trying to tell Tokyo what to do," said one.

The regional board's action upstaged the Nixon administration, which has yet to introduce its proposed nationwide ban on ocean dumping. The administration's ban would be policed by the Coast Guard, and violators could be fined $50,000.

Just who will police the regional board's ban was unclear. Board members indicated that they expected the job to be aided by the State Department of Fish and Game, but a department spokesman told the board that it had neither funds nor equipment to do the job.

The regional board itself has only one 31-foot cruiser to police the bay.

The ban will be effective in the Gulf of the Farallones on Jan. 1, and bar dumping even beyond the gulf by the end of 1971. The primary targets of the order were U.S. Steel Copr., which was given until April 30 to stop all ocean dumping, and Standard Oil Co., which was given until the end of 1971.

Council Hears Noise Ordinance, Protests

The San Anselmo City Council deferred action last night on a new antinoise ordinance after residents objected it didn't go far enough.

The council, worried about rising noise levels in the community, announced its intention to beef up the current law, which prohibits only "nerve-wracking noises between 9 a.m. and 8 p.m."

City Atty. John G. Buresh submitted a model ordinance which declares unlawful "excessive, unnecessary or unusually loud" noise and sets general standards for the playing of radios, phonographs, loudspeakers, honking of horns and construction and industrial noises.

An optional section of the proposed ordinance establishes precise noise levels permissible in certain districts.

While Mayor James F. Reed was prepared to take steps toward adopting only the first section of the measure, two residents objected that the standards were vague and made little improvement on the existing ordinance. They recommended adopting the optional section as well.

Reed, heeding the advice of Buresh, said, "I agree there is weakness in the first section but I'd rather have something that at least defines noise."

The council hedged at adopting the optional section as well because of enforcement cost. City Administrator-Controller Alfred C. Kaeppel said a portable noise measuring unit of the type needed would cost up to $2,900.

The council decided to present the model ordinance at the next meeting of the Marin County Mayors and Councilmen to determine interest in countywide adoption of the full measure. Costs could be divided among participating cities.

The San Anselmo City Council also:

LIBRARY — Asked for endorsement of a proposed reciprocal agreement with the Larkspur Library from the newly reorganized San Anselmo Library Board of Trustees before such a pact is considered. Several councilmen expressed concern an agreement with Larkspur was premature.

STUDY — Voted 4-1 to make a preliminary application for federal matching funds under the 701 program toward a project to determine how the city can lessen the tax burden on its residents for services. Mayor Reed stressed the application was not binding and the city could withdraw at a future time. Councilman Woodrow V. Capurro dissented, saying such a project would unduly encumber city funds.

CRIME — Endorsed creation of a crime laboratory in Marin after Police Chief Raymond R. Buchignani reported state officials would no longer accept for analysis narcotics seized in the county because of a heavy workload. It asked the council of mayors and councilmen to endorse the project as well.

WIDENING — Was told by City Engineer Charles R. Leitzell of the City of San Rafael's plans to widen the Miracle Mile to six lanes to the San Anselmo city line. Leitzell foresaw no adverse effect on San Anselmo traffic.

ZONING — Modified uses permitted in C-1 districts to allow greater flexibility in the types of businesses permitted in such zones.

SALARIES — Changed its negotiation procedure with city employees to try to avoid prolonged salary talks which require the city to give pay raises retroactive to July 1, the start of a fiscal year. The new procedure makes raises effective July 1, if adopted before that date, or on the first day of the month following adoption, if the raises are approved after July 1. The council also included department heads and the police captain and assistant fire chief in a negotiating unit.

SENIORS — Authorized Kaeppel and the local senior citizens' group to work out a program under which aged persons would sell permits to city parking lots to commuters, taking a percentage of the proceeds.

PARK — Decided to see if an employee of the San Francisco Parks and Recreation Department, who has said he would donate time to help master plan the Robson-Harrington Park, is available to attend public hearings on the issue. It also said it wanted planning cost estimates from a professional park planner.

COMMITTEE — Named James Cowperthwaite to the citizens committee on zoning and housing.

Bridge Mishap Injures Three

One person was hospitalized and two others treated at Marin General Hospital after a head-on collision at 12:05 a.m. today on the Richardson Bay Bridge, the California Highway Patrol has reported.

Patrick W. Finlay, 44, of 835 South McDowell Boulevard, Petaluma, was reported in good condition today at Marin General Hospital with multiple scrapes and bruises.

Officers said his car collided with one driven by Eugene Marty, 28, of San Francisco, who was treated at the hospital for a scraped right leg and low back strain. A passenger, Maureen Doherty, 23, also of San Francisco, was treated for scalp, knee and hand bruises and a possible concussion.

Four-Car Crash Injures Two

Two persons received minor injuries yesterday at 5:40 p.m. in a four-car pileup on the Manuel Freitas Parkway overcrossing of Highway 101 in San Rafael, according to the California Highway Patrol.

Lois L. Collard, 45, of Santa Clara, was treated at Marin General Hospital for a cut lip and bruised right knee and fingers. David A. Watts, 43, of 101 Garden Avenue, San Rafael, was to see his own doctor for pain of the right leg.

The highway patrol identified the other two drivers as Deborah J. Lundgren, 16, of 14 Cresah J. Lundgren, 16, of 14 Cresthaven Drive, Santa Venetia, and Lynn D. Carter, 16, of 94 De La Guerra Road, San Rafael.

Two Change Their Pleas On Cocaine

SAN FRANCISCO — Two of seven Marinites charged with conspiracy to sell cocaine have changed their pleas to guilty in U.S. District Court here.

Maureen Booth, 24, and Sharon Ann Needleman, 26 of San Anselmo have pleaded guilty and are to appear for sentencing Jan. 15.

To appear on that date for trial are Mitchell J. Howard, 22, of Marin City, Steve Howard, 24, of Sausalito and Marcia Freet, 27 of Sausalito.

Robert Bernard Ford, 21, and Mark Robert Shanahan, also 21, both of Kentfield, are to appear Jan. 8 for setting of a trial date.

All but the two Howards were arrested May 22 at San Francisco International Airport after undercover agents purchased cocaine worth $250,000 on the drug market.

The Howards were arrested in Sausalito.

The arrests came after a lengthy investigation that included three purchases of cocaine by narcotics agents.

Nine Enter Race For Junior Miss

Nine Central Marin high school senior girls have entered the Junior Miss Pageant sponsored by the San Rafael Jaycees.

Judging of the girls for the pageant will be at 8:30 p.m. Jan. 2 at San Rafael High School auditorium, said Robert Callahan, publicity chairman. The winner will receive $100 in cash and go on to the state finals Jan. 23 to 30 in Santa Rosa, according to Callahan.

The Junior Miss program is not a beauty contest. Girls are judged on scholarship, mental alertness, youth fitness, poise and appearance, and talent in creative and performing arts.

Entrants are: Anita Stover, Peggy Jean Chater, Ruth Mackay and Anne Claire Fagley, all of Redwood High School; Amy Marie Strand and Suzanne Dee La Belle of Sir Francis Drake High School; Rebecca Olivia Jones of San Rafael High School; Alice Jacobs of Tamalpais High School and Karyn Nikas of Terra Linda High School.

Car Flips Over, Petalumans Hurt

Two Petalumans were treated today at Novato General Hospital for leg bruises after a single-car accident on Highway 101 south of Novato, the California Highway Patrol has reported.

Lula Georgeatos, 40, and Robert L. Georgeatos, 14, both of 75 Queens Lane, were injured when their car left the freeway and overturned at 12:05 a.m. today.

Officers said Lula Georgeatos apparently dozed at the wheel.

Man Bound Over

Anthony Luchessi, 18, of Corte Madera was bound over to Marin Superior Court yesterday on a charge of burglarizing and concealing property stolen from a Kentfield residence Nov. 3. Luchessi is also known as Tony Corbello.

Immunity Tests Can Save Babies

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI) — A revolution in microbiology may insure the health of millions of babies before they are born, says President J. P. Barger of Dynatech Corp.

Dynatech is presently developing a broad-range of low cost kits to test young women before pregnancy for specific immunities to diseases during pregnancy that cause birth defects and mental retardation.

Although tests for these specific immunities have been available in the past, costs of the tests made them prohibitive for most women. But Barger says doctors all over the world have been clamoring for a drastic reduction in costs and companies such as Dynatech are producing low cost test kits that eventually will put them within the reach of most couples.

Christmas Bonus In Bridge Commute Books: Ferry Tickets

Two one-way tickets for the ferry will be inserted in each bridge commute ticket book sold after Dec. 31.

The aim of the 90-day trial will be to see if the promotional scheme succeeds in shifting more bridge commuters to the ferry. The tickets will be valid only during weekday commuter hours.

The regular one-way fare on the ferry is 50 cents.

Bridge directors also set a special dime-per-person, round-trip fare for supervised groups of children.

Gen. Mgr. Dale W. Luehring pushed unsuccessfully for limiting the privilege to groups of 15 or more children and to midday ferry runs from Sept. 1 to June 15. But bridge directors brushed off his argument that the ferry often was too crowded at other times, agreeing to restrict the special fare if his fears were confirmed by experience.

Golden Gate Bridge District directors also:

COMMUTERS — Received report from Luehring that 71 per cent of the autos during commuter hours, counted last Wednesday, carried only the driver, that 24 per cent had one passenger and only 2 per cent carried three or more passengers.

FERRY RIDERS — Received report that 261,690 passengers rode the Sausalito ferry in its first four months of operation, and that the district earned $1,934 in November from the ferry concessionaire.

BUSES — Received report that 169 persons rode the bus run between North and Central Marin during its first week of operation, and that revenue totaled $45.

SHAFT — Bought a spare propeller shaft for the Sausalito ferry at a cost of $3,803 from the Pacific Dry Dock & Repair Co. of Oakland, which proposed the lowest price offered by three companies.

FUNERALS — Extended the definition of immediate family to include in-laws for purposes of taking sick leave to attend funerals. The extension was asked by the Teamsters Union.

CLUB BUS — Referred to the transportation-finance committee a proposal to subsidize a charter bus between Mill Valley and the University of California Medical Center in San Francisco. The cost of subsidy will be under $6 a month per person if the 38-passenger bus is filled.

Tires Stolen

Five tires and a battery, valued at $460, were taken from a pickup truck on display at L. J. Dervin Ford, 6995 Redwood Highway, between Saturday and yesterday, Novato police reported.

Justice Black Writes Voting Law For Nation

Nobody, apparently, is exactly pleased with the United States Supreme Court's decision that 18-year-olds can vote only for federal candidates as a result of congressional action extending them the franchise.

And those who look to the supreme court for the final, definitive word on the law in this country cannot help being disturbed by the fragmentation show in its decision.

Four of the nine justices held that it was constitutional for Congress to lower the voting age to 18 for all elections — federal, state and local.

Four of the nine held that Congress has no power to set the voting age for anything.

SO WHAT HAPPENED was that Justice Black's opinion holding the 18-year-old vote provisions of the 1969 Voting Rights Act constitutional for federal elections was concurred in by the four who feel the states do not retain the right to set the voting age. And 18, 19, and 20-year-olds will get to vote in 1972 for President, vice president, senators and congressmen.

This was unsatisfactory to Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, who sponsored the 18-year-old vote bill in Congress. It was unsatisfactory to the four justices who felt Senator Kennedy's bill was constitutional. And of course it was unsatisfactory to the four who felt that Congress has no authority to set the voting age.

MOST OF THE 18, 19 and 20-year-olds may not mind too much at that. Most of the political activity of college students, who make up nearly half this age group and have been most active in seeking the vote, has been directed at the federal level. They have campaigned principally for or against candidates for Congress.

There is considerable question, anyway, as to how many of them will exercise the franchise. Voter registration has long been lower among those in the 20s than among older citizens. It is likely to be lower still among those under 21.

THE "TEEN VOTERS" in most states — including California — will be in a position somewhat similar to that of women in some states prior to adoption of the 19th Amendment to the Constitution.

Long before the 19th Amendment was adopted in 1920, many states had given women the franchise — but not all permitted them to vote for senators and representatives. Wyoming extended suffrage to women 'way back in 1869, and when it became a state in 1890, insisted that women should have full voting rights. Colorado followed in 1893, Utah and Idaho in 1896. California gave women full voting rights in 1911. Yet only 11 states had completely enfranchised women before the 20th Amendment. In some others, they could vote only in local or local and state elections.

As to the vote for 18-year-olds, only two years have passed since Californians in an iniative referendum turned down a state constitutional amendment lowering the voting age. So complete enfranchisement for the "teen voters" may yet be years away.

In the meantime, Justice Hugo L. Black is in the position of having, in effect, single-handedly written a voting law for all 50 states.

Reagan's Medi-Cal Cuts Produce A Backlash Of Balderdash

By HENRY C. MacARTHUR

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — It's unfortunate that attempts to reduce government expenditures to sane levels should bring the dissemination of balderdash and build up the constantly growing distrust of all levels of government.

Assemblyman John T. Knox, D-Richmond, recently issued a "scare-head" release on the subject of Medi-Cal, which is a vital government issue today because its costs have increased to the point where they are jeopardizing the state budget and threatening new taxes.

Assemblyman Knox says that "Governor Ronald Reagan's cuts in Medi-Cal funds and other prescription service threatens to bankrupt thousands of local pharmacies in California."

It is peculiar that Assemblyman Knox would fall for a statement like that.

Had the good assemblyman said that thousands of pharmacies are threatened with bankruptcy because government paperwork under Medi-Cal is turning them under, there might have been some justification in his criticsm.

But the high prices charged for drugs preclude bankruptcies.

Drug costs have been a controversial subject in California for years on end, and in addition, there are discrepancies and variations in prices from one end of the state to the other. For instance, vitamins in Los Angeles are about a third cheaper than they can be purchased in Sacramento.

Most drug stores are run on a business-like basis, and if the costs of doing business are higher in the small pharmacy, which Assemblyman Knox is tearful about, then it is because they do not handle the volume warranting lower prices. This is true in several different types of business.

Assemblyman Knox is correct when he says that the paperwork in writing for prior authorizations for prescription drugs will send up costs, while many of the maximum charges for wholesale drugs will force pharmacies to take a loss when doctors order drugs by brand names.

In any event, there is probably no threat of bankruptcy of the corner drug stores because of the proposed increases. Rather, drug costs and profits may be brought down to sane levels.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

What Court Said On School Prayers

An Open Letter to Agnes J. Roderick of Novato and to Concerned Christians of Marin:

Your endorsement to the ban on student prayer at San Rafael High School in "What Our Readers Say" (Dec. 16) needs to be "clarified." In the U.S. News & World Report, Dec. 3 issue, Mr. Louis Cassels, religion writer for United Press International, has a very informative article entitled, "The Facts About Prayer in Schools."...

"What about voluntary prayers in the schoolroom? If they are private prayers of an individual, or the group prayers of students meeting on their own time and of their own volition, they are clearly permissible under the terms of the court rulings."

The article continues: "Few legal opinions have ever been more widely misinterpreted than those handed down by the U.S. Supreme Court concerning prayer and Bible reading in public schools. Even among school authorities and journalists, who should know better, the idea persists that the court "banned" prayer and Bible reading from public school classrooms. It did not. All that it held unconstitutional was the formerly widespread practice of beginning each school day with a miniature worship service which typically included a devotional reading from the Scriptures and unison recitation of the Lord's Prayer. This practice, the court said, infringed religious liberty and transgressed the line of separation between church and state drawn by the First Amendment to the Constitution. In Abington School District vs. Schempp case of 1963, the court said that a public school may not require the reading of a portion of the Bible or the recitation of the Lord's Prayer as part of a classroom religious exercise. That is all the court has forbidden public schools to do. . .The court went out of its way to emphasize that there is no constitutional objection to any of the following activities in public schools: (1) Use of the Bible for its literary and historic qualities. (2) Objective instruction in comparative religion. (3) Study of the history of religion and its role in the advancement of civilization. Relatively few school districts have had the courage and imagination to teach about religion and the Bible in the objective, constitutional way recommended by the court. Some school authorities use the court rulings as an excuse for avoiding what they see as a ticklish and difficult task — a dodge that helps to perpetuate public misunderstanding of the rulings."

I personally feel that one of the reasons why our schools are in such a chaotic state is because God has been shut out. Prayer and Bible study groups on a voluntary basis should be allowed on campus. I know of four high schools in the Bay Area where this activity is a vital part of campus life.

Teacher's View Of Reed Contract

Many times in the past I have taken pride in the I-J's fair and full presentation of issues, and I am grateful for the many kindnesses which the paper has extended to me. In the current school contract controversy I trust that you will permit me to present a teacher's view of the issue.

1. The I-J did not include in its news report or its editorial the clause in the "contract" which teachers found most offensive, the punitive, insulting stipulation contained in paragraph 8:

"It is specificially understood and agreed that any failure by employee to perform the specified services on each day and for the full day as directed by district will result in serious damage to the educational program of district with resultant detriment to the pupils thereof. It is understood and agreed that it is, and will be, impracticable or extremely difficult to determine the exact amount of damages which district will sustain in the event of, and by the reason of, a breach of this agreement by employee, and it is, therefore, agreed that Employee will pay the district the sum of $75 per day for each and every day, or a pro-rata portion thereof, on which the employee without good cause fails to render the services specified in this agreement."

2. The I.J. has obviously been wrongly advised that teachers do not want to sign contracts. I quote from the current issue of CTA "Action", page 7;

"Recent statistics from the National Education Association indicate that there are in excess of 3,300 master contracts in the United States outside of California. In California we currently have 10 contracts. . . .

"A master contract or comprehensive agreement is a written document that contains the policies mutually agreed to by teachers and the school board. . ."

Other teachers and I would like Mr. Richard V. Godino and the boards to come up with something like this — comprehensive, inclusive, specific, multi-lateral.

Getting back to the $75 fine, I see nothing in the "contract" which would give each teacher $75.00 were the board to "breach" (change) its terms. This, of course, would be impossible because the board's conditions of employment are not expressly stated. . .

3. What is behind this whole business? The teachers I know are professional, competent, dedicated, creative persons who have done their jobs well and would do so under any form of professional, mutually arrived at agreement with their employers. Until the present state of district malaise very few of us gave the matter a second thought. When hired at Reed a teacher felt that he was accorded an unlimited vote of confidence by the board and the administration . . .

Riles Looking Ahead To New Job

Before events begin to accelerate, I want to take an opportunity to thank you for your gracious support in my campaign for state superintendent. Your backing was, I believe, one of the major factors contributing to the victory.

Within a few weeks, I will be assuming the responsibilities of state superintendent. In that role, there is the opportunity to strengthen and enrich the educational lives of the children of California. That is a challenge both awesome and exciting, and a challenge I welcome.

I am grateful to your for helping to make this opportunity possible.

THE DRUMMONDS

Why Doesn't Senate Committee Back Up Its Vietnam Criticism?

By ROSCOE And GEOFFREY DRUMMOND

WASHINGTON — What's the matter with the Senate Foreign Relations Committee? No guts?

This committee continually shrinks from action to force President Nixon to a quick and total end to our helping defend South Vietnam.

It keeps saying that is what it wants. Then why doesn't it back up what it says?

It contends that President Nixon is escalating the fighting by sending armed planes to protect unarmed reconnaissance flights over North Vietnam and by threatening to destroy missile sites which shoot at these flights.

But it takes no steps to stop this alleged "escalation."

COMMITTEE CHAIRMAN William Fulbright says he believes the President has no intention to end the Vietnamese war unless the Communists capitulate entirely at the conference table.But, for some reason, the committee always stops shorts of taking action.

It is within the role of the committee to take the initiative to compel the President to remove all U.S. forces from Vietnam at any date it chooses to fix.

All it would have to do would be to introduce a resolution to cut off immediately — or at any hour or date it fixed — all funds appropriated for U.S. military use in Vietnam.

It doesn't do so.

It doesn't act on its stated convictions.

Why?

WE CAN THINK of four possible reasons:

1. — The Fulbrights and the Churches, the Symingtons, the John Williamses and other committee "doves" don't really believe that President Nixon is not acting to end the war; at least don't embrace their own arguments sufficiently to act on them.

2. — The Democratic majority on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee finds it politically advantageous to play out its role of constant critic. It's easy to say what should be done, far harder to be a doer.

3. — The committee simply can't bring itself to take visible responsibility for acting to put its views into law. That would be onerous. That would be riskful. That would be taking responsibility over and beyond the call of politics.

4. — When they come right down to it, most members of the committee may have an inner anxiety that the domino theory may be right after all, that if they force the President to withdraw so fast that enough can't be done to enable the South Vietnamese to defend themselves alone, then a Communist takeover in South Vietnam will lead to other Communist conquests-by-force elsewhere in Southeast Asia. Four American presidents — Eisenhower, Kennedy, Johnson, Nixon— have felt that to be true.

WE THINK THERE is no valid reason to doubt that President Nixon is steadily and irreversibly winding down the U.S. role in Vietnam. The South Vietnamese are bearing the brunt of the fighting. American casualties keep going down. The pace of U.S. troop withdrawal is ahead of schedule and a total of 265,000 men will be out in the next three months.

If this is not de-escalating, what do the foreign relations committee members think would happen to the war if the other side did the same? There wouldn't be any war there at all and that's what the United States is trying to bring about.

BY NO MEANS NEUTRAL

Agnew Meets His Match: Outspoken Governor

By ERNEST B. FURGURSON

WASHINGTON — Spiro Agnew may have been surprised when he got his comeuppance from the governor of Oregon the other day, but nobody who knows Tom McCall was.

The spade's-a-spade language of the casual Oregonian has made him a favorite of reporters for years at governors' conferences, where some of the most humdrum proceedings in political history take place behind doors closed to press and public — for no apparent reason unless it is to make those outside think something important is going on inside.

Because McCall thinks such secrecy is silly, he has a habit of coming out and telling anybody who wants to know just who said what, and for this we have occasionally called him our "pool reporter" on the inside. He doesn't mind: He used to be a newspaperman himself.

OUT AT SUN VALLEY, where the top five inches of McCall's head were visible above the six-foot snow, the Republican governors kept the doors open most of the time. For example, when the vice president made his speech excoriating columnists and commentators one more time, and praising his own divide-and-conquer campaign tactics, the press was there listening. So what McCall contributed afterward was commentary rather than straight reporting. (He used to be a television commentator, too.)

To quote him: "There was the most unbelievable, incredible misunderstanding of the mood of America in that rotten, bigoted little speech." It was "the most divisive ever given" by such a high official. It was "narrow, not hopeful — defensive and partisan."

Agnew's reaction, when informed of McCall's review of his performance, was not to congratulate the governor on his choice of phrases, although you might have expected some such recognition from a fellow wordsmith. Instead, the vice president said "Oh, my goodness," or the equivalent thereof.

NEXT MORNING, the assemblage had breakfast, this time behind closed doors. Agnew stuck to his attitude, although he condescended to try to rationalize it a little. And McCall stuck to his, although he did soften up to the point of saying he would not demand that the vice president be dropped from the party's ticket in 1972.

The whole exchange was interesting for two reasons. One was that Agnew finally ran into somebody just as outspoken as he is, and an elected official in his own party at that. The other is that in 1972 it is quite possible that the party ticket in Oregon will include Agnew for vice president and McCall for senator.

Needless to say, McCall does not consider that an ideal choice of running mates. Nevertheless, his friends on the west coast seem almost sure that he will abandon the mostly administrative job at Salem to apply for one more to his style in Washington.

The seat he would like to fill belongs now to Mark Hatfield, the former professor who preceded McCall in the governor's office. Hatfield has been fighting with others in his own party ever since he came to the capitol because he is a dove in a hawkish party and a liberal among GOP conservatives. It is believed he would jump at the chance to take a prestigious university presidency.

IF THAT SHOULD develop, McCall would have the Senate nomination in his lap. If not, there would be one hell of a primary fight for it. Hatfield may be a dove, but he likes a fight.

It is not stretching it to say McCall fired the opening shot in that 1972 campaign when he leveled on Agnew at Sun Valley. If he eventually succeeds in it, he will promptly notify the whole nation of what Oregon already knows: He is the freewheelingest politician to speak for the Evergreen State since Wayne Morse's defeat.

HOSPITAL CHRISTMAS — Robbed of Christmas at home by tuberculosis, Mary Horne and Julie Taylor prepare for Christmas in Ross General Hospital. Mrs. Horne, writing a card, and Mrs. Taylor, wrapping a package, said spending the Yule season in the tuberculosis ward leaves them without the intimate pleasures of Christmas at home.

Apartment Plan Reprieve

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — A threatened bar to a 102-unit apartment project on Strawberry Cove was dropped yesterday by the San Francisco Bay Regional Water Quality Control Board.

The board's staff earlier this month had indicated that sewage treatment facilities may be inadequate to handle the project, but the board yesterday agreed it would not know until May whether its staff's fear justified blocking the project.

The board has no power to block the project, but its recommendation has been sought by the Bay Conservation and Development Commission, which is considering a fill permit for the project. Yesterday's decision was to agree not to recommend denial of the permit by the BCDC.

But the board warned that it may order a ban on all new sewer connections — in effect a ban on all new construction in the area — if the study due in May shows the sewerage system already is overloaded.

The study is to be done by the Sausalito-Marin City Sanitary District, which also treats wastes from the Tamalpais Valley and Richardson Bay sanitary districts. The board ordered the study as part of tough new standards set for the Sausalito-Marin City district's sewage treatment.

Cyril Hansen, president of the district board, assured the regional board that his board already had ordered steps to upgrade its sewage treatment. He disputed a statement by the regional board's staff that the district still was dumping raw sewage into the bay during heavy rainfall.

Dennis Mishek, the regional board's engineer for Marin, however, said that construction of the Strawberry Cove project would mean that raw sewage would be dumped into Richardson Bay above the Richardson Bay Bridge. Board members did not respond to this point.

Paul Broman, developer of the Strawberry Cove project, said he would not object to a ban on all new connections, but successfully urged the board not to make him "the whipping boy" by singling out his project for denial by the BCDC.

Broman said it would be "unfair" to make him postpone the BCDC permit until after the sanitary district's study is done in May. He noted that he was facing inflation at the rate of three-quarters of a per cent a month on the $2 million project.

Inmate Who Left Gets New Term

A San Quentin prison inmate has been sentenced to a year in state prison by Judge E. Warren McGuire of Marin Superior Court for failing to report back to the prison from a work furlough job Aug. 18, 1969.

Peter Dunham, 35, had less than a month remaining until his parole date when he did not return to the prison from his job on a Contra Costa County newspaper.

Judge McGuire on Monday ordered the new sentence to run concurrently with a five years to life term Dunham is serving for a 1958 Los Angeles County conviction for furnishing and possessing narcotics.

Tiburon Sanitary District Plans Hit

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Tiburon Sanitary District's battle to go it alone in Southern Marin was dealt an apparently fatal blow yesterday by the San Francisco Bay Regional Water Quality Control Board.

The district has refused to join other Southern Marin sanitary districts in a study of a joint sewerage system to solve the problem of pollution in Richardson Bay. Both the district board, and the City of Belvedere, which pipes its wastes to the district for treatment, have insisted that they were not polluting Richardson Bay because their wastes are dumped in Raccoon Straits.

The district has banked its opposition to joining the study on the basis of its plans for a new treatment system — a system that will require federal matching funds to build. But the regional board would have to approve the district's application for federal funds.

The regional board did not review the district's application yesterday, but it declared it will require the district to "participate" in the study as a condition of the regional board's approval of any construction grant application. The board cited a 1968 state study that recommended all Southern Marin sanitary districts consolidate and dump their treated waste in the ocean.

ROSS'S TB PATIENTS

Lonely Time Of Year

By LARRY MOWELL

The Christmas season is a joyous time for most families. Trimming the tree, exchanging presents and singing carols provide a closeness missing at other times of the year.

While most families will enjoy Christmas morning opening presents together, the 20 tuberculosis patients at Ross General Hospital will be forced by the requirements of their cure to remain in their segregated wing.

Modern drugs have saved sufferers of the respiratory disease from hopeless years in a sanatorium, but the disease still forces several months of hospitalization.

Mary Horn, 45, of Berkeley, who had learned of her illness less than a month before Christmas, said it knocked her Christmas plans "all to pieces."

Her four children and her husband will visit on Christmas, she said, but it won't be the same. Although the customary Christmas celebration is precluded, "we are decorating our own little cubbyholes and trying to get the Christmas spirit," Mrs. Horn said.

Mrs. Horn, Kathleen Sullivan, a San Francisco secretary, and Sausalito housewife Julie Taylor were the only ones on the ward the other day willing to discuss their situations and admitted being perhaps more optimistic than their counterparts.

Miss Sullivan, a fine-boned graying woman who said she hasn't been unhappy during her four months in the ward, told of a woman who has.

The woman was transferred from the ward to Marin General Hospital for two days last month to deliver a daughter. The young mother, Miss Sullivan said, has been upset since about being separated from her child.

Separations are required at first to protect others from the infection so the patient is cloistered for about two weeks. Patients are released when samples of sputum contain no tuberculosis, but must continue to take drugs for about two years.

Mrs. Taylor, 27, who lives at 95 Santa Rosa Avenue, also has small children, the youngest born only four months before she entered the hospital Oct. 16.

Nevertheless, she said, "I am beginning to enjoy the hospital better and better which worries me a little bit."

She said she has enjoyed the opportunity to pamper her artistic bent through ceramics, sculpting and weaving.

Those are only three of the crafts taught to patients by the Terrace's two occupational therapists during almost nine daily hours of free time, according to Mrs. B. Peterson, nursing supervisor.

Mrs. Peterson said the patients are awakened at 7 a.m. for breakfast, given medication and examined by a doctor. They are free from 9 a.m. until lunch at 11:30 a.m.

Following a rest period from noon to 2 p.m., they have free time until dinner for watching television, playing the piano, shooting pool, sunbathing or learning a craft, she said.

Dinner is followed by more free time, Mrs. Peterson said. Patients retire at 9:30 or 10 p.m.

The Terrace was established in 1925 when treatment consisted primarily of bed-rest and good food, according to Dr. Robert W. Clark, chief of the ward.

Because tuberculosis has declined since that time and a cure has been discovered, other sanatoriums went out of business leaving Ross's the only one in Marin. It attracts patients from all over Northern California, according to Clark.

While Mrs. Taylor said she is enjoying her stay and receives numerous visits from her family, she had misgivings about spending Christmas in the hospital.

"It is very sad when all the carolers come. It makes me feel awful. It makes me want to cry. It is easier if you are here not to celebrate," the slim, dark-haired housewife said in the slightly hoarse voice that typifies her ailment.

"It is just difficult to celebrate Christmas in the hospital and give it much meaning because so much of Christmas is being with the family and presents and the dinner," she said.

Two Of 15 Plants Are Up To Par

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Only two of 15 sewage treatment plants in Marin are in continuous compliance with disinfection requirements.

That report was issued yesterday by the San Francisco Bay Regional Water Quality Control Board.

The two, based on data for January through September, are the Sausalito-Marin City Sanitary District and the San Rafael Sanitation District's main plant.

The summary of performance issued by the regional board's staff did not deal with compliance with treatment requirements other than disinfection of bacteria.

Ocean Dumping Ban Set For Bay Area

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — The nation's first ban on ocean dumping of poisonous industrial wastes was imposed yesterday by the San Francisco Bay Regional Water Quality Control Board.

The action formally ordered the ban asked by the board after state biologists branded the wastes as the prime suspect in the long decline of the region's crab catch. (The ban and the reason for it were reported in detail by the Independent-Journal on Dec. 2.)

Board chairman William C. Weber of San Mateo said "we've got to stop using the ocean as a garbage can."

The board's staff explained that the ban will apply to wastes coming from the bay region. "We're not trying to tell Tokyo what to do," said one.

The regional board's action upstaged the Nixon administration, which has yet to introduce its proposed nationwide ban on ocean dumping. The administration's ban would be policed by the Coast Guard, and violators could be fined $50,000.

Just who will police the regional board's ban was unclear. Board members indicated that they expected the job to be aided by the State Department of Fish and Game, but a department spokesman told the board that it had neither funds nor equipment to do the job.

The regional board itself has only one 31-foot cruiser to police the bay.

The ban will be effective in the Gulf of the Farallones on Jan. 1, and bar dumping even beyond the gulf by the end of 1971. The primary targets of the order were U.S. Steel Copr., which was given until April 30 to stop all ocean dumping, and Standard Oil Co., which was given until the end of 1971.

THE PEOPLE'S SCHOOLS

Performance Contracts Bring School Accountability

By BRYCE W. ANDERSON

During Wilson C. Rile's campaign for California state superintendent of public instruction, he bore down repeatedly on the issue of accountability.

The schools and their teachers must be held accountable for the progress of the pupils, insisted Riles. If a teacher cannot bring his pupils' learning up to pre-set goals, "he should find some other line of work."

Many teachers took exception to this. They brought up various objections. But Riles's reply was that there is no choice. "If we don't do it, someone else will do it for us, and we may not like the way they do it," he asserted.

THE CALIFORNIA Teachers Association and California Federation of Teachers wound up supporting Riles. CTA sent letters to all its members urging that they vote for Riles rather than incumbent Max Rafferty.

The CTA evidently read the same handwriting on the wall that was apparent to the candidate: If the public schools refuse to enforce accountability, it will be forced on them in ways school people may not like.

One such way is the performance contract.

UNDER THIS SYSTEM, a contracting company takes over teaching of whatever subject or subjects the school officials feel need improvement. It agrees to bring the pupils to a predetermined level within a specified period, at so many dollars per pupil. If it exceeds the goals, it is paid a premium. If it falls short, it is paid nothing.

CTA has come out strongly against performance contracting. So has its parent organization, the National Education Association. And so have NEA affiliates in nearly all 50 states.

In California, two bills to permit performance contracting in the public schools were killed in this year's legislature. Similar bills may be expected in the 1971 session, because performance contracting has become too widely accepted to ignore.

IN GARY, IND., for instance, all teaching of the "three R's" at Banneker Elementary School has been turned over to a contractor — and a California contractor at that. The school's instructional program is being run by Behavioral Research Laboratories of Palo Alto, which was organized to promote the "programmed learning" materials developed by Maurice W. Sullivan.

Behavioral Research Laboratories has reorganized Banneker into an ungraded school with each pupil assigned at his own learning level rather than his age level (which would be possible in a graded school if the automatic year-end promotion system were dropped and mid-year promotions for those deserving them were restored).

The contracting company will receive $800 per pupil per year. If at the end of three years it has not brought the children to the learning level specified in its contract, it must refund for those still behind.

THE INDIANA Federation of Teachers, AFL-CIO, fought the arrangement. Its Gary local at one point threatened a strike.

Richard Wells, the Indiana state superintendent (who, like Rafferty, was defeated for re-election), also opposed the contract and appointed a committee to investigate it.

But the Gary Board of Education — with more freedom of local action that is allowed school boards in California — went ahead with the deal, which is still in its first year.

The same opposition to performance contracts will come in California from the California Federation of Teachers and California Teachers Association. And, faced with the threat of having independent contractors take over the teaching, both organizations may accept state-imposed accountability as (in their eyes) the lesser of two evils.

Oklahoma Leader In Consumer Protection

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Joe Doe of Oklahoma City, who isn't the handsomest or brainiest guy in town, had trouble getting dates.

He sought the help of a computer dating center which was supposed to match men and women with similar tastes and backgrounds. After some conversation, he signed a $500 contract for eight dates. He decided later that the woman with whom he was "matched" didn't meet the agency's claims.

Joe complained to Richard L. Wheatley, Jr., Oklahoma's new administrator of consumer affairs. The company moved out of Oklahoma rather quickly.

In another case, a 70-year-old woman with an income of about $180 a month signed up for $10,000 worth of dance lessons.

Wheatley called that "a strong example of unconscionability." The woman's contract eventually was set aside by a court, her money was returned and the studio was ordered to stop making contracts with persons who obviously could not pay the stated amount nor derive full benefit from the lessons.

Wheatley got his job after the Oklahoma legislature enacted its version of a consumer credit code after years of painstaking work by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws (NCCUSL). A coast-to-coast campaign now is underway to move the model code through other legislatures.

Target areas include Florida, Illinois, Kansas, Missouri, Texas, Maryland and North Carolina. Today, Utah is the only other state to pass the measure.

The uniform consumer credit code is designed to supersede the chaotic collection of state laws on the subject, make competition the main regulatory agent and satisfy demands of consumer groups, particularly those speaking for ghetto dwellers.

The idea is to give administrators such as Wheatley flexible authority to deal with types of fraud not now foreseen. He also is supposed to generate programs designed to help consumers understand their rights and obligations.

Wheatley said that one of Oklahoma's answers was suggested by state Education Director Burton Brown. Brown proposed a traveling bus similar to the well-known bookmobiles of city libraries.

A 38-passenger bus was purchased, air-conditioned and fitted with 20 carpeted booths containing swivel seats and audio-visual units. A visitor can pick up a telephone and hear a 12-minute explanation of the benefits afforded by the new law:

—A householder may cancel a home-solicitation sale within three days.

—Garnishment of wages is not permitted until after a court judgment and then only in limited amount.

—If a purchaser defaults on a television set or other appliance, the retailer can repossess it or sue, but he can't do both.

—Discount sales made on the basis of referrals to other potential customers who do not buy are easily cancelled.

"A lot of poor people can't come to a meeting and it isn't easy to get around to their homes to talk to them," Wheatley said. "The bus will park at a shopping center or other place where they can be informed that they do have certain rights and they do have a place to go for help."

Wheatley's office also is cooperating with the state Council on Economic Education to fit the subject into all learning levels of the public schools, starting with the first grade.

"You've got to begin somewhere to teach children how to shop for credit," he said, "where taxes go, how much it costs to put up a public building, etc. No one has had any real responsibility for this kind of education. The code gives the administrator the duty of establishing education programs. We've kind of grabbed that and we're with it."

Elderly Woman's Purse Snatched

Enes M. Mager, 60, of 1632 Joan Drive, Petaluma, has told police a youth stole her purse as she walked in front of her home.

Criminal Charges Ignored In Propaganda For Angela

(Reprinted from Los Angeles Times)

In the short time since her apprehension on a fugitive warrant charging her with murder and kidnapping, Angela Davis has been transformed by her supporters from a woman accused of felonies into a Cause. The process is interesting, not simply for its revival of once-familiar tactics, but also for its probability of some success.

In the scenario, still unfolding, the crimes of which Miss Davis is accused go almost entirely unmentioned. The emphasis instead has been shifted to Angela Davis as victim, who deserves not only mass sympathy but immediate restitution of her freedom. Bothersome legal technicalities, like due process, are ignored.

THE RHETORIC of the campaign being waged evokes, or at least is intended to, visions of monstrous injustice.

Miss Davis is not being held to answer criminal charges, she is being "persecuted." The accusations made against her are not based on any evidence, but are a "fraud and a frameup." Her only crime is that she is a "black woman." The real aim of the authorities who brought charges against her is "to terrorize all who fight against racism."

These quotes are from Gus Hall, general secretary of the Communist Party, which is openly and loudly leading the effort to transform the Davis case into a purported example of political and racial oppression by the government.

IF HER ATTORNEYS can be believed, Miss Davis, the avowed Communist, is adding to the propaganda. We are told that in her New York jail, Miss Davis has been placed in solitary confinement and has gone on a hunger strike. Authorities at the Women's House of Detention, however, tell a different story.

"Solitary confinement" consisted of a large private room, they say, which Miss Davis might leave for two hours of open-air recreation a day and one hour a day in the jail library. The hunger strike story stems from Miss Davis' complaints that she was served a cold lunch.

Those whose memories go back to other Communist-backed causes of the early 1950s will find the campaign being waged for Miss Davis rather shopworn in its techniques. For others, however, it is likely to have some credence. Miss Davis is young, feminine, black and a revolutionary. Alone or in combination these assure a certain constituency. . . .

THIS IS WHY it is so important that the real issues in this case not be permitted to become obscured. Miss Davis is charged with specific crimes. Politics, race, everything else is irrelevant, and no one should be taken in by attempts to play on these themes.

The best answer, the only answer, to this effort to paint Angela Davis as a martyr to a "repressive" system is to assure that our system, through its judicial processes, gives her every right she is legally entitled to.

The attempt to prejudice the Davis case, to poison the atmosphere, comes now from Communists and others who claim to support her. The antidote to that poison is in the most scrupulously fair administration of justice and due process of law.

Justice Black Writes Voting Law For Nation

Nobody, apparently, is exactly pleased with the United States Supreme Court's decision that 18-year-olds can vote only for federal candidates as a result of congressional action extending them the franchise.

And those who look to the supreme court for the final, definitive word on the law in this country cannot help being disturbed by the fragmentation show in its decision.

Four of the nine justices held that it was constitutional for Congress to lower the voting age to 18 for all elections — federal, state and local.

Four of the nine held that Congress has no power to set the voting age for anything.

SO WHAT HAPPENED was that Justice Black's opinion holding the 18-year-old vote provisions of the 1969 Voting Rights Act constitutional for federal elections was concurred in by the four who feel the states do not retain the right to set the voting age. And 18, 19, and 20-year-olds will get to vote in 1972 for President, vice president, senators and congressmen.

This was unsatisfactory to Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, who sponsored the 18-year-old vote bill in Congress. It was unsatisfactory to the four justices who felt Senator Kennedy's bill was constitutional. And of course it was unsatisfactory to the four who felt that Congress has no authority to set the voting age.

MOST OF THE 18, 19 and 20-year-olds may not mind too much at that. Most of the political activity of college students, who make up nearly half this age group and have been most active in seeking the vote, has been directed at the federal level. They have campaigned principally for or against candidates for Congress.

There is considerable question, anyway, as to how many of them will exercise the franchise. Voter registration has long been lower among those in the 20s than among older citizens. It is likely to be lower still among those under 21.

THE "TEEN VOTERS" in most states — including California — will be in a position somewhat similar to that of women in some states prior to adoption of the 19th Amendment to the Constitution.

Long before the 19th Amendment was adopted in 1920, many states had given women the franchise — but not all permitted them to vote for senators and representatives. Wyoming extended suffrage to women 'way back in 1869, and when it became a state in 1890, insisted that women should have full voting rights. Colorado followed in 1893, Utah and Idaho in 1896. California gave women full voting rights in 1911. Yet only 11 states had completely enfranchised women before the 20th Amendment. In some others, they could vote only in local or local and state elections.

As to the vote for 18-year-olds, only two years have passed since Californians in an iniative referendum turned down a state constitutional amendment lowering the voting age. So complete enfranchisement for the "teen voters" may yet be years away.

In the meantime, Justice Hugo L. Black is in the position of having, in effect, single-handedly written a voting law for all 50 states.

THE DRUMMONDS

Why Doesn't Senate Committee Back Up Its Vietnam Criticism?

By ROSCOE And GEOFFREY DRUMMOND

WASHINGTON — What's the matter with the Senate Foreign Relations Committee? No guts?

This committee continually shrinks from action to force President Nixon to a quick and total end to our helping defend South Vietnam.

It keeps saying that is what it wants. Then why doesn't it back up what it says?

It contends that President Nixon is escalating the fighting by sending armed planes to protect unarmed reconnaissance flights over North Vietnam and by threatening to destroy missile sites which shoot at these flights.

But it takes no steps to stop this alleged "escalation."

COMMITTEE CHAIRMAN William Fulbright says he believes the President has no intention to end the Vietnamese war unless the Communists capitulate entirely at the conference table.But, for some reason, the committee always stops shorts of taking action.

It is within the role of the committee to take the initiative to compel the President to remove all U.S. forces from Vietnam at any date it chooses to fix.

All it would have to do would be to introduce a resolution to cut off immediately — or at any hour or date it fixed — all funds appropriated for U.S. military use in Vietnam.

It doesn't do so.

It doesn't act on its stated convictions.

Why?

WE CAN THINK of four possible reasons:

1. — The Fulbrights and the Churches, the Symingtons, the John Williamses and other committee "doves" don't really believe that President Nixon is not acting to end the war; at least don't embrace their own arguments sufficiently to act on them.

2. — The Democratic majority on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee finds it politically advantageous to play out its role of constant critic. It's easy to say what should be done, far harder to be a doer.

3. — The committee simply can't bring itself to take visible responsibility for acting to put its views into law. That would be onerous. That would be riskful. That would be taking responsibility over and beyond the call of politics.

4. — When they come right down to it, most members of the committee may have an inner anxiety that the domino theory may be right after all, that if they force the President to withdraw so fast that enough can't be done to enable the South Vietnamese to defend themselves alone, then a Communist takeover in South Vietnam will lead to other Communist conquests-by-force elsewhere in Southeast Asia. Four American presidents — Eisenhower, Kennedy, Johnson, Nixon— have felt that to be true.

WE THINK THERE is no valid reason to doubt that President Nixon is steadily and irreversibly winding down the U.S. role in Vietnam. The South Vietnamese are bearing the brunt of the fighting. American casualties keep going down. The pace of U.S. troop withdrawal is ahead of schedule and a total of 265,000 men will be out in the next three months.

If this is not de-escalating, what do the foreign relations committee members think would happen to the war if the other side did the same? There wouldn't be any war there at all and that's what the United States is trying to bring about.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

What Court Said On School Prayers

An Open Letter to Agnes J. Roderick of Novato and to Concerned Christians of Marin:

Your endorsement to the ban on student prayer at San Rafael High School in "What Our Readers Say" (Dec. 16) needs to be "clarified." In the U.S. News & World Report, Dec. 3 issue, Mr. Louis Cassels, religion writer for United Press International, has a very informative article entitled, "The Facts About Prayer in Schools."...

"What about voluntary prayers in the schoolroom? If they are private prayers of an individual, or the group prayers of students meeting on their own time and of their own volition, they are clearly permissible under the terms of the court rulings."

The article continues: "Few legal opinions have ever been more widely misinterpreted than those handed down by the U.S. Supreme Court concerning prayer and Bible reading in public schools. Even among school authorities and journalists, who should know better, the idea persists that the court "banned" prayer and Bible reading from public school classrooms. It did not. All that it held unconstitutional was the formerly widespread practice of beginning each school day with a miniature worship service which typically included a devotional reading from the Scriptures and unison recitation of the Lord's Prayer. This practice, the court said, infringed religious liberty and transgressed the line of separation between church and state drawn by the First Amendment to the Constitution. In Abington School District vs. Schempp case of 1963, the court said that a public school may not require the reading of a portion of the Bible or the recitation of the Lord's Prayer as part of a classroom religious exercise. That is all the court has forbidden public schools to do. . .The court went out of its way to emphasize that there is no constitutional objection to any of the following activities in public schools: (1) Use of the Bible for its literary and historic qualities. (2) Objective instruction in comparative religion. (3) Study of the history of religion and its role in the advancement of civilization. Relatively few school districts have had the courage and imagination to teach about religion and the Bible in the objective, constitutional way recommended by the court. Some school authorities use the court rulings as an excuse for avoiding what they see as a ticklish and difficult task — a dodge that helps to perpetuate public misunderstanding of the rulings."

I personally feel that one of the reasons why our schools are in such a chaotic state is because God has been shut out. Prayer and Bible study groups on a voluntary basis should be allowed on campus. I know of four high schools in the Bay Area where this activity is a vital part of campus life.

Teacher's View Of Reed Contract

Many times in the past I have taken pride in the I-J's fair and full presentation of issues, and I am grateful for the many kindnesses which the paper has extended to me. In the current school contract controversy I trust that you will permit me to present a teacher's view of the issue.

1. The I-J did not include in its news report or its editorial the clause in the "contract" which teachers found most offensive, the punitive, insulting stipulation contained in paragraph 8:

"It is specificially understood and agreed that any failure by employee to perform the specified services on each day and for the full day as directed by district will result in serious damage to the educational program of district with resultant detriment to the pupils thereof. It is understood and agreed that it is, and will be, impracticable or extremely difficult to determine the exact amount of damages which district will sustain in the event of, and by the reason of, a breach of this agreement by employee, and it is, therefore, agreed that Employee will pay the district the sum of $75 per day for each and every day, or a pro-rata portion thereof, on which the employee without good cause fails to render the services specified in this agreement."

2. The I.J. has obviously been wrongly advised that teachers do not want to sign contracts. I quote from the current issue of CTA "Action", page 7;

"Recent statistics from the National Education Association indicate that there are in excess of 3,300 master contracts in the United States outside of California. In California we currently have 10 contracts. . . .

"A master contract or comprehensive agreement is a written document that contains the policies mutually agreed to by teachers and the school board. . ."

Other teachers and I would like Mr. Richard V. Godino and the boards to come up with something like this — comprehensive, inclusive, specific, multi-lateral.

Getting back to the $75 fine, I see nothing in the "contract" which would give each teacher $75.00 were the board to "breach" (change) its terms. This, of course, would be impossible because the board's conditions of employment are not expressly stated. . .

3. What is behind this whole business? The teachers I know are professional, competent, dedicated, creative persons who have done their jobs well and would do so under any form of professional, mutually arrived at agreement with their employers. Until the present state of district malaise very few of us gave the matter a second thought. When hired at Reed a teacher felt that he was accorded an unlimited vote of confidence by the board and the administration . . .

Riles Looking Ahead To New Job

Before events begin to accelerate, I want to take an opportunity to thank you for your gracious support in my campaign for state superintendent. Your backing was, I believe, one of the major factors contributing to the victory.

Within a few weeks, I will be assuming the responsibilities of state superintendent. In that role, there is the opportunity to strengthen and enrich the educational lives of the children of California. That is a challenge both awesome and exciting, and a challenge I welcome.

I am grateful to your for helping to make this opportunity possible.

Agnew Meets His Match: Outspoken Governor

By ERNEST B. FURGURSON

WASHINGTON — Spiro Agnew may have been surprised when he got his comeuppance from the governor of Oregon the other day, but nobody who knows Tom McCall was.

The spade's-a-spade language of the casual Oregonian has made him a favorite of reporters for years at governors' conferences, where some of the most humdrum proceedings in political history take place behind doors closed to press and public — for no apparent reason unless it is to make those outside think something important is going on inside.

Because McCall thinks such secrecy is silly, he has a habit of coming out and telling anybody who wants to know just who said what, and for this we have occasionally called him our "pool reporter" on the inside. He doesn't mind: He used to be a newspaperman himself.

OUT AT SUN VALLEY, where the top five inches of McCall's head were visible above the six-foot snow, the Republican governors kept the doors open most of the time. For example, when the vice president made his speech excoriating columnists and commentators one more time, and praising his own divide-and-conquer campaign tactics, the press was there listening. So what McCall contributed afterward was commentary rather than straight reporting. (He used to be a television commentator, too.)

To quote him: "There was the most unbelievable, incredible misunderstanding of the mood of America in that rotten, bigoted little speech." It was "the most divisive ever given" by such a high official. It was "narrow, not hopeful — defensive and partisan."

Agnew's reaction, when informed of McCall's review of his performance, was not to congratulate the governor on his choice of phrases, although you might have expected some such recognition from a fellow wordsmith. Instead, the vice president said "Oh, my goodness," or the equivalent thereof.

NEXT MORNING, the assemblage had breakfast, this time behind closed doors. Agnew stuck to his attitude, although he condescended to try to rationalize it a little. And McCall stuck to his, although he did soften up to the point of saying he would not demand that the vice president be dropped from the party's ticket in 1972.

The whole exchange was interesting for two reasons. One was that Agnew finally ran into somebody just as outspoken as he is, and an elected official in his own party at that. The other is that in 1972 it is quite possible that the party ticket in Oregon will include Agnew for vice president and McCall for senator.

Needless to say, McCall does not consider that an ideal choice of running mates. Nevertheless, his friends on the west coast seem almost sure that he will abandon the mostly administrative job at Salem to apply for one more to his style in Washington.

The seat he would like to fill belongs now to Mark Hatfield, the former professor who preceded McCall in the governor's office. Hatfield has been fighting with others in his own party ever since he came to the capitol because he is a dove in a hawkish party and a liberal among GOP conservatives. It is believed he would jump at the chance to take a prestigious university presidency.

IF THAT SHOULD develop, McCall would have the Senate nomination in his lap. If not, there would be one hell of a primary fight for it. Hatfield may be a dove, but he likes a fight.

It is not stretching it to say McCall fired the opening shot in that 1972 campaign when he leveled on Agnew at Sun Valley. If he eventually succeeds in it, he will promptly notify the whole nation of what Oregon already knows: He is the freewheelingest politician to speak for the Evergreen State since Wayne Morse's defeat.

AFFAIRS OF STATE

By HENRY C. MacARTHUR

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — It's unfortunate that attempts to reduce government expenditures to sane levels should bring the dissemination of balderdash and build up the constantly growing distrust of all levels of government.

Assemblyman John T. Knox, D-Richmond, recently issued a "scare-head" release on the subject of Medi-Cal, which is a vital government issue today because its costs have increased to the point where they are jeopardizing the state budget and threatening new taxes.

Assemblyman Knox says that "Governor Ronald Reagan's cuts in Medi-Cal funds and other prescription service threatens to bankrupt thousands of local pharmacies in California."

It is peculiar that Assemblyman Knox would fall for a statement like that.

Had the good assemblyman said that thousands of pharmacies are threatened with bankruptcy because government paperwork under Medi-Cal is turning them under, there might have been some justification in his criticsm.

But the high prices charged for drugs preclude bankruptcies.

Drug costs have been a controversial subject in California for years on end, and in addition, there are discrepancies and variations in prices from one end of the state to the other. For instance, vitamins in Los Angeles are about a third cheaper than they can be purchased in Sacramento.

Most drug stores are run on a business-like basis, and if the costs of doing business are higher in the small pharmacy, which Assemblyman Knox is tearful about, then it is because they do not handle the volume warranting lower prices. This is true in several different types of business.

Assemblyman Knox is correct when he says that the paperwork in writing for prior authorizations for prescription drugs will send up costs, while many of the maximum charges for wholesale drugs will force pharmacies to take a loss when doctors order drugs by brand names.

In any event, there is probably no threat of bankruptcy of the corner drug stores because of the proposed increases. Rather, drug costs and profits may be brought down to sane levels.

THE PEOPLE'S SCHOOLS

Performance Contracts Bring School Accountability

By BRYCE W. ANDERSON

During Wilson C. Rile's campaign for California state superintendent of public instruction, he bore down repeatedly on the issue of accountability.

The schools and their teachers must be held accountable for the progress of the pupils, insisted Riles. If a teacher cannot bring his pupils' learning up to pre-set goals, "he should find some other line of work."

Many teachers took exception to this. They brought up various objections. But Riles's reply was that there is no choice. "If we don't do it, someone else will do it for us, and we may not like the way they do it," he asserted.

THE CALIFORNIA Teachers Association and California Federation of Teachers wound up supporting Riles. CTA sent letters to all its members urging that they vote for Riles rather than incumbent Max Rafferty.

The CTA evidently read the same handwriting on the wall that was apparent to the candidate: If the public schools refuse to enforce accountability, it will be forced on them in ways school people may not like.

One such way is the performance contract.

UNDER THIS SYSTEM, a contracting company takes over teaching of whatever subject or subjects the school officials feel need improvement. It agrees to bring the pupils to a predetermined level within a specified period, at so many dollars per pupil. If it exceeds the goals, it is paid a premium. If it falls short, it is paid nothing.

CTA has come out strongly against performance contracting. So has its parent organization, the National Education Association. And so have NEA affiliates in nearly all 50 states.

In California, two bills to permit performance contracting in the public schools were killed in this year's legislature. Similar bills may be expected in the 1971 session, because performance contracting has become too widely accepted to ignore.

IN GARY, IND., for instance, all teaching of the "three R's" at Banneker Elementary School has been turned over to a contractor — and a California contractor at that. The school's instructional program is being run by Behavioral Research Laboratories of Palo Alto, which was organized to promote the "programmed learning" materials developed by Maurice W. Sullivan.

Behavioral Research Laboratories has reorganized Banneker into an ungraded school with each pupil assigned at his own learning level rather than his age level (which would be possible in a graded school if the automatic year-end promotion system were dropped and mid-year promotions for those deserving them were restored).

The contracting company will receive $800 per pupil per year. If at the end of three years it has not brought the children to the learning level specified in its contract, it must refund for those still behind.

THE INDIANA Federation of Teachers, AFL-CIO, fought the arrangement. Its Gary local at one point threatened a strike.

Richard Wells, the Indiana state superintendent (who, like Rafferty, was defeated for re-election), also opposed the contract and appointed a committee to investigate it.

But the Gary Board of Education — with more freedom of local action that is allowed school boards in California — went ahead with the deal, which is still in its first year.

The same opposition to performance contracts will come in California from the California Federation of Teachers and California Teachers Association. And, faced with the threat of having independent contractors take over the teaching, both organizations may accept state-imposed accountability as (in their eyes) the lesser of two evils.

Oklahoma Leader In Consumer Protection

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Joe Doe of Oklahoma City, who isn't the handsomest or brainiest guy in town, had trouble getting dates.

He sought the help of a computer dating center which was supposed to match men and women with similar tastes and backgrounds. After some conversation, he signed a $500 contract for eight dates. He decided later that the woman with whom he was "matched" didn't meet the agency's claims.

Joe complained to Richard L. Wheatley, Jr., Oklahoma's new administrator of consumer affairs. The company moved out of Oklahoma rather quickly.

In another case, a 70-year-old woman with an income of about $180 a month signed up for $10,000 worth of dance lessons.

Wheatley called that "a strong example of unconscionability." The woman's contract eventually was set aside by a court, her money was returned and the studio was ordered to stop making contracts with persons who obviously could not pay the stated amount nor derive full benefit from the lessons.

Wheatley got his job after the Oklahoma legislature enacted its version of a consumer credit code after years of painstaking work by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws (NCCUSL). A coast-to-coast campaign now is underway to move the model code through other legislatures.

Target areas include Florida, Illinois, Kansas, Missouri, Texas, Maryland and North Carolina. Today, Utah is the only other state to pass the measure.

The uniform consumer credit code is designed to supersede the chaotic collection of state laws on the subject, make competition the main regulatory agent and satisfy demands of consumer groups, particularly those speaking for ghetto dwellers.

The idea is to give administrators such as Wheatley flexible authority to deal with types of fraud not now foreseen. He also is supposed to generate programs designed to help consumers understand their rights and obligations.

Wheatley said that one of Oklahoma's answers was suggested by state Education Director Burton Brown. Brown proposed a traveling bus similar to the well-known bookmobiles of city libraries.

A 38-passenger bus was purchased, air-conditioned and fitted with 20 carpeted booths containing swivel seats and audio-visual units. A visitor can pick up a telephone and hear a 12-minute explanation of the benefits afforded by the new law:

—A householder may cancel a home-solicitation sale within three days.

—Garnishment of wages is not permitted until after a court judgment and then only in limited amount.

—If a purchaser defaults on a television set or other appliance, the retailer can repossess it or sue, but he can't do both.

—Discount sales made on the basis of referrals to other potential customers who do not buy are easily cancelled.

"A lot of poor people can't come to a meeting and it isn't easy to get around to their homes to talk to them," Wheatley said. "The bus will park at a shopping center or other place where they can be informed that they do have certain rights and they do have a place to go for help."

Wheatley's office also is cooperating with the state Council on Economic Education to fit the subject into all learning levels of the public schools, starting with the first grade.

"You've got to begin somewhere to teach children how to shop for credit," he said, "where taxes go, how much it costs to put up a public building, etc. No one has had any real responsibility for this kind of education. The code gives the administrator the duty of establishing education programs. We've kind of grabbed that and we're with it."

Elderly Woman's Purse Snatched

Enes M. Mager, 60, of 1632 Joan Drive, Petaluma, has told police a youth stole her purse as she walked in front of her home.

She said the young man lunged at her from behind last Friday and ran off with the purse that contained $6.

Criminal Charges Ignored In Propaganda For Angela

(Reprinted from Los Angeles Times)

In the short time since her apprehension on a fugitive warrant charging her with murder and kidnapping, Angela Davis has been transformed by her supporters from a woman accused of felonies into a Cause. The process is interesting, not simply for its revival of once-familiar tactics, but also for its probability of some success.

In the scenario, still unfolding, the crimes of which Miss Davis is accused go almost entirely unmentioned. The emphasis instead has been shifted to Angela Davis as victim, who deserves not only mass sympathy but immediate restitution of her freedom. Bothersome legal technicalities, like due process, are ignored.

THE RHETORIC of the campaign being waged evokes, or at least is intended to, visions of monstrous injustice.

Miss Davis is not being held to answer criminal charges, she is being "persecuted." The accusations made against her are not based on any evidence, but are a "fraud and a frameup." Her only crime is that she is a "black woman." The real aim of the authorities who brought charges against her is "to terrorize all who fight against racism."

These quotes are from Gus Hall, general secretary of the Communist Party, which is openly and loudly leading the effort to transform the Davis case into a purported example of political and racial oppression by the government.

IF HER ATTORNEYS can be believed, Miss Davis, the avowed Communist, is adding to the propaganda. We are told that in her New York jail, Miss Davis has been placed in solitary confinement and has gone on a hunger strike. Authorities at the Women's House of Detention, however, tell a different story.

"Solitary confinement" consisted of a large private room, they say, which Miss Davis might leave for two hours of open-air recreation a day and one hour a day in the jail library. The hunger strike story stems from Miss Davis' complaints that she was served a cold lunch.

Those whose memories go back to other Communist-backed causes of the early 1950s will find the campaign being waged for Miss Davis rather shopworn in its techniques. For others, however, it is likely to have some credence. Miss Davis is young, feminine, black and a revolutionary. Alone or in combination these assure a certain constituency. . . .

THIS IS WHY it is so important that the real issues in this case not be permitted to become obscured. Miss Davis is charged with specific crimes. Politics, race, everything else is irrelevant, and no one should be taken in by attempts to play on these themes.

The best answer, the only answer, to this effort to paint Angela Davis as a martyr to a "repressive" system is to assure that our system, through its judicial processes, gives her every right she is legally entitled to.

The attempt to prejudice the Davis case, to poison the atmosphere, comes now from Communists and others who claim to support her. The antidote to that poison is in the most scrupulously fair administration of justice and due process of law.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Propranolol Cuts Chest Pains, Not Heart Attacks

Favorable reports following the use of propranolol (Inderal) in angina pectoris continue to appear. This agent lessens the heart muscle's need for oxygen by decreasing the rate, slowing the contractions, and reducing the cardiac work load when resting and exercising. It also may lower the metabolism of the heart muscle. The drug has all the earmarks of being ideal because angina pectoris is chest pain that develops when the heart muscle fails to get enough oxygen on exertion.

Propranolol, however, is not perfect, even though it relieves anginal distress in 85 per cent of the users. It does not correct the basic cause of angina, which is a narrowing of the coronary arteries because of arteriosclerosis. In other words, it does not prevent heart attacks caused by a blockage of the coronary vessel or other complications of the disease.

IN ADDITION, one-third of the users develop side effects such as nausea, abdominal cramps, fatigue and light-headedness. But despite these objections, the drug is an improvement over existing remedies and can be used effectively for many years.

Angina is refractory when the symptom persists despite the best of care. The pain usually responds to nitroglycerin tablets, but distress may recur so frequently that the victim must avoid even mild activity and the tensions of business. Many sufferers are unable to walk more than a few blocks, even when the weather is mild. Now and then, chest pain occurs when resting at night (nocturnal angina).

ACCORDING TO Dr. Arthur M. Master, New York, refractory angina is not always so serious as it might seem to be. Nineteen of his patients have been followed for an average of 12 years. In some instances, the angina disappears spontaneously. Many, however, take as many as 15 to 30 nitroglycerin tablets a day. Nowadays surgery is recommended for refractory (persistent) angina. Propranolol also may be helpful.

PRESSURE DIFFERS IN EACH ARM

K. V. writes: Could you tell me if it is possible to have blood pressure of 125/85 in the left arm and pressure of 145/100 in the right arm? I take my own pressure and cannot understand this difference. I have a cuff-type instrument which was given to me by a friend.

REPLY

Yes, when the pressure is considerably higher on the right side there is a possibility that the aorta is constricted by a scar. May I suggest that you bring this to the attention of your physician?

CONSTIPATED AFTER SURGERY

E. M. writes: Can a person become constipated from adhesions that followed an appendectomy?

REPLY

Yes, but only if the adhesions completely block off the intestine. Under these circumstances, the ensuing pain is more troublesome than the constipation. There also is a possibility that after the operation the individual became careless about maintaining regularity. This is more likely to be the case if the abdominal muscles were too sore to strain

DISHES AND DIABETES

J. M. J. writes: Someone once told me that diabetes can be contracted by eating or drinking from dinnerware used by a person who has the disease. Is this true?

REPLY

No. Diabetes is not a contagious disease.

LAW IN ACTION

From the State Bar of California

Laws Must Be Flexible

The law has to be flexible yet stable to meet new conditions.

For example cities may one day soon have controlled climates under one big roof, recreational facilities, and huge shopping centers. These would be big private enterprises, not cities as we know them now.

Owners of such enterprises have great power over the "city" or center. Even so, the law limits their power.

For example, take the Giant Shopping Center in Central City. Central City's code says a person must leave when a land owner tells him to. The code also says that no one can distribute papers on someone else's property without his consent.

Seems reasonable, but workers were on strike at one of the stores in the shopping center. Two pickets kept several yards from the store, but still walked on the center's land. They were passing out handbills urging customers not to buy at that store.

The store owner and the shopping center manager ordered the pickets off, and told them to pass out their handbills on "public property." When the pickets refused, police arrested them for breaking the city law. After conviction, they appealed their case, claiming that the city law violated their right to free speech.

The appellate court agreed. Though on private land, they had been peaceful and would have been allowed to pass out handbills in places generally open to the public.

In an early case under the free speech clause of the Fifth Amendment, the Supreme Court had ruled that a person could hand out religious tracts on a "business block" of a company-owned town. The company could not deny a resident the right of free speech.

Earlier, the Supreme Court also noted that the typical shopping center brings together individual stores on one large privately owned tract. It found the roadways and sidewalks within the center's mall are like the streets and sidewalks of a normal city. From these facts, the court concluded that "the state cannot delegate to private owners the power through the use of trespass laws, to restrict the free exercise of constitutional rights."

The city can regulate sizes of signs, times for passing out handbills, numbers of people that may assemble, and the like. These rules must relate to health, safety, or some other legal goal.

Note: California lawyers offer this column so you may know about our laws.

Bus Plunge Kills 10, Injures 44

SAN LUIS POTISI, Mexico (UPI)—An overcrowded bus plunged over a 75-foot cliff Tuesday, killing 10 persons and injuring 44 others, many critically, federal highway police said.

Police said the third-class bus was packed with 54 persons—20 more than capacity—when it spun off the road outside this city, 216 miles northwest of the capital.

Most of the passengers were peasants who were heading for work on nearby farms. Driver Pablo Macias and ticket-taker Fernando Nino were among the dead.

Office Funds For McCormack Passes

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The House has passed a bill that would give retiring speaker John W. McCormack $38,000 for each of the next two years to maintain his congressional office in Boston.

The allowance, covering rent, help and supplies, is in addition to the congressional pension of about $44,000 a year for which he will be eligible.

Murphy Says He Won't Resign

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Sen. George Murphy, R-Calif., has indicated he will not retire before the end of his term to allow Gov. Ronald Reagan to appoint his successor ahead of the beginning of the regular session.

Such a move would allow Senator-elect John V. Tunney, a Democrat, to gain seniority over other newly elected Senators.

Murphy, arriving here for a Christmas holiday, told UPI Tuesday night, "I haven't heard anything about that (rumors of his planned resignation.)"

He said he would return to Washington "to vote for the SST," indicating he had no intention of giving up his Senate seat ahead of schedule.

Blood Bank Branch Open Next Tuesday

The San Rafael branch of the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank will be open next Tuesday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. instead of New Year's Day.

Normally open Monday from noon to 6 and Wednesday and Friday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., the blood center announced it would be closed Christmas and Jan. 1, but open Tuesday. Monday and Wednesday hours will be unchanged, the blood banks said.

TV REVIEW

Jack Paar Has Some Fun Ideas

By RICK DUBROW

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Jack Paar, the masterful entertainer-journalist, has long been pursued by all the commercial television networks to do more than his acclaimed annual specials.

Now, for the first time since making himself regrettably scarce, he has devised a unique and typically Paar series format that would allow him to do five or six specials a year for an indefinite period.

Paar, former host of the "Tonight" show and his own weekly series, is aware that next year's market for television specials is going to be rough because of the tight economy and the cutback on network prime time. But his idea for the series of specials is so delightful that any sensible network would go out of its way to get the shows.

OFFBEAT SERIES

The series title is "Breakfast, Lunch and Dinner," and constant-traveler Paar would be globetrotting again by having offbeat--and sometimes famous—dining companions for unique get-togethers at the three different meals in different geographic locations.

Paar says the idea came to him when, during a trip to Africa for a future special, he and some friends were camping out while descending from Mt. Kilimanjaro, and he thought: "Why not breakfast here with these witty, wonderful people—then fly to Majorca for lunch with Peter Ustinov on his yacht—then to Switzerland for a very elegant dinner with Noel Coward?"

He adds: "I thought: If it worked once, I could do it forever. And it could also be in America. You could have breakfast with some hoboes, and learn why they are that way. Then lunch with some campus militants on a campus. Maybe they'll talk to me like that. Then an elegant dinner by candlelight with Ethel Kennedy."

On the phone from his home in Bronxville, N.Y., Paar was full of enthusiasm. He thought there might even be a series in the format of another special he recently finished: "Some of My Best Friends Are," which deals with what he describes as British eccentrics—Robert Morley, Ustinov, Victor Spinetti, some colonial types and Malcolm Muggeridge, who fascinates him because "he's become very religious. It's so strange from this man who was such a wild guy."

HUMAN SITUATIONS

Another show on Paar's mind would be a sort of "how to" guide about common human situations. For example, one segment might deal with how to avoid legal entrapments. Another might concern how, when traveling, one should go through customs, pointing out "the innocent little dumb things we shouldn't have done, but do."

Paar says NBC-TV has been in contact with him, "wanting me to go back into a variety show. But, really, the world doesn't need another Dean Martin. I don't want to go through the rest of my life introducing Kate Smith."

$900,000 Asked In Fatal Hub Accident

The widow and eight children of a Marine sergeant killed in an auto accident last March have filed a $900,000 wrongful death suit in Marin Superior Court against the City of San Anselmo and four San Anselmo property owners.

Gunnery Sgt. RFonald W. Richmond, 42, of Tustin, Orange County, died of head injuries when a pickup truck in which he was riding crashed March 17 into a drainage ditch on Red Hill Avenue near Ancha Vista Avenue, San Anselmo.

The suit, filed on behalf of Richmond's widow, Elizabeth L. Richmond, and the couple's children, alleges that the City of San Anselmo and four unnamed property owners in the area of the accident were negligent.

The suit charges the road was too narrow and the drainage ditch was not marked.

Richmond's brother, Marin County Deputy Sheriff Robert F. Richmond, 41, who was driving the truck at the time of the accident, told police the truck went into the ditch when he swerved to avoid a motorcycle that had cut in front of him.

Libya Nationalizes All Foreign Bank Holdings

TRIPOLI, Libya (UPI)—Libya nationalized foreign shareholdings in all banks and insurance companies in the country in a surprise move Tuesday night.

Nationalization came in two decrees by the ruling Revolutionary Command Council.

The decrees banned any commercial company from performing banking operations in Libya unless it is 100 per cent Libyan-owned. All foreign shares in banks are to be transferred to the state and the shareholders will be compensated in cash by the bank of Libya.

In the case of insurance companies it is stipulated that the government will own 60 per cent of the capital and will also appoint the majority of directors on the board and fix their remuneration. Foreign shareholders will again be compensated in cash to the net value of their holdings.

The Ministry of Economy will supervise government interests in the nationalized companies. All employees of the insurance companies are compelled to continue working until authorized to leave by the ministry.

Italians Repeal Bird Catch Law

ROME (UPI)—The government confessed to a past blunder Tuesday and asked parliament to kill an 11-month-old law permitting the use of nets for capturing small migratory birds.

A cabinet meeting approved a one-paragraph bill that would repeal the law passed by parliament last January with government support. The measure brought an international outcry from wildlife experts, who said it could threaten the migratory birds population throughout Europe. They estimated as many as 10 million birds could be trapped in Italy each year as they pass on their way to North Africa in the winter and back to Europe in the spring.

Inductees Fail To Show Up

More than half the Marin men ordered to report for induction into the military this month failed to show up or refused to serve, according to Joy M. Kinzer, secretary of Local Board 25 in San Rafael.

Mrs. Kinzer said 15 of the 31 called did not show up, two refused induction and two more walked out of the processing.

Charles S. Kvitky of Novato and Patrick F. Robertson of Sausalito submitted to induction, Mrs. Kinzer said.

Four others failed their physicals, five were transferred to other boards and one enlisted rather than be drafted, Mrs. Kinzer said.

The names of those who refused induction or failed to report were withheld.

Mrs. Kinzer said the January draft call will include those with numbers below 195 not called in 1970 and those in the 1971 draft pool with numbers below 100.

The Marin quota, which usually is not met, is 94 for January, Mrs. Kinzer said.

CHP Plan For Fogbound 99

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The California Highway Patrol is setting up a special control system to guide motorists through dense fog on California 99 during the Christmas and New Years holidays.

The system, the CHP said today, is designed "to maintain a safe and even flow of traffic despite the coincidence of heavy traffic and heavy fog."

The CHP is calling the program "Operation Fogbound" and explains that there will be the pacing of traffic by patrol cars with flashing amber lights in the rear window.

Enlistment In ROTC Is Off

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Enlistment in college Reserve Officer Training corps (ROTC) programs has dropped more than 100,000 in the past two years and now is at the lowest level since before the Korean War, the Defense Department reported today.

ROTC courses are the major source of new officers for the armed forces, and officials feel much ROTC enrollment in the past was prompted by the draft. They said a wait-and-see attitude on the part of students, based on the new draft lottery and the prospect of an all-volunteer Army, apparently caused the decline.

The enrollment of 109,598 ROTC students for fiscal 1971 is the lowest since 1947, defense officials said.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Propranolol Cuts Chest Pains, Not Heart Attacks

Favorable reports following the use of propranolol (Inderal) in angina pectoris continue to appear. This agent lessens the heart muscle's need for oxygen by decreasing the rate, slowing the contractions, and reducing the cardiac work load when resting and exercising. It also may lower the metabolism of the heart muscle. The drug has all the earmarks of being ideal because angina pectoris is chest pain that develops when the heart muscle fails to get enough oxygen on exertion.

Propranolol, however, is not perfect, even though it relieves anginal distress in 85 per cent of the users. It does not correct the basic cause of angina, which is a narrowing of the coronary arteries because of arteriosclerosis. In other words, it does not prevent heart attacks caused by a blockage of the coronary vessel or other complications of the disease.

IN ADDITION, one-third of the users develop side effects such as nausea, abdominal cramps, fatigue and light-headedness. But despite these objections, the drug is an improvement over existing remedies and can be used effectively for many years.

Angina is refractory when the symptom persists despite the best of care. The pain usually responds to nitroglycerin tablets, but distress may recur so frequently that the victim must avoid even mild activity and the tensions of business. Many sufferers are unable to walk more than a few blocks, even when the weather is mild. Now and then, chest pain occurs when resting at night (nocturnal angina).

ACCORDING TO Dr. Arthur M. Master, New York, refractory angina is not always so serious as it might seem to be. Nineteen of his patients have been followed for an average of 12 years. In some instances, the angina disappears spontaneously. Many, however, take as many as 15 to 30 nitroglycerin tablets a day. Nowadays surgery is recommended for refractory (persistent) angina. Propranolol also may be helpful.

(Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the Independent-Journal.)

PRESSURE DIFFERS IN EACH ARM

K. V. writes: Could you tell me if it is possible to have blood pressure of 125/85 in the left arm and pressure of 145/100 in the right arm? I take my own pressure and cannot understand this difference. I have a cuff-type instrument which was given to me by a friend.

REPLY

Yes, when the pressure is considerably higher on the right side there is a possibility that the aorta is constricted by a scar. May I suggest that you bring this to the attention of your physician?

CONSTIPATED AFTER SURGERY

E. M. writes: Can a person become constipated from adhesions that followed an appendectomy?

REPLY

Yes, but only if the adhesions completely block off the intestine. Under these circumstances, the ensuing pain is more troublesome than the constipation. There also is a possibility that after the operation the individual became careless about maintaining regularity. This is more likely to be the case if the abdominal muscles were too sore to strain

DISHES AND DIABETES

J. M. J. writes: Someone once told me that diabetes can be contracted by eating or drinking from dinnerware used by a person who has the disease. Is this true?

REPLY

No. Diabetes is not a contagious disease.

LAW IN ACTION

From the State Bar of California

Laws Must Be Flexible

The law has to be flexible yet stable to meet new conditions.

For example cities may one day soon have controlled climates under one big roof, recreational facilities, and huge shopping centers. These would be big private enterprises, not cities as we know them now.

Owners of such enterprises have great power over the "city" or center. Even so, the law limits their power.

For example, take the Giant Shopping Center in Central City. Central City's code says a person must leave when a land owner tells him to. The code also says that no one can distribute papers on someone else's property without his consent.

Seems reasonable, but workers were on strike at one of the stores in the shopping center. Two pickets kept several yards from the store, but still walked on the center's land. They were passing out handbills urging customers not to buy at that store.

The store owner and the shopping center manager ordered the pickets off, and told them to pass out their handbills on "public property." When the pickets refused, police arrested them for breaking the city law. After conviction, they appealed their case, claiming that the city law violated their right to free speech.

The appellate court agreed. Though on private land, they had been peaceful and would have been allowed to pass out handbills in places generally open to the public.

In an early case under the free speech clause of the Fifth Amendment, the Supreme Court had ruled that a person could hand out religious tracts on a "business block" of a company-owned town. The company could not deny a resident the right of free speech.

Earlier, the Supreme Court also noted that the typical shopping center brings together individual stores on one large privately owned tract. It found the roadways and sidewalks within the center's mall are like the streets and sidewalks of a normal city. From these facts, the court concluded that "the state cannot delegate to private owners the power through the use of trespass laws, to restrict the free exercise of constitutional rights."

The city can regulate sizes of signs, times for passing out handbills, numbers of people that may assemble, and the like. These rules must relate to health, safety, or some other legal goal.

Bus Plunge Kills 10, Injures 44

SAN LUIS POTISI, Mexico (UPI)—An overcrowded bus plunged over a 75-foot cliff Tuesday, killing 10 persons and injuring 44 others, many critically, federal highway police said.

Police said the third-class bus was packed with 54 persons—20 more than capacity—when it spun off the road outside this city, 216 miles northwest of the capital.

Most of the passengers were peasants who were heading for work on nearby farms. Driver Pablo Macias and ticket-taker Fernando Nino were among the dead.

Office Funds For McCormack Passes

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The House has passed a bill that would give retiring speaker John W. McCormack $38,000 for each of the next two years to maintain his congressional office in Boston.

The allowance, covering rent, help and supplies, is in addition to the congressional pension of about $44,000 a year for which he will be eligible.

Murphy Says He Won't Resign

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Sen. George Murphy, R-Calif., has indicated he will not retire before the end of his term to allow Gov. Ronald Reagan to appoint his successor ahead of the beginning of the regular session.

Such a move would allow Senator-elect John V. Tunney, a Democrat, to gain seniority over other newly elected Senators.

Murphy, arriving here for a Christmas holiday, told UPI Tuesday night, "I haven't heard anything about that (rumors of his planned resignation.)"

He said he would return to Washington "to vote for the SST," indicating he had no intention of giving up his Senate seat ahead of schedule.

Blood Bank Branch Open Next Tuesday

The San Rafael branch of the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank will be open next Tuesday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. instead of New Year's Day.

Normally open Monday from noon to 6 and Wednesday and Friday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., the blood center announced it would be closed Christmas and Jan. 1, but open Tuesday. Monday and Wednesday hours will be unchanged, the blood banks said.

"How can we tell if visions of sugarplums are dancing in our heads? I've never seen a sugarplum."

ALMANAC

Today is Wednesday, Dec. 23, the 357th day of 1970 with 8 to follow.

The moon is between its last quarter and new phase. The morning stars are Venus, Jupiter and Mars. The evening stars are Mercury and Saturn.

On this day in history:

In 1928 the National Broadcasting Co. established a permanent coast-to-coast bookup.

In 1948 ex-Premier Tojo of Japan and 6 other war leaders of that country were hanged in Tokyo by the Allied War Crimes Commission.

In 1962 the first of some 1,100 prisoners captured by Cuban Premier Castro in a 1961 invasion attempt began arriving back in Miami.

A thought for the day: Thomas Wolfe said, "Most of the time we think we're sick, it's all in the mind."

Mercury Found In Tuna In Britain

LONDON (UPI) —One in four of 100 cans of tuna fish tested by the British government chemist's laboratory contain substantial amounts of methyl mercury, government sources said today.

The sources said the level was similar to that which led to some tuna being withdrawn from U.S. grocery shelves. This was announced as 0.1 and 0.5 parts per million.

The Principle Of No-Trump Used For Trump Hand Victory

If you don't find the right things in your stocking tomorrow night, don't blame me. I've spent years trying to teach the principles of good card play to Santa's helpers, but they simply won't learn. Why, only the other night Santa put one helper and two reindeer on bread and water for 30 days for the way the helper played today's hand.

KING OF HEARTS

West led the king of hearts and continued with the jack. Santa's helper, playing the South hand, ruffed the second heart, drew four rounds of trumps and led the queen of diamonds for a finesse.

East won with the king of diamonds and led his remaining heart. South ruffed with his last trump and ran the diamonds, coming to nine tricks — six trumps and three diamonds.

CLUB LEAD

Declarer then led a club, and West took the last two tricks with the ace of clubs and a good heart. Down one.

Santa Claus made quite a fuss about the hand because his helper should have made the contract. That would have been the rubber, and they could have set out for a delivery of toys in Patagonia.

CHOOSE RIGHT SUIT

South makes the contract by applying a simple no-trump principle: Knock out the dangerous opponent's entry first. West was the dangerous opponent because he had the long hearts.

After drawing four rounds of trumps, South should lead a club to force out the ace. West leads a third heart, and South ruffs with his last trump. But now when South loses the diamond finesse, East is unable to return a heart. South loses only one heart, one club and one diamond, making his contract.

If any of your gifts arrive next Monday, you can blame this hand. Those reindeer never will learn that no-trump principles often apply in the play of a trump contract.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with one heart, and the next player bids one spade.

You hold:
♠ - 3 2
♡ - 10 6 5 2
◇ - A 10 9 6
♣ - Q 6 3.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid two hearts.

You have six points in high cards and one point for the doubleton. This is enough for a raise, whether or not there has been a bid by the intervening player.

Poet's Parlor

ST. ALBANS, England (UPI) —The Ver Poet's Society says it will establish a poets' parlor next month in the city center for housewives who want to take a break from their shopping to write poetry. The parlor will be equipped with paper, pens and a typewriter.

TV REVIEW

Jack Paar Has Some Fun Ideas

By RICK DUBROW

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Jack Paar, the masterful entertainer-journalist, has long been pursued by all the commercial television networks to do more than his acclaimed annual specials.

Now, for the first time since making himself regrettably scarce, he has devised a unique and typically Paar series format that would allow him to do five or six specials a year for an indefinite period.

Paar, former host of the "Tonight" show and his own weekly series, is aware that next year's market for television specials is going to be rough because of the tight economy and the cutback on network prime time. But his idea for the series of specials is so delightful that any sensible network would go out of its way to get the shows.

OFFBEAT SERIES

The series title is "Breakfast, Lunch and Dinner," and constant-traveler Paar would be globetrotting again by having offbeat--and sometimes famous—dining companions for unique get-togethers at the three different meals in different geographic locations.

Paar says the idea came to him when, during a trip to Africa for a future special, he and some friends were camping out while descending from Mt. Kilimanjaro, and he thought: "Why not breakfast here with these witty, wonderful people—then fly to Majorca for lunch with Peter Ustinov on his yacht—then to Switzerland for a very elegant dinner with Noel Coward?"

He adds: "I thought: If it worked once, I could do it forever. And it could also be in America. You could have breakfast with some hoboes, and learn why they are that way. Then lunch with some campus militants on a campus. Maybe they'll talk to me like that. Then an elegant dinner by candlelight with Ethel Kennedy."

On the phone from his home in Bronxville, N.Y., Paar was full of enthusiasm. He thought there might even be a series in the format of another special he recently finished: "Some of My Best Friends Are," which deals with what he describes as British eccentrics—Robert Morley, Ustinov, Victor Spinetti, some colonial types and Malcolm Muggeridge, who fascinates him because "he's become very religious. It's so strange from this man who was such a wild guy."

HUMAN SITUATIONS

Another show on Paar's mind would be a sort of "how to" guide about common human situations. For example, one segment might deal with how to avoid legal entrapments. Another might concern how, when traveling, one should go through customs, pointing out "the innocent little dumb things we shouldn't have done, but do."

Paar says NBC-TV has been in contact with him, "wanting me to go back into a variety show. But, really, the world doesn't need another Dean Martin. I don't want to go through the rest of my life introducing Kate Smith."

$900,000 Asked In Fatal Hub Accident

The widow and eight children of a Marine sergeant killed in an auto accident last March have filed a $900,000 wrongful death suit in Marin Superior Court against the City of San Anselmo and four San Anselmo property owners.

Gunnery Sgt. RFonald W. Richmond, 42, of Tustin, Orange County, died of head injuries when a pickup truck in which he was riding crashed March 17 into a drainage ditch on Red Hill Avenue near Ancha Vista Avenue, San Anselmo.

The suit, filed on behalf of Richmond's widow, Elizabeth L. Richmond, and the couple's children, alleges that the City of San Anselmo and four unnamed property owners in the area of the accident were negligent.

The suit charges the road was too narrow and the drainage ditch was not marked.

Richmond's brother, Marin County Deputy Sheriff Robert F. Richmond, 41, who was driving the truck at the time of the accident, told police the truck went into the ditch when he swerved to avoid a motorcycle that had cut in front of him.

Libya Nationalizes All Foreign Bank Holdings

TRIPOLI, Libya (UPI)—Libya nationalized foreign shareholdings in all banks and insurance companies in the country in a surprise move Tuesday night.

Nationalization came in two decrees by the ruling Revolutionary Command Council.

The decrees banned any commercial company from performing banking operations in Libya unless it is 100 per cent Libyan-owned. All foreign shares in banks are to be transferred to the state and the shareholders will be compensated in cash by the bank of Libya.

In the case of insurance companies it is stipulated that the government will own 60 per cent of the capital and will also appoint the majority of directors on the board and fix their remuneration. Foreign shareholders will again be compensated in cash to the net value of their holdings.

The Ministry of Economy will supervise government interests in the nationalized companies. All employees of the insurance companies are compelled to continue working until authorized to leave by the ministry.

Inductees Fail To Show Up

More than half the Marin men ordered to report for induction into the military this month failed to show up or refused to serve, according to Joy M. Kinzer, secretary of Local Board 25 in San Rafael.

Mrs. Kinzer said 15 of the 31 called did not show up, two refused induction and two more walked out of the processing.

Charles S. Kvitky of Novato and Patrick F. Robertson of Sausalito submitted to induction, Mrs. Kinzer said.

Four others failed their physicals, five were transferred to other boards and one enlisted rather than be drafted, Mrs. Kinzer said.

The names of those who refused induction or failed to report were withheld.

Mrs. Kinzer said the January draft call will include those with numbers below 195 not called in 1970 and those in the 1971 draft pool with numbers below 100.

The Marin quota, which usually is not met, is 94 for January, Mrs. Kinzer said.

CHP Plan For Fogbound 99

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The California Highway Patrol is setting up a special control system to guide motorists through dense fog on California 99 during the Christmas and New Years holidays.

The system, the CHP said today, is designed "to maintain a safe and even flow of traffic despite the coincidence of heavy traffic and heavy fog."

The CHP is calling the program "Operation Fogbound" and explains that there will be the pacing of traffic by patrol cars with flashing amber lights in the rear window.

Enlistment In ROTC Is Off

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Enlistment in college Reserve Officer Training corps (ROTC) programs has dropped more than 100,000 in the past two years and now is at the lowest level since before the Korean War, the Defense Department reported today.

ROTC courses are the major source of new officers for the armed forces, and officials feel much ROTC enrollment in the past was prompted by the draft. They said a wait-and-see attitude on the part of students, based on the new draft lottery and the prospect of an all-volunteer Army, apparently caused the decline.

The enrollment of 109,598 ROTC students for fiscal 1971 is the lowest since 1947, defense officials said.

A CHAMPION SANTA CLAUS

Santa with kids on his knee is not unusual this time of year, but this time the Santa is played by former light heavyweight champion Archie Moore, and from the looks on the kids' faces, he's doing a great job. Moore donned the red suit for nearly 1,000 underpriveleged kids in Compton.

Montreal Player Turns Salesman

Johnny Boccabella, that strong young utility man for the Montreal Expos of the National Baseball League, is selling mitts and balls and other sports items at Rome Brusati's Taveggia-Brusati Sports Shop in San Rafael.

MASTER MIKE SUYDERHOUD, the world's water ski champion from San Anselmo, left Sunday for a six-week stay in Australia where he will coach and train at Bendigo, near Melbourne. With a heavy 1971 schedule in his plans, Suyderhoud, a student at Sonoma State College, likes the warmer climate Down Under at this time of the year.

TERRY McGOVERN of Sausalito, a real football fan, couldn't wait for the results of Sunday's 49-Raider game, so last week he asked the students at Elkins Institute to computerize the game.

The Students made it a class project, fed all possible variables into the machine, including Blanda, and the overall strength of each conference. End Result, said Mr. Computer: Raiders 20, 49ers 13.

MICHAEL HAGGERTY, former assistant publicity director of the Baltimore Orioles, has been named Director of Public Relations for the Oakland Athletics. Mike, 27, is a Communications Arts graduate of Notre Dame.

And since A's owner Charles O. Finley hires and fires employees as frequently as I change my socks, I wish Mr. Haggerty lots and lots of luck.

The same company has fixed that crazy mixed up computer. The other day he received a letter addressed to Mrs. Shoes Chapman.

49ers Need Ball Control

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (UPI)—Coach Dick Nolan of the San Francisco Forty Niners figures his team is a bit tougher than oddsmakers figure.

When told Nevada betting houses have installed the Minnesota Vikings as seven-point favorites in their National Football Conference semifinal playoff game Sunday at Minneapolis, Nolan said simply: "That's kind of a big spread."

He also said possible snow or freezing temperatures shouldn't affect the performance of the Prospectors. After looking at films of the final two Minnesota games of the season, Nolan said he was more concerned about the Vikings than the weather.

"For us to win, we'd have to beat them at their own game—ball control," said Nolan. "Then we'd have to get some breaks in other areas, say in our kicking game."

Overcoming the Viking defense, tops in the NFC, will be a "big problem," added Nolan.

He also said quarterback Gary Ruozzo has improved the Minnesota offense.

"They execute and they don't make mistakes," said Nolan. "Cuozzo is a lot better passer than Joe Kapp. He has better touch and timing."

Running back Doug Cunningham and linebacker Skip Vanderbundt, who missed the last two games with injuries, were at practice Tuesday and doing some running. But Nolan says it's too early to determine their status for Sunday's battle.

Cunningham is still bothered with a hamstring pull while Vanderbundt has a sore knee.

The Forty Niners leave San Francisco at 2 p.m. Friday, their usual debarking time for an away game on a Sunday. That will allow the players a few hours with their families on Christmas morning

Rec Basketball

THE GREAT HOCKEY MYSTERY

TORONTO (UPI)—The Stanley Cup and two other National Hockey League trophies stolen from the Hockey Hall of Fame here Dec. 5 showed up mysteriously today in the driveway of a Toronto police constable.

Sgt. Wally Harkness was aroused by the barking of his dog in the early hours. When he went to see what was disturbing the dog he found the Stanley Cup, the Masterton Trophy and the Conn Smythe Trophy in his driveway.

The Stanley Cup is presented each year to the league's playoff champion.

The Masterton Cup is awarded at the end of each regular season by the NHL Writers Association to the player displaying the greatest perseverance, sportsmanship and dedication to hockey.

The Conn Smythe trophy is awarded each year to the player judged most valuable to his team throughout the playoffs.

Blackman To Illinois

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (UPI)—The University of Illinois made it official today—Bob Blackman, head football coach at Dartmouth College for the past 16 years, will be the new head football coach at Illinois.

Gene Vance, Illinois's athletic director, announced an action that had been published for almost two days and lacked only official confirmation by the Big Ten school seeking a drastic turn-about in its football misfortunes.

Vance said Blackman "would be recommended" for the post. The recommendation has the concurrence of the University President David H. Henry and Chancellor Jack W. Peltason, he said. Formal approval by the board of trustees on Jan. 20 was regarded as routine.

Blackman, 52, will replace Jim Valek, who was fired at the end of the season and woundup four seasons at Illinois with one of the poorest football records in the school's history.

Joe Ellis Is Award Winner

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Joe Ellis will have a nice Christmas, but the rest of the San Francisco Warriors might be a trifle glum.

Ellis was named today the winner of the Eddie Gottlieb award, given after a vote of fans and experts to the Warrior who has made the greatest contribution to the team.

Previous winners included Guy Rodgers, Rick Barry, Nate Thurmond, Rudy LaRusso and Jeff Mullins. The award includes $1,000 in cash.

The rest of the Warriors will have until Saturday night to mull over one of their worst showings, a 138-108 pasting by Boston—their second loss in a row. And things may not get better Swturday when they have to call on Milwaukee.

Jo-Jo White and John Havlcek combined for 68 Celts points Tuesday before a good crowd of 7,199.

Nate Thurmond had a season-high of 35 for San Francisco and Jerry Lucas added 26, but nobody else had over 14.

Los Angeles also lost so the Lakers lead the division at 19-14 with the Warriors (21-17) and San Diego (20-18) fighting for second.

Madden Expects A Toughie

OAKLAND (UPI)—The Miami Dolphins have always played the Oakland Raiders close to the vest and Raider coach John Madden expects things to continue in that vein.

"Miami has always been tough on us. . . even before Don Shula went there to coach," said Madden Tuesday.

"You have to respect the Dolphins. They have a 10-4 record, second best in the American Conference, they beat us 20-13 and they gave Baltimore (AFC East champ) one of their two losses by a 34-17 score. No, we respect them thoroughly."

Last year, Miami and Oakland tied 20-20 and the Raiders pulled out a 20-17 win.

Shula is not one to degrade an opponent, either, before a big game. The Raiders and Dolphins meet Sunday at the Oakland Coliseum in an AFC semifinal playoff.

"The Raiders are a fine football team with a lot of talent and with experience in big games," said Shula. "I don't feel our win over them in the early part of the season gives us any kind of an edge."

Behind the strong running of Larry Csonka and Jim Kiick, Miami emerged as the AFC's top running team, averaging 148.7 yards per game on the ground.

Csonka, a tough 238-pounder from Syracuse, moved ahead of Oakland's Hewritt Dixon in the final game of the season to finish as No. 2 rusher in the AFC behind Floyd Little of Denver with 884 yards. Little had 901 and Dixon 861.

Oakland is favored by seven points over the Dolphins.

Packers In Market For A New Coach

Bengtson Resigns Head Job

GREEN BAY, Wis. (UPI)—Phil Bengtson has resigned as head coach and general manager of the Green Bay Packers. The job of finding a successor is the immediate task of the team's ruling executive committee.

"The ideal thing would be to get a successor as soon as possible. But we won't panic and grab the first one that comes along," said Dominic Olejniczak, Green Bay Packer president and head of the executive cmmittee.

Although Olejniczak did not elaborate on the kind of man the Packers are looking for, he did say "we feel we need a man who can do a total job."

The 57-year-old Bengtson, who succeeded the late Vince Lombardi as Packer coach three years ago after molding the team's great championship defense of the 1960s, said he was making his move because of a "disappointing season" and a hope that a change would improve the Green Bay record in 1971.

"I want to emphasize that my experience with the Packers has been very enjoyable and I wish them every success in the future in the National Football League," Bengtson said Tuesday.

Bengtson's 1970 team finished with a 6-8 record, its worst since 1958, and managed to score only 14 points a game—the poorest Packer performance in 21 years.

Bengtson submitted his resignation in a letter to Olejniczak, who accepted it saying Bengtson "certainly is an outstanding gentleman and a fine citizen."

Bengtson just Sunday had indicated he hoped to be back next season as coach, but it was learned that at least some members of the executive committee met "informally" Monday at Green Bay.

The committee would have the final word on whether a change would be made, and although neither Bengtson nor Olejinczak would confirm it, there were reports the committee had derided some time ago to replace Bengtson and give him Monday an "either-or" decision to make.

The executive committee is scheduled to meet next week to establish ground rules for selecting a successor to Bengtson, Olejniczak said.

Olejniczak denied rumors the Packers have contacted other coaches.

"We could not without consulting the other teams," he said "That's the tampering rule."

Bengtson said he had no immediate plans except to rest for a while. He said he would like to stay in coaching in the Green Bay area.

Packer players expressed reactions varying.

"I was not completely surprised," said veteran defensive end Lionel Aldridge. "I firmly believe we lacked something. We didn't have togetherness."

When asked what type man the Packers should have as head coach, the eight-year veteran replied, "we need a guy who can speak and wouldn't have to repeat it.

"It will probably be one that we don't know—perhaps even out of the college ranks. But in any event, he's got to be tough with the players."

5-2 VICTORY

Streaking Seals Whip The Hawks

OAKLAND (UPI) —Credit the Hicke brothers for lifting the California Seals out of the basement of the National Hockey League West for the first time this season.

And they did it in convincing fashion Tuesday night by beating the high-flying Chicago Black Hawks 5-2 before 8,692 screamers at the Oakland Coliseum and a regional television audience.

Rookie Ernie Hicke scored two goals to take a 10-9 edge in goals this season over older brother Billy, who netted a tying score in the opening period.

With the Hickes providing a lot of the scoring power, the Seals have now won four straight to match a similar streak earlier in the season.

More important, it lifted the Seals out of last place in the West and dropped idle Los Angeles into the depths, one point back of California.

Oakland now has a chance to solidify its lofty standing by beating the Kings in head-to-head combat Saturday at the Los Angeles Forum. Then the Seals play road games at New York, Toronto, Montreal and Detroit before returning home Jan. 6.

Defensemen Carol Vadnais and Ron Stackhouse tallied the other two Seals goals against the Black Hawks who got lamplighters from Bobby Hull, in the first period and Pat Stapleton in the middle stanza.

Ernie Hicke broke a 1-1 deadlock in the second period when he pushed in a rebound after coming onto the ice as a sixth skater during a delayed penalty call on Chicago.

Stackhouse received credit for his second goal of the campaign midway through the final period when his shot from the point glanced off a Chicago stick and into the net. Ernie Hicke then tallied his 10th goal into an open net when Black Hawk goalie Jerry Desjardins was yanked for a sixth skater with the final seconds ticking away.

Eleven penalties were whistled in a rough second period. Chicago defenseman Jerry Korab received a misconduct and game misconduct after wrestling a lineman in an attempt to get into the middle of a fight between teammate Pit Martin and Dennis Hextall of the Seals.

Hart Rests After His Operation

Dr. Lloyd Taylor, who performed the operation at St. Mary's Hospital, said he removed some bone from the shoulder. The surgeon said he found "multiple, recurrent and chronic degenerate changes" in the shoulder bone which the surgery would remedy.

Hart was expected to take about three months to fully recover from the operation. He will be ready in time for spring training.

Dr. E. C. Sailer, Giants team physician, said Hart's shoulder "should be all right." Sailer said he would recommend a recuperative program in the near future for Hart.

The $35,000 a year veteran has been bothered by the shoulder since 1968 and aggravated it again at the start of the 1969 season. He finished the 1969 season with a .254 batting average and three homers in 95 games, his worst year of seven with the Giants.

After a successful stint with Phoenix of the AAA Pacific Coast League to start off the 1970 season, Hart was recalled by San Francisco. He hit a solid .282 in 76 games, including eight home runs and 37 runs batted in to finish out the season.

But constant pain in the shoulder after making a throw from the outfield late in the season persuaded Hart to have the operation.

Correction: Tars Basketball Tonight

A story in yesterday's Independent-Journal, saying the game was to be held last night, was in error.

Webster Signs New N.Y. Giants Contract

NEW YORK (UPI)—Alex Webster has survived the battle to make the New York Giants a contender again in the National Football League.

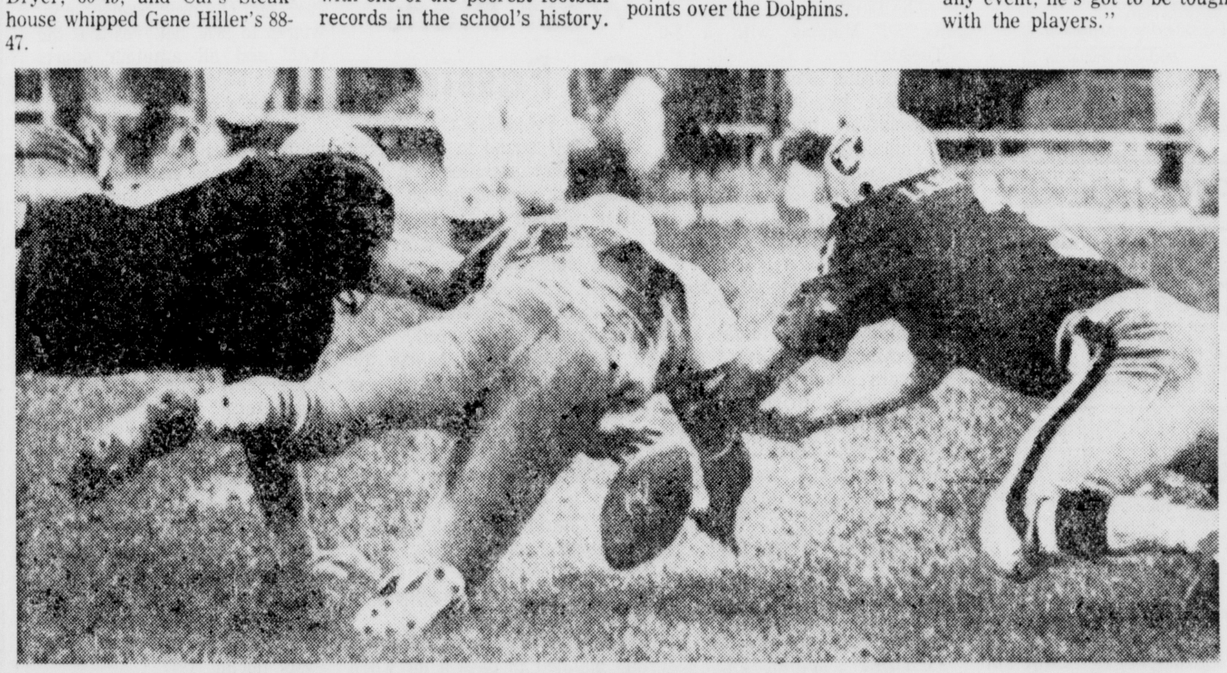
The Giant coach signed a one-year contract Tuesday for an estimated $40,000, a raise of about $10,000 over his present salary, after leading the team to a 9-5 record. The Giants had been 6-8 in Webster's first season as head coach in 1969.

A former running back with the Giants, Webster was the surprise choice to take over after Allie Sherman was fired. During both of Webster's seasons the Giants have gotten off to poor starts, and in 1971 they lost their first three games before coming within one game of their first divisional title since 1964.

Although New York owner Wellington Mara was agreeable to a longer contract, Webster said he would be happier playing it one year at a time.

"If he'd wanted it, I would have given him a longer term contract," said Mara. "When he first signed, I gave him a two-year contract because I told him it was like a battlefield promotion and the first year wouldn't be a real test. Even then, though, I knew he only wanted one-year contracts."

Mara said they "haggled for about 35 seconds" before reaching agreement on the terms. Then they launched into a two-hour discussion over plans for next season and the college draft.



A DIVE BY BRUCE TAYLOR

"How can we tell if visions of sugarplums are dancing in our heads? I've never seen a sugarplum."

ALMANAC

Today is Wednesday, Dec. 23, the 357th day of 1970 with 8 to follow.

The moon is between its last quarter and new phase. The morning stars are Venus, Jupiter and Mars. The evening stars are Mercury and Saturn.

On this day in history:

In 1783 George Washington resigned his commission with the Army and retired to Mount Vernon.

In 1928 the National Broadcasting Co. established a permanent coast-to-coast bookup.

In 1948 ex-Premier Tojo of Japan and 6 other war leaders of that country were hanged in Tokyo by the Allied War Crimes Commission.

In 1962 the first of some 1,100 prisoners captured by Cuban Premier Castro in a 1961 invasion attempt began arriving back in Miami.

A thought for the day: Thomas Wolfe said, "Most of the time we think we're sick, it's all in the mind."

Mercury Found In Tuna In Britain

LONDON (UPI) —One in four of 100 cans of tuna fish tested by the British government chemist's laboratory contain substantial amounts of methyl mercury, government sources said today.

The sources said the level was similar to that which led to some tuna being withdrawn from U.S. grocery shelves. This was announced as 0.1 and 0.5 parts per million.

The Principle Of No-Trump Used For Trump Hand Victory

If you don't find the right things in your stocking tomorrow night, don't blame me. I've spent years trying to teach the principles of good card play to Santa's helpers, but they simply won't learn. Why, only the other night Santa put one helper and two reindeer on bread and water for 30 days for the way the helper played today's hand.

KING OF HEARTS

West led the king of hearts and continued with the jack. Santa's helper, playing the South hand, ruffed the second heart, drew four rounds of trumps and led the queen of diamonds for a finesse.

East won with the king of diamonds and led his remaining heart. South ruffed with his last trump and ran the diamonds, coming to nine tricks — six trumps and three diamonds.

CLUB LEAD

Declarer then led a club, and West took the last two tricks with the ace of clubs and a good heart. Down one.

Santa Claus made quite a fuss about the hand because his helper should have made the contract. That would have been the rubber, and they could have set out for a delivery of toys in Patagonia.

CHOOSE RIGHT SUIT

South makes the contract by applying a simple no-trump principle: Knock out the dangerous opponent's entry first. West was the dangerous opponent because he had the long hearts.

After drawing four rounds of trumps, South should lead a club to force out the ace. West leads a third heart, and South ruffs with his last trump. But now when South loses the diamond finesse, East is unable to return a heart. South loses only one heart, one club and one diamond, making his contract.

If any of your gifts arrive next Monday, you can blame this hand. Those reindeer never will learn that no-trump principles often apply in the play of a trump contract.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with one heart, and the next player bids one spade.

You hold:
♠ - 3 2
♡ - 10 6 5 2
◆ - A 10 9 6
♣ - Q 6 3.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid two hearts.

You have six points in high cards and one point for the doubleton. This is enough for a raise, whether or not there has been a bid by the intervening player.

Unselfish Letter To Santa Claus

I guess it's been 45 years since I wrote to Santa Claus. As I remember it, I wanted things like a three-wheeled bike, a dog, a Graham McNamee football game, a catcher's mitt, an Indian suit, shoe skates, an Erecter set and a pony.

But that was only my first childhood and now, if I wrote to Santa, I would want things like teeth and eyesight and just one night's sleep like I had when I was five years old. I wish all my friends were 20 years youngers. I wish my feet and stomach didn't hurt all the time. I wish people laughed more and that I didn't need blood tests and electrocardiograms. I wish the kids were little and there's a lot of people I wish were still standing around the piano with us and singing old standards and drinking egg nogs.

I WISH I could sit once more in the Polo Grounds and see Hubbell for the first time. I wish I could watch Dizzy fogging the fast one in. I wish my uncle would take me to Pope Park and see Clay Hills play football against the Holy Name Society and I wish I could go to the Armory with him and see Bat Battalino and Louis (Kid) Kaplan and just once more I wish it were a rainy Labor Day in 1933 and Ruth hit one in the seats the only time I saw him play.

SOMETIMES I even wish I could cry.

But, never mind, Santa, my grandmother always told me Santa didn't like selfish children and that you were always meant to put in your letters requests like that the boy down the street with braces could walk again without them, or that the sightless man who sold papers downtown could one day see a tree.

SO, FORGET me, Santa, but here's the list:

1. Give Baseball another Stan Musial.
2. Give Boxing one more Joe Louis.
3. Give Basketball a young Cousy, or a healthy Baylor.
4. Give Golf an Arnold Palmer.
5. Give Doug Sanders that putt at St. Andrews over again.
6. Give Tennis a Bill Tilden.
7. Give Cincinnati just one pitcher.
8. Give the Los Angeles Kings double-runners.
9. Give the young, wisdom and the old, ideals.
10. Give us antoher Irving Berlin or, at least, keep Burt Bacharach cheerful.
11. Take back the atom bomb.
12. Give Timothy Leary a bum trip.
13. Give Henry Aaron 10 more years.
14. Give Ernie Banks one World Series.
15. Give Maury Wills one more pitcher he can get the jump on, then give him a team of his own.
16. Give Roberto Clemente one more MVP.
17. Give Willie Mays one more 420-foot drive to haul down with the bases loaded.
18. Give the Dodgers another Koufax, Drysdale, Podres rotation and a one-game lead going into September and print up the Series tickets — for four games only.
19. Give Jim Plunkett a good day in the Bowl where his mother can hear it and be happy.
20. Give us plays like "Fiddler on the Roof," movies like "Sound of Music," and songs like Gershwin's and books like Dickens'.
21. Take back 10 pounds, give me one more ride on a Park Street trolley on a snowy Christmas Eve, let me see one more kid's face light up at the sight of electric trains on Christmas morning and give the readers of this column all they want and I'm going to take five — days, that is — and see you at the chimney. Put a contract in the stocking for George Allen, tell Woody Hayes to smile, he's in light, and see you all after the holiday.

NBA ROUNDUP

By United Press International

Hazzard, traded away by Los Angeles, scored the winning basket, a 15-foot shot with 36 seconds left, to give the Hawks a 119-115 victory over his old teammates Tuesday night.

The Hawks trailed by 19 points in the second quarter, but Hazzard almost singlehandedly brought them back in the third quarter as he scored 19 of his game-high 32 points. The Hawks outscored Los Angeles 41-21 in that third period with most of Hazzard's baskets coming on his Alley Oop shot.

In other National Basketball Association games, Seattle beat New York 119-108, Chicago defeated Cleveland 121-80, Boston turned back San Francisco 138-108 and Philadelphia overcame a 25-point deficit to beat Phoenix 133-129 in overtime.

New York's flu-stricken center Willis Reed and Bill Bradley, out with a turned ankle, will be back later this week, but the Knicks could have used them against Seattle. Tom Meschery and Lenny Wilkens led Seattle with 20 points each.

Philadelphia rookie Dennis Awtrey and veterans Archie Clark, Billy Cunningham and Hal Greer led the comeback against Phoenix, which had led by 72-47 at one point. Awtrey finished with 23 points, including 15 in the last 11 minutes of the third quarter, and Cunningham added 25, 21 in the second half and nine in overtime. Clark had 26 and Greer 23.

Jo Jo White got 35 points, 22 in the first half, and John Havlicek got 33, including 20 in the second half, as Boston coasted past San Francisco.

The Chicago Bulls also had an easy time, coasting to their biggest victory margin in their five years in the NBA over hapless Cleveland. It was the Bulls' eighth win in nine games, and Cleveland's 36th loss in 39 games.

Grant: Weather Won't Be Factor

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI)—Minnesota Viking Coach Bud Grant doesn't believe the weather will favor either team Sunday when the Vikings host the San Francisco Forty-Niners here in a National Football Conference playoff game.

"Cold weather won't be much of a factor," he said Tuesday, explaining that if it gets extremely cold the Vikings will have to cut short their outdoor practices while the Forty-Niners will be working out in full-length drills in San Francisco.

The Forty-Niners will not arrive in Minnesota until late Christmas Day.

Fred Cox, the Vikings field goal specialist and the NFC's top scorer of the year, said the weather can be a factor in kicking "once you get below 20 or 15."

"On a cold day the field goal kicking is limited to 40-45 yards," Cox said. "There may be as much as a five-to-6-yard difference in the length of a kick. The real problem is the second half late in the game. By the end of the third quarter, the ball is well cooled off."

The cold weather, he explained, affects the resiliency of the ball, making it harder.

Grant said the Vikings have not had a chance to study films of the Forty-Niners and the players were not yet familiar with the team since the Vikings did not play them during the regular season.

He said the Vikings and Forty-Niners will exchange films of only their last two games. "But, a film going from New York to San Francisco just might pass through Minneapolis on the way," he said.

He said Forty-Niner quarterback John Brodie "is a premium quarterback," but "he's not the whole team."

The Forty-Niner defense "might resemble Dallas," Grant said. He said there was no real way to compare them with any other team.

Grant said linebacker Roy Winston and safety Paul Krause, both hurt in last Sunday's game against Atlanta, will be ready for the playoffs. Cornerback Ed Sharockman, who sat out the Atlanta game with a bruised knee, also should be ready.

Showers May Force Grid Teams Indoors

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI)—Showers may force Stanford and Ohio State football squads indoors today in their drills for the Rose Bowl game but the coaches seemed unworried by that prospect.

Woody Hayes, the Ohio State mentor who bars sports writers from Buckeye practice at East Los Angeles College, said he has had much experience with stormy weather.

"Many years ago when I coached at Dennison University," he recalled, "we had to work the kids inside and then shovel the snow off the field one or two days a week when we were able to get outside. There are some things you can do inside to improve the team although we don't do any hitting. They don't leave their feet."

The going was a bit wet Tuesday for the Buckeyes who went through an apparently routine workout. "It's too early to key up a team right now," said Hayes. "At this stage we're busy just working."

Hayes said his teams "really get up" only about three times a year. They got up emotionally for Northwestern and Michigan in compiling a 9-0 record.

"You have to pick the teams you want to get emotional about," he said.

The implication was that the Buckeyes would be needled a bit by their coaches to get up for the Indians on New Year's Day.

Stanford coach John Ralston described the two workouts his squad had Tuesday at Cal State Long Beach field as "very good."

"The field drained off well from the rains," he said. "We worked under dry conditions."

Intermittent rains hit the area on the weekend and a new storm was forecast.

Ralston reported two defensive tackles, Greg Sampson and Dave Tipton, are suffering from the flu. Tipton did not work out Tuesday.

Ohio State fullback John Brockington was a major wheel in the Buckeye offense. He gained more than 100 yards in five games and had a total of 1,040, a new school record.

Ralston permits sports writers to watch Indian drills.

He pointed out Ohio State has had the opportunity to view 11 films of Stanford games and said, "I don't think there's anything new they can learn about us."

Chargers, Oilers Trade Linemen

SAN DIEGO (UPI)—The San Diego Chargers sent tight end Willie Frazier to the Houston Oilers Tuesday in exchange for guard Doug Wilkerson.

Frazier, 6-foot-4, 250-pounds, played with the Oilers in 1964 and 1965. With the Chargers during the past season he caught 38 passes for 497 yards and six touchdowns.

Wilkerson, 6-3, was Houston's No. 1 draft choice. He was a reserve guard for the Oilers.

BOATING

By STAN DAVIES

Safety Always Is In Season

Good boat handling techniques are something a boater can acquire only by experience. There is no other way. You have to get the "feel" of handling a boat yourself and incidentally make a few mistakes.

HOWEVER, I find that a lot of knowledge about boating techniques can be gained without ever having been afloat. I firmly believe that if beginners in the sport do a lot of reading, and perhaps think about boating and sailing, they will learn much more quickly when they do the thing for real.

So this is an admonition to get a few boating books this winter while the action is slow and study some of the basic principles of seamanship, piloting, navigation and motor or engine maintenance. You'll be better for it when the boating season gets back into full swing next summer.

I FIND, too, that people who know the most about boating generally know the most about SAFE boating specifically. Here are typical questions that could be answered quickly by anyone who had read even a rudimentary text:

Q. I have an outboard boat that is speedy and agile. Recently I drove a large powerful inboard boat. Response to the helm was sluggish. Is this normal?

A. Everything is relative, and by comparision with a speedy outboard any big inboard is "sluggish." In an outboard, when the motor is turned, the whole thrust of the outboard is used to cause the boat to turn. But in an inboard there is never more than half the "discharge current" from the propeller acting upon the rudder.

Q. I have just read that sailing craft no longer have the right of way. . .is this so?

A. The law change is now five years old, but I guess some people still have not heard about it. The new rule says that large ships are no longer required to give way to small maneuverable sailing craft in harbors or narrow channels. However, on inland waters, the rule is the same as ever . . . a power driven craft is obliged to keep out of the way of a sailboat.

Q. It seems to be poor design, but the stern of my boat is so low that water comes in every time I stop the outboard motor.

A. At one time the outboard motor manufacturers got together and agreed on a uniform 15-inch height for the transom. . .that's the flat area at the stern. This was to make all motors standard. However, now you can get long shaft motors. . .20 inches. This will let you build up your transom and put in a self bailing motor well ahead of it. This will catch any water that comes aboard.

Q. What's a trim tab?

A. It's a gadget installed on the stern of a boat flush with the bottom, as a kind of extension of the bottom. Tabs, usually installed in pairs, can be adjusted so that they react on the water rushing under the boat to keep the bow down if it rides too high.

UCLA Comes Back Strong After Layoff

By United Press International

When a basketball team has had a 10-day layoff and is so cold on its return it can make only 20 of 40 free throws, it hasn't a chance, right?

Wrong, when that team is UCLA.

Despite the obvious slowdown because of the break for quarterly exams, the great Bruins beat Missouri 94-75 at Pauley Pavillion Tuesday night. Missouri had come into the game with a 7-1 record.

The great one-two punch up front of Sidney Wicks and Curtis Rowe combined for 57 points and 26 rebounds.

The Pacific Eight followed up its 5-1 Monday with a 3-0 Tuesday.

California, lone Pac-8 loser Monday by a point, took consolation honors at the Michigan Invitational at Ann Arbor with a 77-74 squeaker over Harvard. Charlie Johnson scored five of his 16 points in the last 56 seconds to bust it open.

Washington State's Jim Meredith hit 12 of 17 shots to lead Washington State to the 90-68 win over Nevada-Reno for the Cougars' seventh straight win.

Elsewhere, Brigham Young got off to a fast start and hung on to win at Santa Clara 68-67. Mike Stewart of the losers had 18.

Redwood Cagers Whip Alumni Team

Scott Trobbe and Steve McGee led the victory with 27 points each. Score at half saw Redwood ahead, 43-31.

AAU President Has Hopes For Changes

NEW YORK (UPI) —Jack Kelly, president of the Amateur Athletic Union, has served notice that his reign will be an iconoclastic one.

"I would like to see some of the Philadelphia Eagles or the 76ers take up rowing," Kelly said Tuesday. "And take the case of Wilt Chamberlain. He was a great track star in high school and would have been a great decathlon man, if he could have competed in that event as an amateur while maintaining his pro basketball status."

Kelly, the Henley Regatta winner in 1947 and 1949, Pan-Am game winner in 1955 and 1959, and Olympic bronze medal winner in 1956, believes that the AAU and all amateur sports "need a little more consistency, a little less hypocrisy."

He sees no reason why a man cannot be an amateur in one sport, a pro in another.

Kelly claimed Communist countries maintain athletes "in training at least six months a year. By American standards, that would be blatant professionalism.

"Our concepts of amateurism originated in Victorian England when only the aristocracy competed," Kelly observed. "Amateur sports for a long time was a recreation for the rich. The past organizers of amateur sports did not conceive of the problems of athletes today, or of the universality of participation in sports."

Kelly spoke as the AAU disclosed a new television pact for 18 Sunday afternoon telecasts during 1971.

Five gymnastics and swimming events are scheduled, marking the first time non-track-and-field events will be shown. Track and field rounds out the remainder of the schedule.

West Plans On Passing

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The West squad in the Shrine game may sacrifice one running back spot to get an extra pass receiver in there.

Coach Eddie Crowder's West team has only two running backs, Willie Armstrong, a 230-pounder from Grambling, and Washington's Bo Cornell.

Armstrong could handle the up-the-middle stuff and pass blocking with Cornell to spell him off. Then receivers such as Missouri speedster Mel Gray or Houston's Elmo Wright might start in the backfield. USC's Bob Chandler, Oregon's Bob Newland and SMU's Ken Fleming round out the sensational group of pass-catchers on the West.

Crowder also gave indications he planned to pass a lot when he told the Shrine luncheon Tuesday that all three of his quarterbacks would pass. They include UCLA's Dennis Dummitt, SMU's Chuck Hixson and Santa Clara's big Dan Pastorini.

Montreal Player Turns Salesman

Johnny Boccabella, that strong young utility man for the Montreal Expos of the National Baseball League, is selling mitts and balls and other sports items at Rome Brusati's Taveggia-Brusati Sports Shop in San Rafael.

MASTER MIKE SUYDERHOUD, the world's water ski champion from San Anselmo, left Sunday for a six-week stay in Australia where he will coach and train at Bendigo, near Melbourne. With a heavy 1971 schedule in his plans, Suyderhoud, a student at Sonoma State College, likes the warmer climate Down Under at this time of the year.

TERRY McGOVERN of Sausalito, a real football fan, couldn't wait for the results of Sunday's 49-Raider game, so last week he asked the students at Elkins Institute to computerize the game.

The Students made it a class project, fed all possible variables into the machine, including Blanda, and the overall strength of each conference. End Result, said Mr. Computer: Raiders 20, 49ers 13.

49ers Need Ball Control

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (UPI)—Coach Dick Nolan of the San Francisco Forty Niners figures his team is a bit tougher than oddsmakers figure.

When told Nevada betting houses have installed the Minnesota Vikings as seven-point favorites in their National Football Conference semifinal playoff game Sunday at Minneapolis, Nolan said simply: "That's kind of a big spread."

He also said possible snow or freezing temperatures shouldn't affect the performance of the Prospectors. After looking at films of the final two Minnesota games of the season, Nolan said he was more concerned about the Vikings than the weather.

"For us to win, we'd have to beat them at their own game—ball control," said Nolan. "Then we'd have to get some breaks in other areas, say in our kicking game."

Overcoming the Viking defense, tops in the NFC, will be a "big problem," added Nolan.

He also said quarterback Gary Ruozzo has improved the Minnesota offense.

"They execute and they don't make mistakes," said Nolan. "Cuozzo is a lot better passer than Joe Kapp. He has better touch and timing."

Running back Doug Cunningham and linebacker Skip Vanderbundt, who missed the last two games with injuries, were at practice Tuesday and doing some running. But Nolan says it's too early to determine their status for Sunday's battle.

Cunningham is still bothered with a hamstring pull while Vanderbundt has a sore knee.

The Forty Niners leave San Francisco at 2 p.m. Friday, their usual debarking time for an away game on a Sunday. That will allow the players a few hours with their families on Christmas morning

THE GREAT HOCKEY MYSTERY

TORONTO (UPI)—The Stanley Cup and two other National Hockey League trophies stolen from the Hockey Hall of Fame here Dec. 5 showed up mysteriously today in the driveway of a Toronto police constable.

Sgt. Wally Harkness was aroused by the barking of his dog in the early hours. When he went to see what was disturbing the dog he found the Stanley Cup, the Masterton Trophy and the Conn Smythe Trophy in his driveway.

The Stanley Cup is presented each year to the league's playoff champion.

The Masterton Cup is awarded at the end of each regular season by the NHL Writers Association to the player displaying the greatest perseverance, sportsmanship and dedication to hockey.

The Conn Smythe trophy is awarded each year to the player judged most valuable to his team throughout the playoffs.

Blackman To Illinois

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (UPI)—The University of Illinois made it official today—Bob Blackman, head football coach at Dartmouth College for the past 16 years, will be the new head football coach at Illinois.

Gene Vance, Illinois's athletic director, announced an action that had been published for almost two days and lacked only official confirmation by the Big Ten school seeking a drastic turn-about in its football misfortunes.

Vance said Blackman "would be recommended" for the post. The recommendation has the concurrence of the University President David H. Henry and Chancellor Jack W. Peltason, he said. Formal approval by the board of trustees on Jan. 20 was regarded as routine.

Blackman, 52, will replace Jim Valek, who was fired at the end of the season and woundup four seasons at Illinois with one of the poorest football records in the school's history.

Joe Ellis Is Award Winner

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Joe Ellis will have a nice Christmas, but the rest of the San Francisco Warriors might be a trifle glum.

Ellis was named today the winner of the Eddie Gottlieb award, given after a vote of fans and experts to the Warrior who has made the greatest contribution to the team.

Previous winners included Guy Rodgers, Rick Barry, Nate Thurmond, Rudy LaRusso and Jeff Mullins. The award includes $1,000 in cash.

The rest of the Warriors will have until Saturday night to mull over one of their worst showings, a 138-108 pasting by Boston—their second loss in a row. And things may not get better Swturday when they have to call on Milwaukee.

Jo-Jo White and John Havlcek combined for 68 Celts points Tuesday before a good crowd of 7,199.

Nate Thurmond had a season-high of 35 for San Francisco and Jerry Lucas added 26, but nobody else had over 14.

Los Angeles also lost so the Lakers lead the division at 19-14 with the Warriors (21-17) and San Diego (20-18) fighting for second.

Madden Expects A Toughie

OAKLAND (UPI)—The Miami Dolphins have always played the Oakland Raiders close to the vest and Raider coach John Madden expects things to continue in that vein.

"Miami has always been tough on us. . . even before Don Shula went there to coach," said Madden Tuesday.

"You have to respect the Dolphins. They have a 10-4 record, second best in the American Conference, they beat us 20-13 and they gave Baltimore (AFC East champ) one of their two losses by a 34-17 score. No, we respect them thoroughly."

Last year, Miami and Oakland tied 20-20 and the Raiders pulled out a 20-17 win.

Shula is not one to degrade an opponent, either, before a big game. The Raiders and Dolphins meet Sunday at the Oakland Coliseum in an AFC semifinal playoff.

"The Raiders are a fine football team with a lot of talent and with experience in big games," said Shula. "I don't feel our win over them in the early part of the season gives us any kind of an edge."

Behind the strong running of Larry Csonka and Jim Kiick, Miami emerged as the AFC's top running team, averaging 148.7 yards per game on the ground.

Csonka, a tough 238-pounder from Syracuse, moved ahead of Oakland's Hewritt Dixon in the final game of the season to finish as No. 2 rusher in the AFC behind Floyd Little of Denver with 884 yards. Little had 901 and Dixon 861.

Oakland is favored by seven points over the Dolphins.

Packers In Market For A New Coach

Bengtson Resigns Head Job

GREEN BAY, Wis. (UPI)—Phil Bengtson has resigned as head coach and general manager of the Green Bay Packers. The job of finding a successor is the immediate task of the team's ruling executive committee.

"The ideal thing would be to get a successor as soon as possible. But we won't panic and grab the first one that comes along," said Dominic Olejniczak, Green Bay Packer president and head of the executive cmmittee.

Although Olejniczak did not elaborate on the kind of man the Packers are looking for, he did say "we feel we need a man who can do a total job."

The 57-year-old Bengtson, who succeeded the late Vince Lombardi as Packer coach three years ago after molding the team's great championship defense of the 1960s, said he was making his move because of a "disappointing season" and a hope that a change would improve the Green Bay record in 1971.

"I want to emphasize that my experience with the Packers has been very enjoyable and I wish them every success in the future in the National Football League," Bengtson said Tuesday.

Bengtson's 1970 team finished with a 6-8 record, its worst since 1958, and managed to score only 14 points a game—the poorest Packer performance in 21 years.

Bengtson submitted his resignation in a letter to Olejniczak, who accepted it saying Bengtson "certainly is an outstanding gentleman and a fine citizen."

Bengtson just Sunday had indicated he hoped to be back next season as coach, but it was learned that at least some members of the executive committee met "informally" Monday at Green Bay.

The committee would have the final word on whether a change would be made, and although neither Bengtson nor Olejinczak would confirm it, there were reports the committee had derided some time ago to replace Bengtson and give him Monday an "either-or" decision to make.

The executive committee is scheduled to meet next week to establish ground rules for selecting a successor to Bengtson, Olejniczak said.

Olejniczak denied rumors the Packers have contacted other coaches.

"We could not without consulting the other teams," he said "That's the tampering rule."

Bengtson said he had no immediate plans except to rest for a while. He said he would like to stay in coaching in the Green Bay area.

Packer players expressed reactions varying.

"I was not completely surprised," said veteran defensive end Lionel Aldridge. "I firmly believe we lacked something. We didn't have togetherness."

When asked what type man the Packers should have as head coach, the eight-year veteran replied, "we need a guy who can speak and wouldn't have to repeat it.

"It will probably be one that we don't know—perhaps even out of the college ranks. But in any event, he's got to be tough with the players."

5-2 VICTORY

Streaking Seals Whip The Hawks

OAKLAND (UPI) —Credit the Hicke brothers for lifting the California Seals out of the basement of the National Hockey League West for the first time this season.

And they did it in convincing fashion Tuesday night by beating the high-flying Chicago Black Hawks 5-2 before 8,692 screamers at the Oakland Coliseum and a regional television audience.

Rookie Ernie Hicke scored two goals to take a 10-9 edge in goals this season over older brother Billy, who netted a tying score in the opening period.

With the Hickes providing a lot of the scoring power, the Seals have now won four straight to match a similar streak earlier in the season.

More important, it lifted the Seals out of last place in the West and dropped idle Los Angeles into the depths, one point back of California.

Oakland now has a chance to solidify its lofty standing by beating the Kings in head-to-head combat Saturday at the Los Angeles Forum. Then the Seals play road games at New York, Toronto, Montreal and Detroit before returning home Jan. 6.

Defensemen Carol Vadnais and Ron Stackhouse tallied the other two Seals goals against the Black Hawks who got lamplighters from Bobby Hull, in the first period and Pat Stapleton in the middle stanza.

Ernie Hicke broke a 1-1 deadlock in the second period when he pushed in a rebound after coming onto the ice as a sixth skater during a delayed penalty call on Chicago.

Stackhouse received credit for his second goal of the campaign midway through the final period when his shot from the point glanced off a Chicago stick and into the net. Ernie Hicke then tallied his 10th goal into an open net when Black Hawk goalie Jerry Desjardins was yanked for a sixth skater with the final seconds ticking away.

Eleven penalties were whistled in a rough second period. Chicago defenseman Jerry Korab received a misconduct and game misconduct after wrestling a lineman in an attempt to get into the middle of a fight between teammate Pit Martin and Dennis Hextall of the Seals.

Hart Rests After His Operation

Dr. Lloyd Taylor, who performed the operation at St. Mary's Hospital, said he removed some bone from the shoulder. The surgeon said he found "multiple, recurrent and chronic degenerate changes" in the shoulder bone which the surgery would remedy.

Hart was expected to take about three months to fully recover from the operation. He will be ready in time for spring training.

Dr. E. C. Sailer, Giants team physician, said Hart's shoulder "should be all right." Sailer said he would recommend a recuperative program in the near future for Hart.

The $35,000 a year veteran has been bothered by the shoulder since 1968 and aggravated it again at the start of the 1969 season. He finished the 1969 season with a .254 batting average and three homers in 95 games, his worst year of seven with the Giants.

After a successful stint with Phoenix of the AAA Pacific Coast League to start off the 1970 season, Hart was recalled by San Francisco. He hit a solid .282 in 76 games, including eight home runs and 37 runs batted in to finish out the season.

But constant pain in the shoulder after making a throw from the outfield late in the season persuaded Hart to have the operation.

Webster Signs New N.Y. Giants Contract

NEW YORK (UPI)—Alex Webster has survived the battle to make the New York Giants a contender again in the National Football League.

The Giant coach signed a one-year contract Tuesday for an estimated $40,000, a raise of about $10,000 over his present salary, after leading the team to a 9-5 record. The Giants had been 6-8 in Webster's first season as head coach in 1969.

A former running back with the Giants, Webster was the surprise choice to take over after Allie Sherman was fired. During both of Webster's seasons the Giants have gotten off to poor starts, and in 1971 they lost their first three games before coming within one game of their first divisional title since 1964.

Although New York owner Wellington Mara was agreeable to a longer contract, Webster said he would be happier playing it one year at a time.

"If he'd wanted it, I would have given him a longer term contract," said Mara. "When he first signed, I gave him a two-year contract because I told him it was like a battlefield promotion and the first year wouldn't be a real test. Even then, though, I knew he only wanted one-year contracts."

Mara said they "haggled for about 35 seconds" before reaching agreement on the terms. Then they launched into a two-hour discussion over plans for next season and the college draft.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

Real Estate Loans Offer High Interest

By ROGER E. SPEAR

Q. I would like your opinion on the investments offered on the enclosed brochures. Their high rate of return is very tempting. — J.W.

A. Your brochures are from real estate loan brokers, members of a young and fast-growing West Coast industry. These firms serve as intermediaries between individuals seeking loans on real property and private investors.

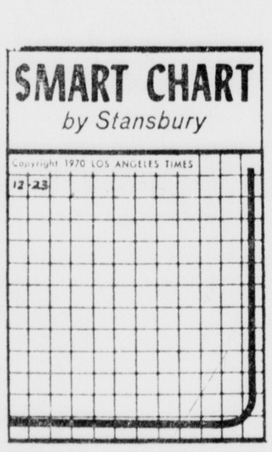
The loan broker appraises the property, investigates the applicant's finances, arranges a title search and provides property and title insurance if necessary. The borrower is usually a person with limited credit standing, no collateral other than the equity on his home, or a person lacking the down payment required for purchasing real estate.

In addition to paying interest on his loan, the borrower must also pay the loan broker's commission and escrow fees. The loans described in these brochures are second trust deeds, returning 10 per cent and more if the loan is paid in advance. The trust deed is officially recorded to secure a promissory note executed by the borrower to the lender with the loan broker as trustee.

Although many safeguards have been incorporated in the system, the possibility of loss remains. If the borrower defaults, the second trust deed holder, as well as the first, can request the trustee to institute foreclosure proceedings. If after three months the loan is still in default, notice of sale is published and following a three-week waiting period the property can be sold.

You, as second trust deed holder, may face paying the first loan in full, or at least making it current, in order to protect your own capital. Thus, although most loan brokers have an excellent record with no losses to investors, you could incur additional expense or a prolonged wait prior to collection.

Careful investigation of the particular loan broker's standing as well as your own ability to assume risk is a must before making a commitment of this sort.



"Sales are up in the hot buttered rum division."

Earnings for the previous quarter ended August 1970 were 37 cents per share, and for the November quarter a year ago 38 cents.

For the 12 months ended Nov. 30 the company earned $1.49 per common share, compared with $1.50 for the comparable period ended Nov. 30, 1969.

Safety Belts On Trains Proposed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Government safety investigators have suggested it may be advisable to put seat belts on passenger trains.

The National Transportation Safety Board recommended that the Federal Railroad Administration investigate the relationship between rail passenger car design and passenger injury — including the value of "occupant restraining devices."

The recommendation grew out of the board's investigation of a head-on collision between two Penn Central commuter trains Aug. 20, 1969, near Darien, Conn.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices were slightly higher in moderate trading on the New York Stock Exchange Wednesday.

As trading rounded the halfway point, advances were leading declines, 703 to 543, on 1,624 issues crossing the tape; Standard & Poor's 500 stock index was up 0.15 at 90.19; and the Dow Jones industrial average of 30 selected blue chips showed a gain of 0.14 at 822.91.

A three-hour turnover of 8,970,000 shares compared with 9,120,000 shares traded at a comparable period Tuesday. Among the day's most active issues American Cement off ⅜ on 156,300 shares, Xerox up ⅜ on 147,200 shares, Scott Paper off ⅛ on 129,100 shares, General Cable 1⅛ higher on 110,900 shares, and American Telephone up ⅜ on 99,000 shares.

City Investing and Burroughs rose a point or more. Bank stocks also gained despite continued easing of interest rates. First National City and Chase Manhattan rose 1⅛ and 1⅝ respectively.

Steels were slightly higher. Armco, Bethlehem and U.S. Steel gained ¼ apiece.

In the weak automotive group, Chrysler and Ford surrendered ⅛ each. General Motors held unchanged. Midwest Oil rose 1½ in its group. Jersey Standard added ¼, but Natomas and British Petroleum lost fractions.

Less active Penn Centra held unchanged. The Penn Central Transportation Co. operator of the Penn Central Railroad reported net losses of more than $252 million for the first 10 months of the year, with total liabilities of about $4 billion.

The railroad filed for reorganization last June 21, and is now being directed by four trustees appointed by Federal Judge John P. Fullam, who oversees the operations. The House Tuesday approved a $125 million government guaranteed loan to keep the railroad operating.

Unselfish Letter To Santa Claus

I guess it's been 45 years since I wrote to Santa Claus. As I remember it, I wanted things like a three-wheeled bike, a dog, a Graham McNamee football game, a catcher's mitt, an Indian suit, shoe skates, an Erecter set and a pony.

But that was only my first childhood and now, if I wrote to Santa, I would want things like teeth and eyesight and just one night's sleep like I had when I was five years old. I wish all my friends were 20 years youngers. I wish my feet and stomach didn't hurt all the time. I wish people laughed more and that I didn't need blood tests and electrocardiograms. I wish the kids were little and there's a lot of people I wish were still standing around the piano with us and singing old standards and drinking egg nogs.

I WISH I could sit once more in the Polo Grounds and see Hubbell for the first time. I wish I could watch Dizzy fogging the fast one in. I wish my uncle would take me to Pope Park and see Clay Hills play football against the Holy Name Society and I wish I could go to the Armory with him and see Bat Battalino and Louis (Kid) Kaplan and just once more I wish it were a rainy Labor Day in 1933 and Ruth hit one in the seats the only time I saw him play.

SOMETIMES I even wish I could cry.

But, never mind, Santa, my grandmother always told me Santa didn't like selfish children and that you were always meant to put in your letters requests like that the boy down the street with braces could walk again without them, or that the sightless man who sold papers downtown could one day see a tree.

SO, FORGET me, Santa, but here's the list:

1. Give Baseball another Stan Musial.
2. Give Boxing one more Joe Louis.
3. Give Basketball a young Cousy, or a healthy Baylor.
4. Give Golf an Arnold Palmer.
5. Give Doug Sanders that putt at St. Andrews over again.
6. Give Tennis a Bill Tilden.
7. Give Cincinnati just one pitcher.
8. Give the Los Angeles Kings double-runners.
9. Give the young, wisdom and the old, ideals.
10. Give us antoher Irving Berlin or, at least, keep Burt Bacharach cheerful.
11. Take back the atom bomb.
12. Give Timothy Leary a bum trip.
13. Give Henry Aaron 10 more years.
14. Give Ernie Banks one World Series.
15. Give Maury Wills one more pitcher he can get the jump on, then give him a team of his own.
16. Give Roberto Clemente one more MVP.
17. Give Willie Mays one more 420-foot drive to haul down with the bases loaded.
18. Give the Dodgers another Koufax, Drysdale, Podres rotation and a one-game lead going into September and print up the Series tickets — for four games only.
19. Give Jim Plunkett a good day in the Bowl where his mother can hear it and be happy.
20. Give us plays like "Fiddler on the Roof," movies like "Sound of Music," and songs like Gershwin's and books like Dickens'.
21. Take back 10 pounds, give me one more ride on a Park Street trolley on a snowy Christmas Eve, let me see one more kid's face light up at the sight of electric trains on Christmas morning and give the readers of this column all they want and I'm going to take five — days, that is — and see you at the chimney. Put a contract in the stocking for George Allen, tell Woody Hayes to smile, he's in light, and see you all after the holiday.

Grant: Weather Won't Be Factor

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI)—Minnesota Viking Coach Bud Grant doesn't believe the weather will favor either team Sunday when the Vikings host the San Francisco Forty-Niners here in a National Football Conference playoff game.

"Cold weather won't be much of a factor," he said Tuesday, explaining that if it gets extremely cold the Vikings will have to cut short their outdoor practices while the Forty-Niners will be working out in full-length drills in San Francisco.

The Forty-Niners will not arrive in Minnesota until late Christmas Day.

Fred Cox, the Vikings field goal specialist and the NFC's top scorer of the year, said the weather can be a factor in kicking "once you get below 20 or 15."

"On a cold day the field goal kicking is limited to 40-45 yards," Cox said. "There may be as much as a five-to-6-yard difference in the length of a kick. The real problem is the second half late in the game. By the end of the third quarter, the ball is well cooled off."

The cold weather, he explained, affects the resiliency of the ball, making it harder.

Grant said the Vikings have not had a chance to study films of the Forty-Niners and the players were not yet familiar with the team since the Vikings did not play them during the regular season.

He said the Vikings and Forty-Niners will exchange films of only their last two games. "But, a film going from New York to San Francisco just might pass through Minneapolis on the way," he said.

He said Forty-Niner quarterback John Brodie "is a premium quarterback," but "he's not the whole team."

The Forty-Niner defense "might resemble Dallas," Grant said. He said there was no real way to compare them with any other team.

Grant said linebacker Roy Winston and safety Paul Krause, both hurt in last Sunday's game against Atlanta, will be ready for the playoffs. Cornerback Ed Sharockman, who sat out the Atlanta game with a bruised knee, also should be ready.

Showers May Force Grid Teams Indoors

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI)—Showers may force Stanford and Ohio State football squads indoors today in their drills for the Rose Bowl game but the coaches seemed unworried by that prospect.

Woody Hayes, the Ohio State mentor who bars sports writers from Buckeye practice at East Los Angeles College, said he has had much experience with stormy weather.

"Many years ago when I coached at Dennison University," he recalled, "we had to work the kids inside and then shovel the snow off the field one or two days a week when we were able to get outside. There are some things you can do inside to improve the team although we don't do any hitting. They don't leave their feet."

The going was a bit wet Tuesday for the Buckeyes who went through an apparently routine workout. "It's too early to key up a team right now," said Hayes. "At this stage we're busy just working."

Hayes said his teams "really get up" only about three times a year. They got up emotionally for Northwestern and Michigan in compiling a 9-0 record.

"You have to pick the teams you want to get emotional about," he said.

The implication was that the Buckeyes would be needled a bit by their coaches to get up for the Indians on New Year's Day.

Stanford coach John Ralston described the two workouts his squad had Tuesday at Cal State Long Beach field as "very good."

"The field drained off well from the rains," he said. "We worked under dry conditions."

Intermittent rains hit the area on the weekend and a new storm was forecast.

Ralston reported two defensive tackles, Greg Sampson and Dave Tipton, are suffering from the flu. Tipton did not work out Tuesday.

Ohio State fullback John Brockington was a major wheel in the Buckeye offense. He gained more than 100 yards in five games and had a total of 1,040, a new school record.

Ralston permits sports writers to watch Indian drills.

He pointed out Ohio State has had the opportunity to view 11 films of Stanford games and said, "I don't think there's anything new they can learn about us."

Chargers, Oilers Trade Linemen

SAN DIEGO (UPI)—The San Diego Chargers sent tight end Willie Frazier to the Houston Oilers Tuesday in exchange for guard Doug Wilkerson.

Frazier, 6-foot-4, 250-pounds, played with the Oilers in 1964 and 1965. With the Chargers during the past season he caught 38 passes for 497 yards and six touchdowns.

Wilkerson, 6-3, was Houston's No. 1 draft choice. He was a reserve guard for the Oilers.

NBA ROUNDUP

By United Press International

Hazzard, traded away by Los Angeles, scored the winning basket, a 15-foot shot with 36 seconds left, to give the Hawks a 119-115 victory over his old teammates Tuesday night.

The Hawks trailed by 19 points in the second quarter, but Hazzard almost singlehandedly brought them back in the third quarter as he scored 19 of his game-high 32 points. The Hawks outscored Los Angeles 41-21 in that third period with most of Hazzard's baskets coming on his Alley Oop shot.

In other National Basketball Association games, Seattle beat New York 119-108, Chicago defeated Cleveland 121-80, Boston turned back San Francisco 138-108 and Philadelphia overcame a 25-point deficit to beat Phoenix 133-129 in overtime.

New York's flu-stricken center Willis Reed and Bill Bradley, out with a turned ankle, will be back later this week, but the Knicks could have used them against Seattle. Tom Meschery and Lenny Wilkens led Seattle with 20 points each.

Philadelphia rookie Dennis Awtrey and veterans Archie Clark, Billy Cunningham and Hal Greer led the comeback against Phoenix, which had led by 72-47 at one point. Awtrey finished with 23 points, including 15 in the last 11 minutes of the third quarter, and Cunningham added 25, 21 in the second half and nine in overtime. Clark had 26 and Greer 23.

Jo Jo White got 35 points, 22 in the first half, and John Havlicek got 33, including 20 in the second half, as Boston coasted past San Francisco.

The Chicago Bulls also had an easy time, coasting to their biggest victory margin in their five years in the NBA over hapless Cleveland. It was the Bulls' eighth win in nine games, and Cleveland's 36th loss in 39 games.

BOATING

By STAN DAVIES

Safety Always Is In Season

Good boat handling techniques are something a boater can acquire only by experience. There is no other way. You have to get the "feel" of handling a boat yourself and incidentally make a few mistakes.

HOWEVER, I find that a lot of knowledge about boating techniques can be gained without ever having been afloat. I firmly believe that if beginners in the sport do a lot of reading, and perhaps think about boating and sailing, they will learn much more quickly when they do the thing for real.

So this is an admonition to get a few boating books this winter while the action is slow and study some of the basic principles of seamanship, piloting, navigation and motor or engine maintenance. You'll be better for it when the boating season gets back into full swing next summer.

I FIND, too, that people who know the most about boating generally know the most about SAFE boating specifically. Here are typical questions that could be answered quickly by anyone who had read even a rudimentary text:

Q. I have an outboard boat that is speedy and agile. Recently I drove a large powerful inboard boat. Response to the helm was sluggish. Is this normal?

A. Everything is relative, and by comparision with a speedy outboard any big inboard is "sluggish." In an outboard, when the motor is turned, the whole thrust of the outboard is used to cause the boat to turn. But in an inboard there is never more than half the "discharge current" from the propeller acting upon the rudder.

Q. I have just read that sailing craft no longer have the right of way. . .is this so?

A. The law change is now five years old, but I guess some people still have not heard about it. The new rule says that large ships are no longer required to give way to small maneuverable sailing craft in harbors or narrow channels. However, on inland waters, the rule is the same as ever . . . a power driven craft is obliged to keep out of the way of a sailboat.

Q. It seems to be poor design, but the stern of my boat is so low that water comes in every time I stop the outboard motor.

A. At one time the outboard motor manufacturers got together and agreed on a uniform 15-inch height for the transom. . .that's the flat area at the stern. This was to make all motors standard. However, now you can get long shaft motors. . .20 inches. This will let you build up your transom and put in a self bailing motor well ahead of it. This will catch any water that comes aboard.

Q. What's a trim tab?

A. It's a gadget installed on the stern of a boat flush with the bottom, as a kind of extension of the bottom. Tabs, usually installed in pairs, can be adjusted so that they react on the water rushing under the boat to keep the bow down if it rides too high.

UCLA Comes Back Strong After Layoff

By United Press International

When a basketball team has had a 10-day layoff and is so cold on its return it can make only 20 of 40 free throws, it hasn't a chance, right?

Wrong, when that team is UCLA.

Despite the obvious slowdown because of the break for quarterly exams, the great Bruins beat Missouri 94-75 at Pauley Pavillion Tuesday night. Missouri had come into the game with a 7-1 record.

The great one-two punch up front of Sidney Wicks and Curtis Rowe combined for 57 points and 26 rebounds.

The Pacific Eight followed up its 5-1 Monday with a 3-0 Tuesday.

California, lone Pac-8 loser Monday by a point, took consolation honors at the Michigan Invitational at Ann Arbor with a 77-74 squeaker over Harvard. Charlie Johnson scored five of his 16 points in the last 56 seconds to bust it open.

Washington State's Jim Meredith hit 12 of 17 shots to lead Washington State to the 90-68 win over Nevada-Reno for the Cougars' seventh straight win.

Elsewhere, Brigham Young got off to a fast start and hung on to win at Santa Clara 68-67. Mike Stewart of the losers had 18.

Redwood Cagers Whip Alumni Team

Scott Trobbe and Steve McGee led the victory with 27 points each. Score at half saw Redwood ahead, 43-31.

AAU President Has Hopes For Changes

NEW YORK (UPI) —Jack Kelly, president of the Amateur Athletic Union, has served notice that his reign will be an iconoclastic one.

"I would like to see some of the Philadelphia Eagles or the 76ers take up rowing," Kelly said Tuesday. "And take the case of Wilt Chamberlain. He was a great track star in high school and would have been a great decathlon man, if he could have competed in that event as an amateur while maintaining his pro basketball status."

Kelly, the Henley Regatta winner in 1947 and 1949, Pan-Am game winner in 1955 and 1959, and Olympic bronze medal winner in 1956, believes that the AAU and all amateur sports "need a little more consistency, a little less hypocrisy."

He sees no reason why a man cannot be an amateur in one sport, a pro in another.

Kelly claimed Communist countries maintain athletes "in training at least six months a year. By American standards, that would be blatant professionalism.

"Our concepts of amateurism originated in Victorian England when only the aristocracy competed," Kelly observed. "Amateur sports for a long time was a recreation for the rich. The past organizers of amateur sports did not conceive of the problems of athletes today, or of the universality of participation in sports."

Kelly spoke as the AAU disclosed a new television pact for 18 Sunday afternoon telecasts during 1971.

Five gymnastics and swimming events are scheduled, marking the first time non-track-and-field events will be shown. Track and field rounds out the remainder of the schedule.

West Plans On Passing

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The West squad in the Shrine game may sacrifice one running back spot to get an extra pass receiver in there.

Coach Eddie Crowder's West team has only two running backs, Willie Armstrong, a 230-pounder from Grambling, and Washington's Bo Cornell.

Armstrong could handle the up-the-middle stuff and pass blocking with Cornell to spell him off. Then receivers such as Missouri speedster Mel Gray or Houston's Elmo Wright might start in the backfield. USC's Bob Chandler, Oregon's Bob Newland and SMU's Ken Fleming round out the sensational group of pass-catchers on the West.

Crowder also gave indications he planned to pass a lot when he told the Shrine luncheon Tuesday that all three of his quarterbacks would pass. They include UCLA's Dennis Dummitt, SMU's Chuck Hixson and Santa Clara's big Dan Pastorini.

Insurance Pact Near Formal Nod

Marin County Board of Supervisors yesterday approved in principle a compromise proposal for damage insurance on Civic Center buildings.

However, supervisors would not give blanket approval until the terms of the insurance had been "tied down in writing" by the two insurance companies involved.

The compromise offered by Fireman's Fund American Insurance Companies would drop the amount of deductible from the $100,000 mentioned last month to $25,000 or $15,000 per claim.

At present, the main insurer of the Civic Center buildings is United States Fidelity and Guaranty Co. Firemen's Fund is the re-insurer. The county pays $29,000 premium for $16 million coverage, with $100 deductible. Under the new proposal, Fireman's Fund would become a co-insurer with USF&G, each taking 50 per cent of the coverage.

Thomas F. Campanella, assistant county administrator, said Fireman's Fund offers the county these two choices:

1. A maximum deductible of $25,000 for any one claim arising from riots or explosion and maximum deductible of $5,000 for any one claim resulting from other causes.

2. Maximum deductible of $15,000 for each claim resulting from any cause, and a maximum of $30,000 deductible for a combination of all losses incurred between now and next July 1.

Campanella recommended the county accept the second alternate, which limits the total deductible for all losses for the next six months to $30,000.

Fireman's Fund said these offers are conditioned on various security measures to be taken at the Civic Center and Hall of Justice.

"Are we locking ourselves in to taking additional security measures?" asked Peter R. Arrigoni Jr.

"Pete's point is well taken," agreed chairman John F. McInnis. "We must know more about what those additional security measures are."

On a motion by Arrigoni, the supervisors approved Fireman's Fund's offer in principle and asked the county administrator to work out the details and get them in writing, particularly from the county's present carrier, USF&G.

Chefs Competing For Cafeteria Bid

Two San Rafael chefs who offer personalized service, are competing against Manning's Inc. for the right to take over the Civic Center cafeteria beginning Jan. 11.

Michael A. Chrystal, senior administrative analyst in the county administrator's offic e, said the best offer of the six bids came from Manning's.

Manning's will buy $27,000 worth of initial equipment such as tables, chairs and plates and lease them to the county at an interest rate of 5 per cent. Manning's wants 9 per cent of the gross receipts.

Donald A. Giovannoni, lunch chef at West End Villa in San Rafael, and Camille Bamatter, night chef at the same restaurant, also put in a bid for the Civic Center cafeteria.

"If only price is considered, I can't compete with a company like Manning's," Giovannoni told the Marin County Board of Supervisors. But if it is quality food and personalized service, such as special suites for county supervisors and their VIP guests, Giovannoni said he could provide it.

Giovannoni wants 9 per cent interest from the county on the initial equipment which he will buy, and between 3.5 per cent and 28 per cent of the gross receipts, depending on the amount of total sales.

Supervisor Peter R. Arrigoni Jr. said he could not accept Giovannoni's offer as presented because of the uncertain percentage of gross receipts that Giovannoni seeks. It ranges between 3.5 per cent and 28 per cent, whereas Manning's asks for a straight 9 per cent regardless of sales.

At Arrigoni's request, supervisors put off action until next Tuesday so they can study the detailed offers, including menu and prices, by both Manning's and Giovannoni.

Chrystal said Giovannoni offers quality hot meals for $1.20 to $1.40, whereas Manning's price would be 85 cents to $1.05.

Firemen's Pay Raised; Deputies' Appeal Heard

Marin County Supervisors ate yesterday approved a 1970-71 contract for 35 firemen and 15 communications workers, giving them a 5 per cent pay raise retroactive to Dec. 1.

The 5 per cent raise from this month is in addition to the 5 per cent granted by the county on Sept. 1. A fire warden II, now getting $717 per month, will go up to $753 as of Dec. 1.

The new contract means that the total salary for firemen and communications workers this fiscal year will average out at slightly less than if they had accepted a 7.5 per cent raise at the start of the fiscal year last July 1, but will be more next year.

With firemen and communications workers coming to terms on this year's contract, the only group now working without a contract are the 118 sheriff's deputies, who broke away last month from the other emergency services employees (firemen and communications workers).

San Francisco attorney J. W. Ehrlich, hired by the sheriff's deputies to bargain for them, appeared before the county supervisors yesterday to appeal for a pay raise of at least 7.5 per cent.

Since deputies got a five per cent raise on Sept. 1, another 7.5 per cent would mean a 12.5 per cent raise for this year. Deputies had held out for a 12.5 per cent raise when negotiations broke down three months ago.

"I'm not threatening you," Ehrlich assured the supervisors. "But suppose that these men said well, the only salavation for us is to become a part and parcel of labor. Suppose they became members of the Teamsters Union and were ordered out. Where on God's green earth would we be?"

Supervisors then met behind closed doors with the county negotiating team to give instructions for further negotiations with Ehrlich.

DONALD K. STUART
Retiring executive

Stuart Ends 47 Years With PG&E

Donald K. Stuart of Novato, North Bay Division superintendent for Pacific Gas and Electric Company, will retire Jan. 1 after 47 years, the company has announced.

Stuart assumed his present position in the San Rafael office in 1956.

He joined the utilities company in 1923 as an assistant file clerk and in 1944 was named supervising foreman of an electric line crew in Hayward, the company said.

He was transferred to San Mateo in 1953 as district electric superintendent.

Stuart, a widower, has a son, Navy Cmdr. Donald Stuart of Virginia and a daughter, Katherine White of Columbia, S.C. He lives at 5 Kaden Court.

Two Injured In Auto Accident

Two persons have been injured in a two car accident at Third Street and Hetherton Street, San Rafael police reported.

Monita Gerson Waldo, 42, of 514 Main Street, Sausalito, was treated for chest bruises Marin General Hospital officials reported. Marywinn Ekstrom, 34, of P.O. Box 894, Sausalito, was treated for cuts on the forehead and left eyelid, hospital officials said.

The Waldo car, southbound on Hetherton, collided at 5 p.m. Sunday with a westbound car on Third Street, driven by Louis Stanley Overhouse, 55, Box 17, San Quentin, according to police.

Report Is Due On Court Action

The case of Robert Morrison Gould, 19, of Novato has been referred to the probation department for a report on whether he is acceptable to Marin Juvenile Court.

Gould was arrested in October by the California Highway Patrol on a charge of possessing marijuana for sale.

Bids Rejected On Drydocks Removal

The huge drydocks mired in Richardson Bay off Sausalito may have to be burned to the water line because conventional demolition is too expensive, the Marin County Board of Supervisors decided yesterday.

A low bid of $74,475 to remove the four drydocks came from Willamette-Western Corp. of Richmond. Two other bids ranged to a high of $295,452.

Supervisors rejected all bids. "We can't afford to pay that kind of money," said chairman John F. McInnis.

The supervisors turned instead to a new burning proposal presented yesterday by Fred Grange of San Rafael and Ralph L. Fenner of Oakland, a specialist in high energy burning.

Fenner said he can burn the drydocks to below the water line with no smoke or hazard, then float the remaining hulk and tow it away — all for less than $30,000.

Fenner added that he and his partners are prepared to appear before the Bay Area Air Pollution Control District board of directors for a special burning permit.

Supervisors asked the County Administrator to investigate the Grange-Fenner proposal and come back with a recommendation.

The drydocks, owned by J. Christopher Roberts of Mill Valley, were ordered demolished or removed by Marin Superior Court Judge Samuel W. Gardiner.

Unanimous Approval To Marin Logging Ordinance

Marin's logging ordinance, drafted after two years of work by the county's natural resources committee, won unanimous approval of the Marin County Board of Supervisors yesterday. (Other board of supervisors stories, page 1).

The 21-page ordinance, outlining in detail the requirements imposed on timber harvesters, including erosion control and reforestation, will be administered by the Marin County Planning Commission.

John F. Barrows, who headed the natural resources committee, said his group split over one issue: Who would administer the ordinance.

Barrows, Jean Barnard and Normand H. Traverso held that the public works department could administer the ordinance and issue logging permits because the ordinance is so specific, there is little room for policy judgment.

But the majority, including Public Works Director Donald R. Frost declared a logging permit is too important an issue to be decided on the staff level.

"Either the planning commission or the board of supervisors should issue the permit," insisted Frost.

On a motion by Michael Wornum and a second by William A. Gnoss, supervisors gave the job to the county planning commission. The new logging ordinance will go into effect in 30 days.

Installation cost will be $3,494, and service charge and maintenance cost will be $267 per month. The contract is for a minimum of two years.

DISCRIMINATION — Denied that the county is discriminating against women in hiring and promotions. Arthur Padilla, representing the National Organization for Women, Marin County chapter, charged that the county does not even send a list of county job opportunities to the State Department of Human Resources office in San Rafael. Supervisors ordered that job openings be sent to the Human Resources office.

Detectors For Civic Center Due

Metal detectors will be used at the entrances to the Civic Center and Hall of Justice so that body searches can be lessened somewhat, county administrator Alan Bruce reported yesterday.

He and Marin County Board of Supervisors assured the public that women will not be led into booths for frisking. However, present security measures, including the closing of buildings at night, will continue.

At the request of the Marin Human Rights Commission and a group of citizens and county employees supervisors set a public hearing for Jan. 19 for a report from Bruce on the security measures taken so far.

Marin City Firemen Get Temporary Mobile Home

water and rats, and it is impossible to keep men there."

County Fire Chief Louis J. Bloom said the morale of his men is low, and firemen refuse to continue working in the substandard firehouse.

The poor condition of the firehouse was revealed last week at a meeting of the Marin County Personnel Commission. Commissioners ordered an immediate investigation.

The county fire station in Marin City will be temporarily replaced by a mobile home, leased at a cost of $965 for six months.

Marin County Board of Supervisors voted for a mobile home,, 10 feet by 57 feet, to be placed next to the existing structure for use by firemen until a new firehouse is built.

County Administrator Alan Bruce told the supervisors yesterday that the existing firehouse across the street from Manzanita Center is "full of

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

Real Estate Loans Offer High Interest

By ROGER E. SPEAR

Q. I would like your opinion on the investments offered on the enclosed brochures. Their high rate of return is very tempting. — J.W.

A. Your brochures are from real estate loan brokers, members of a young and fast-growing West Coast industry. These firms serve as intermediaries between individuals seeking loans on real property and private investors.

The loan broker appraises the property, investigates the applicant's finances, arranges a title search and provides property and title insurance if necessary. The borrower is usually a person with limited credit standing, no collateral other than the equity on his home, or a person lacking the down payment required for purchasing real estate.

In addition to paying interest on his loan, the borrower must also pay the loan broker's commission and escrow fees. The loans described in these brochures are second trust deeds, returning 10 per cent and more if the loan is paid in advance. The trust deed is officially recorded to secure a promissory note executed by the borrower to the lender with the loan broker as trustee.

Although many safeguards have been incorporated in the system, the possibility of loss remains. If the borrower defaults, the second trust deed holder, as well as the first, can request the trustee to institute foreclosure proceedings. If after three months the loan is still in default, notice of sale is published and following a three-week waiting period the property can be sold.

You, as second trust deed holder, may face paying the first loan in full, or at least making it current, in order to protect your own capital. Thus, although most loan brokers have an excellent record with no losses to investors, you could incur additional expense or a prolonged wait prior to collection.

Careful investigation of the particular loan broker's standing as well as your own ability to assume risk is a must before making a commitment of this sort.

This wingless model plane is scheduled to take off on an unmanned test flight late this year. Developed by West German engineers, the craft called the "aerodyne," is 16 feet long, weighs 889 pounds and its tail is about the only characteristic thing of today's standard planes. Safety Belts On Trains Proposed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Government safety investigators have suggested it may be advisable to put seat belts on passenger trains.

The National Transportation Safety Board recommended that the Federal Railroad Administration investigate the relationship between rail passenger car design and passenger injury — including the value of "occupant restraining devices."

The recommendation grew out of the board's investigation of a head-on collision between two Penn Central commuter trains Aug. 20, 1969, near Darien, Conn.

Angela Is Arraigned On Shoot-Out Role

Heavy Security Prevails Next To Haley's Chamber

By MARY LEYDECKER

The arraignment of Black Communist Angela Y. Davis took place today under heavy security in a Marin Superior courtroom next door to the one from which Judge Harold J. Haley was kidnapped on Aug. 7.

She was returned to Marin yesterday from New York to face charges of murder, kidnapping and conspiracy stemming from the shoot-out, in which the judge and three others died.

Miss Davis, wearing a bright print Empire-style dress and full Afro hairstyle, smiled at spectators, who included reporters, a few of her supporters and plainclothesmen, as she was led into the courtroom from a holding cell.

During the brief proceedings, Judge E. Warren McGuire placed persons involved in the case under stringent orders not to discuss the case with news media.

The attorneys who represented Miss Davis in her New York flight to avoid extradition, John J. Abt and Margaret Burnham, were in court today but said they will not represent her in subsequent California proceedings.

Miss Burnham, a young black woman who grew up with Miss Davis in Birmingham, asked a three-week continuance so that the militant leader may obtain a local attorney.

Judge McGuire finally granted a two-week continuance after Dist. Atty. Bruce B. Bales had suggested only one week. She will reappear in court at 9 a.m. Jan. 5 for further arraignment and other proceedings.

Bales introduced in court Albert W. Harris Jr., assistant attorney general, who will prosecute the case since Bales has withdrawn because of his close friendship with the late Judge and Asst. Dist. Atty. Gary W. Thomas, wounded in the shoot-out.

After Harris handed Miss Davis a copy of the indictment, Judge McGuire made his order regarding pretrial publicity.

Noting that the case has received extensive coverage in the press, he said that anyone, including lawyers, witnesses and court attaches, who violates the order not to discuss the case will be in contempt of court.

He also ordered that the transcript of the Marin County grand jury proceedings which led to the indictment of Miss Davis — a copy of which was given to Abt today — remain sealed until Jan. 6.

Miss Davis's appearance in court brought forth even more security precautions than had been customary at

Hanoi In More Benevolent Mood

By RAY F. HERNDON

PARIS (UPI)—North Vietnam scaled down its peace demands today. It apparently dropped its demand for the ouster of the present Saigon regime and it offered a ceasefire if the United States would halt reconnaissance flights over the north and withdraw its troops by mid-1971.

After the meeting the U.S. delegate dismissed the Communist proposals as "a repetition of the demand by the other side that we withdraw our forces by a given date without regard to the question of North Vietnamese withdrawals.

"We made it clear again that we were prepared to negotiate a timetable for complete withdrawals as part of an overall settlement," he said. "That must also encompass the question of North Vietnamese forces in Laos, Cambodia and South Vietnam."

In a related development to the Paris talks, Secretary of State William P. Rogers today in Washington condemned as "a contemptible maneuver" North Vietnam's release of a list of names of American prisoners.

The Secretary said Hanoi was using the prisoner lists simply to divert attention from the inhumanity of its treatment of POW's and smacked of "barbarism" because the action raised hopes of prisoners' families that more names might be included than were on previous lists.

All previous Hanoi statements demanded a provisional coalition government that excluded the three top Saigon leaders as a necessary step toward the restoration of total peace in South Vietnam. There was no mention of that demand today.

The statement delivered by chief North Vietnamese delegate Xuan Thuy said the question of South Vietnam's political future was open to discussion if the Nixon administration agreed to Hanoi's latest conditions.

U.S. Ambassador David K. E. Bruce also toned down the American statements today. Instead of using words like "inhumane" to describe Hanoi's treatment of war prisoners he said it was "unsatisfactory" in the North and "disgraceful" in Viet Cong controlled areas of the south.

The new Hanoi conditions for peace were inserted into the North Vietnamese statement after it had been mimeographed for distribution to newsmen.

Thuy's modified proposals were presented to the conference after the U.S. delegate

ONLY ONE MARINITE ON LIST

Only one Marinite — and he had long ago been reported a prisoner of war — was on the list of captured American pilots acknowledged by Hanoi to be in North Vietnamese hands.

He is Air Force Capt. William W. Butler of San Rafael, whose F-105 was shot down over Hanoi three years ago.

Not on the list were M Sgt. Robert L. Hill of Loma Verde a flight engineer, and James D. Birchin, a Green Beret captain, who have been reported missing in action. North Vietnam said however, the list contained only pilots in its hands, but was a complete list of such prisoners.

Polish Premier Out; Death Toll Reported

WARSAW (APT) —Jozef Cyrankiewicz, the longtime prime minister of Poland, was ousted in a government shakeup today.

Piotr Jaroszewicz, an army general and economics expert, was elected prime minister to succeed Cyrankiewicz. Cyrankiewicz was elected to the largely ceremonial job of president.

The government changes—like those in the top Communist Party leadership Sunday—were a direct outgrowth of the Baltic food riots last week.

Cyrankiewicz's "letter of resignation" was presented to a meeting of the Polish parliament.

A letter of resignation also came from President Marian Spychalski, who had been removed from the party's ruling politburo Sunday along with his close friend, former party leader Wladyslaw Gomulka.

Cyrankiewicz, 59, had been premier since 1947, except for two years as deputy premier in 1952-54. A large, bald, jovial man, he is known as both a lover of good living and as a relatively liberal moderating influence on the Polish regime.

New details trickling out of Szczecin indicate last week's riots were more serious than official reports have shown, diplomatic sources said today.

Well-informed sources said the death toll in the seaport near the East German border was more than 50. They said workers occupied the Warski shipyard in Szczecin last Thursday and successfully held out for a 15 per cent pay rise in the face of army troops.

Diplomatic observers said the clashes were believed to have ceased since troops and police imposed control Thursday night and the situation appeared to be steadily returning to normal since the rise of Gierek.

Polish television announced Tuesday night that the government had annulled special emergency laws announced Dec. 17 that gave police and

New Crackdowns On Waste Dumping

WASHINGTON (UPI) —President Nixon, in a major crackdown on pollution, issued an order today requiring industries to obtain a federal permit to dump wastes and discharges into U.S. waters.

The chief executice, in an executive order, directed the establishment of a federal permit program under the Refuse Act of 1899 which would bar any firm from discharging pollutants such as chemicals into rivers and streams.

(Nixon's order came one day after a ban on dumping wastes into the ocean outside the Golden Gate. The ban, ordered by the San Francisco Bay Regional Water Quality Control Board — see page 15 — did not provide for permits to dump wastes.)

Nixon said the new program "will enhance the ability of the federal government to enforce water quality standards and provide a major strengthening of our efforts to clean up our nation's water."

Under the rarely enforced 71-year-old law, persons and firms are required to submit to state authorities and the federal government data concerning wastes they plan to dump into navigable waters.

Industrial plants now operating must obtain government permits by July 1. New plants will have to get government consent immediately.

The applications for permits are to be submitted to the Army Corps of Engineers which will work closely with the newly created Environmental Protection Agency as well as other federal and state authorities in determining water quality.

Guidelines on the new program will be printed in the Federal Register in the next day or so and comment will be invited.

Russell E. Train, chairman of the Council on Environmental Quality, said it would take about 45 days for the new regulations to become effective.

In the meantime, violators of water quality standards will be subject to prosecution under the refuse act, he said.

In his statement accompanying the order, Nixon said "implementation of a program of this magnitude will not be

Charles Ruggles Dies At 84

Famed for his wheezing, Casper Milquetoast portrayals, Ruggles appeared in scores of motion pictures in the 30s, 40s and 50s. He also starred in the theater and appeared on radio and television.

But it was his hesitant interpretations of confused little men in films for which he was best known.

Ruggles was admitted to St. John's Hospital in Santa Monica, Calif., in September. A family member said he was a victim of cancer.

A native of Los Angeles, Ruggles spent his last years living in seni-retirement in Brentwood, a suburb of Los Three-Day Christmas Weekend!

Most government workers in Marin and Southern Sonoma will get a three-day Christmas weekend, although employees in three cities will have longer holidays.

Novato city employees will get tomorrow off as well as Christmas. Larkspur and Sausalito city offices and the Sausalito library will close at noon tomorrow until Monday. All other city, county, state and federal offices will close Friday.

Post offices will not deliver mail, except special delivery, Christmas Day, Saturday and Sunday. Major post offices will have window service only from 8:30 a.m. to noon Saturday.

Major stores will be closed on Christmas Day, except Thrifty Drug in Corte Madera, which will be open from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Most stores will reopen on Saturday.

Some grocery stores, liquor stores and restaurants will remain open on Christmas. Persons wanting to dine out should check restaurants before going out.

Public schools will remain closed until Jan. 4.

Parking meters will not function anywhere except in Sausalito on Christmas Day.

The Independent-Journal will not publish Christmas Day.

Bicyclists Win Major Victories

Marin bicyclists won major victories on two fronts yesterday in their fight for an expanded bike pathy system.

In San Rafael, the Marin County Board of Supervisors approved an agreement under which it would receive a $30,000 state grant to link Sausalito and the Richardson Bay Bridge with a bike path — the last major obstacle blocking a cyclist's ride between Golden Gate Bridge and Sonoma County.

In Tiburon, the city council last night announced that Northwestern Pacific Railroad has agreed to sell one portion of its right-of-way and donate the balance to the city for a bike and pedestrian path — two miles in all.

County and Tiburon officials hailed the agreements as Christmas presents to bike enthusiasts.

The $30,000 grant to the county announced after lengthy negotiation among the county bike enthusiasts and the state Division of Highways, will provide a six-foot-wide paved path alongside the Northwestern Pacific Railroad right-of-way and adjacent to Highway 101.

The state Division of Highways at first resisted plans to place the path closer to the highway, but agreed to provide the $30,000 when propoents argued that the state had blocked pedestrian access between the Richardson Bay Bridge and Sausalito when the freeway was constructed.

Northwestern Pacific has agreed to lease an easement to the county for the bike path for $1,000 annually. The bike path will be fenced from the railroad tracks.

While the $30,000 grant still must be approved by the state highway commission, the board of supervisors was told, Pierre W. Joske, county parks and recreation director, said he thought chances of approval were excellent.

In Tiburon, Mayor Denis T. Rice said that Northwestern Pacific has agreed to sell a small portion of the right-of-way to the city for $100,000 and donate the bal-

Banks Cut Prime Rate Fifth Time

NEW YORK (UPI)—Commercial banks throughout the nation, following the lead of Chase Manhattan Bank, reduced their prime interest rates for the fifth time this year Tuesday and one authority said this could lead to lower mortgage rates by spring.

The trend in business loan rates and in business loan demand "promises lower mortgage rates by the beginning of the spring building season," Everett C. Spelman, president of the Mortgage Bankers Association, said. The White House voiced this hope.

Chase Manhattan started the cutback, the fifth within recent months, announcing early Tuesday it was lowering the rate it charges its most creditworthy corporate borrowers from 7 to3-4 per cent.

The move quickly spread to the West Coast where the Bank

Insurance Pact Near Formal Nod

Marin County Board of Supervisors yesterday approved in principle a compromise proposal for damage insurance on Civic Center buildings.

However, supervisors would not give blanket approval until the terms of the insurance had been "tied down in writing" by the two insurance companies involved.

The compromise offered by Fireman's Fund American Insurance Companies would drop the amount of deductible from the $100,000 mentioned last month to $25,000 or $15,000 per claim.

At present, the main insurer of the Civic Center buildings is United States Fidelity and Guaranty Co. Firemen's Fund is the re-insurer. The county pays $29,000 premium for $16 million coverage, with $100 deductible. Under the new proposal, Fireman's Fund would become a co-insurer with USF&G, each taking 50 per cent of the coverage.

Thomas F. Campanella, assistant county administrator, said Fireman's Fund offers the county these two choices:

1. A maximum deductible of $25,000 for any one claim arising from riots or explosion and maximum deductible of $5,000 for any one claim resulting from other causes.

2. Maximum deductible of $15,000 for each claim resulting from any cause, and a maximum of $30,000 deductible for a combination of all losses incurred between now and next July 1.

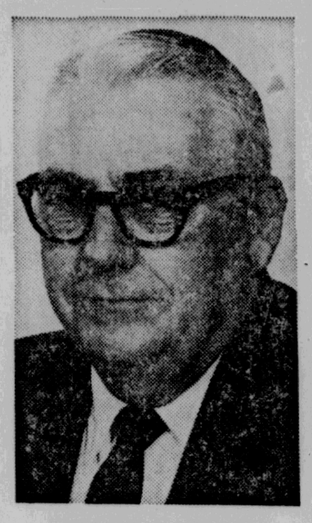
Campanella recommended the county accept the second alternate, which limits the total deductible for all losses for the next six months to $30,000.

Fireman's Fund said these offers are conditioned on various security measures to be taken at the Civic Center and Hall of Justice.

"Are we locking ourselves in to taking additional security measures?" asked Peter R. Arrigoni Jr.

"Pete's point is well taken," agreed chairman John F. McInnis. "We must know more about what those additional security measures are."

On a motion by Arrigoni, the supervisors approved Fireman's Fund's offer in principle and asked the county administrator to work out the details and get them in writing, particularly from the county's present carrier, USF&G.



DONALD K. STUART

Stuart Ends 47 Years With PG&E

Donald K. Stuart of Novato, North Bay Division superintendent for Pacific Gas and Electric Company, will retire Jan. 1 after 47 years, the company has announced.

Stuart assumed his present position in the San Rafael office in 1956.

He joined the utilities company in 1923 as an assistant file clerk and in 1944 was named supervising foreman of an electric line crew in Hayward, the company said.

He was transferred to San Mateo in 1953 as district electric superintendent.

Stuart, a widower, has a son, Navy Cmdr. Donald Stuart of Virginia and a daughter, Katherine White of Columbia, S.C. He lives at 5 Kaden Court.

Bids Rejected On Drydocks Removal

The huge drydocks mired in Richardson Bay off Sausalito may have to be burned to the water line because conventional demolition is too expensive, the Marin County Board of Supervisors decided yesterday.

A low bid of $74,475 to remove the four drydocks came from Willamette-Western Corp. of Richmond. Two other bids ranged to a high of $295,452.

Supervisors rejected all bids. "We can't afford to pay that kind of money," said chairman John F. McInnis.

The supervisors turned instead to a new burning proposal presented yesterday by Fred Grange of San Rafael and Ralph L. Fenner of Oakland, a specialist in high energy burning.

Fenner said he can burn the drydocks to below the water line with no smoke or hazard, then float the remaining hulk and tow it away — all for less than $30,000.

Fenner added that he and his partners are prepared to appear before the Bay Area Air Pollution Control District board of directors for a special burning permit.

Supervisors asked the County Administrator to investigate the Grange-Fenner proposal and come back with a recommendation.

The drydocks, owned by J. Christopher Roberts of Mill Valley, were ordered demolished or removed by Marin Superior Court Judge Samuel W. Gardiner.

Unanimous Approval To Marin Logging Ordinance

Marin's logging ordinance, drafted after two years of work by the county's natural resources committee, won unanimous approval of the Marin County Board of Supervisors yesterday. (Other board of supervisors stories, page 1).

The 21-page ordinance, outlining in detail the requirements imposed on timber harvesters, including erosion control and reforestation, will be administered by the Marin County Planning Commission.

John F. Barrows, who headed the natural resources committee, said his group split over one issue: Who would administer the ordinance.

Barrows, Jean Barnard and Normand H. Traverso held that the public works department could administer the ordinance and issue logging permits because the ordinance is so specific, there is little room for policy judgment.

But the majority, including Public Works Director Donald R. Frost declared a logging permit is too important an issue to be decided on the staff level.

"Either the planning commission or the board of supervisors should issue the permit," insisted Frost.

On a motion by Michael Wornum and a second by William A. Gnoss, supervisors gave the job to the county planning commission. The new logging ordinance will go into effect in 30 days.

Marin County Board of Supervisors Also:

ALARM SYSTEM — Awarded a contract to Bay Alarm Co. of Oakland for burglar alarm installation and maintenance at the new Veterans Memorial Auditorium and various locations in the Civic Center buildings. Installation cost will be $3,494, and service charge and maintenance cost will be $267 per month. The contract is for a minimum of two years.

DISCRIMINATION — Denied that the county is discriminating against women in hiring and promotions. Arthur Padilla, representing the National Organization for Women, Marin County chapter, charged that the county does not even send a list of county job opportunities to the State Department of Human Resources office in San Rafael. Supervisors ordered that job openings be sent to the Human Resources office.

DRAINAGE PLAN — Officially adopted the master drainage plan for Bel Aire, prepared by the department of public works. The Bel Aire Flood Control Zone Advisory Board will meet early next year to discuss potential sources of funds to finance the drainage improvement.

CALA SIGN — Put off until next Tuesday decision on the 25-foot high sign approved by the county planning commission to advertise Cala Foods Market, which took over the former Lee Brothers Market in Marinwood. Casa Marinwood Association objected to the 25-foot height.

PAY RAISE — Put off action on a proposed special pay raise for three county officials because Supervisor Louis H. Baar is ill and did not attend yesterday's meeting. Pay raises are proposed for Undersheriff Sidney Stinson; Erick F. Yarchin, superintendent of Juvenile Hall and James V. Burdick, director of county services office.

MENTAL RETARDATION — Appointed the Marin Coordinating Council on Mental Retardation as the county's mental retardation planning agency in accordance with the Lanterman Mental Retardation Act of 1969.

PROGRAM CHANGE — Approved several changes in the community mental health center program, including fee increases for outpatient, inpatient and partial care.

TRANSIT — Set 8:30 a.m. Jan. 12 as the next meeting of the Marin County Transit District because the first session of the supervisors on Jan. 5 will be an organizational meeting, with new supervisor Arnold M. Baptiste seucceeding William A. Gnoss. Transit district meetings are usually held on the first Tuesday of each month.

Detectors For Civic Center Due

Metal detectors will be used at the entrances to the Civic Center and Hall of Justice so that body searches can be lessened somewhat, county administrator Alan Bruce reported yesterday.

He and Marin County Board of Supervisors assured the public that women will not be led into booths for frisking. However, present security measures, including the closing of buildings at night, will continue.

At the request of the Marin Human Rights Commission and a group of citizens and county employees supervisors set a public hearing for Jan. 19 for a report from Bruce on the security measures taken so far.

Canada has 44,000 miles of railroad trackage.

Marin City Firemen Get Temporary Mobile Home

water and rats, and it is impossible to keep men there."

County Fire Chief Louis J. Bloom said the morale of his men is low, and firemen refuse to continue working in the substandard firehouse.

The poor condition of the firehouse was revealed last week at a meeting of the Marin County Personnel Commission. Commissioners ordered an immediate investigation.

The county fire station in Marin City will be temporarily replaced by a mobile home, leased at a cost of $965 for six months.

Marin County Board of Supervisors voted for a mobile home,, 10 feet by 57 feet, to be placed next to the existing structure for use by firemen until a new firehouse is built.

County Administrator Alan Bruce told the supervisors yesterday that the existing firehouse across the street from Manzanita Center is "full of

Couple Robbed Near Overpass

A Southern California couple was robbed last Saturday while walking near the Marin City overpass, Marin County sheriff's office reported Monday.

Deputies said two men, one of them saying he had a gun, took $30 in cash and a coat from Franklin Parks, 29, of North Hollywood, and Joan Mandicchia, 22, of Van Nuys.

'Godfather' Role

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) —Francis Ford Coppola will direct "The Godfather" for Paramount Pictures with the title role still up for grabs among Ernie Borgnine, Anthony Quinn and Edward G. Robinson among others.

Chefs Competing For Cafeteria Bid

Two San Rafael chefs who offer personalized service, are competing against Manning's Inc. for the right to take over the Civic Center cafeteria beginning Jan. 11.

Michael A. Chrystal, senior administrative analyst in the county administrator's office, said the best offer of the six bids came from Manning's.

Manning's will buy $27,000 worth of initial equipment such as tables, chairs and plates and lease them to the county at an interest rate of 5 per cent. Manning's wants 9 per cent of the gross receipts.

Donald A. Giovannoni, lunch chef at West End Villa in San Rafael, and Camille Bamatter, night chef at the same restaurant, also put in a bid for the Civic Center cafeteria.

"If only price is considered, I can't compete with a company like Manning's," Giovannoni told the Marin County Board of Supervisors. But if it is quality food and personalized service, such as special suites for county supervisors and their VIP guests, Giovannoni said he could provide it.

Giovannoni wants 9 per cent interest from the county on the initial equipment which he will buy, and between 3.5 per cent and 28 per cent of the gross receipts, depending on the amount of total sales.

Supervisor Peter R. Arrigoni Jr. said he could not accept Giovannoni's offer as presented because of the uncertain percentage of gross receipts that Giovannoni seeks. It ranges between 3.5 per cent and 28 per cent, whereas Manning's asks for a straight 9 per cent regardless of sales.

At Arrigoni's request, supervisors put off action until next Tuesday so they can study the detailed offers, including menu and prices, by both Manning's and Giovannoni.

Chrystal said Giovannoni offers quality hot meals for $1.20 to $1.40, whereas Manning's price would be 85 cents to $1.05.

Firemen's Pay Raised; Deputies' Appeal Heard

Marin County Supervisors ate yesterday approved a 1970-71 contract for 35 firemen and 15 communications workers, giving them a 5 per cent pay raise retroactive to Dec. 1.

The 5 per cent raise from this month is in addition to the 5 per cent granted by the county on Sept. 1. A fire warden II, now getting $717 per month, will go up to $753 as of Dec. 1.

The new contract means that the total salary for firemen and communications workers this fiscal year will average out at slightly less than if they had accepted a 7.5 per cent raise at the start of the fiscal year last July 1, but will be more next year.

With firemen and communications workers coming to terms on this year's contract, the only group now working without a contract are the 118 sheriff's deputies, who broke away last month from the other emergency services employees (firemen and communications workers).

San Francisco attorney J. W. Ehrlich, hired by the sheriff's deputies to bargain for them, appeared before the county supervisors yesterday to appeal for a pay raise of at least 7.5 per cent.

Since deputies got a five per cent raise on Sept. 1, another 7.5 per cent would mean a 12.5 per cent raise for this year. Deputies had held out for a 12.5 per cent raise when negotiations broke down three months ago.

"I'm not threatening you," Ehrlich assured the supervisors. "But suppose that these men said well, the only salavation for us is to become a part and parcel of labor. Suppose they became members of the Teamsters Union and were ordered out. Where on God's green earth would we be?"

Supervisors then met behind closed doors with the county negotiating team to give instructions for further negotiations with Ehrlich.

Two Injured In Auto Accident

Two persons have been injured in a two car accident at Third Street and Hetherton Street, San Rafael police reported.

Monita Gerson Waldo, 42, of 514 Main Street, Sausalito, was treated for chest bruises Marin General Hospital officials reported. Marywinn Ekstrom, 34, of P.O. Box 894, Sausalito, was treated for cuts on the forehead and left eyelid, hospital officials said.

The Waldo car, southbound on Hetherton, collided at 5 p.m. Sunday with a westbound car on Third Street, driven by Louis Stanley Overhouse, 55, Box 17, San Quentin, according to police.

Report Is Due On Court Action

The case of Robert Morrison Gould, 19, of Novato has been referred to the probation department for a report on whether he is acceptable to Marin Juvenile Court.

Gould was arrested in October by the California Highway Patrol on a charge of possessing marijuana for sale.

Hotel Victims Buried In U.S.

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI)—Mrs. Rosalia Lukan, wife of the chief of state police of Sonora, Mexico, and five of their children, victims of the Pioneer Hotel fire, were buried Tuesday at Southlawn Memorial Park.

Mrs. Lukan and tye sons and daughters, ranging in age from 4 to 24, were six among the 8 persons killed in the Sunday morning blaze.

"The pain and loss is mine. I don't want this sorrow to the people of Sonora," said Francisco Lukan, explaining why the burial was in the United States.

Christmas Cleanup: $9 Billion Bill

NEW YORK (UPI)—It will cost taxpayers an estimated $9 billion to clean up Christmas litter, the Keep America Beautiful Inc. said Monday.

The antilitter organization said 400 million pounds of wrapping papers, ribbons, tags and fit boxes would be discarded along with 50 million trees, countless wreaths and other decorations.

Committment Is Ordered

Billie Jean Tierney, 25, of Novato, has been ordered by Judge Alvin H. Goldstein Jr. of Marin Municipal Court to commit herself to Mendocino State Hospital for treatment of a drug problem.

The judge also placed Mrs. Tierney on probation for three years.

She had earlier pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor charge of check forgery and at that time a second count of possessing a hypodermic needle was dismissed.

Mrs. Tierney was arrested in June after she attempted to make purchases at a Novato shoe store using another person's identification.

Robert Louis Stevenson is buried on the island of Samoa.

6 Copter Deaths; Sihanouk Arrest

SAIGON (UPI) — The U.S. Command today reported the loss of a helicopter and said six Americans died in the crash. The Cambodian Command announced the arrest of the son of deposed Prince Norodom Sihanouk on a charge of terrorism.

Military spokesmen said a U.S. Navy UH1 Huey helicopter crashed from "unknown causes" in the Mekong Delta on Saturday more than 125 miles southwest of Saigon.

The Command attributed the delay in reporting the crash to the difficulty in locating the wreckage, buried in the Delta mud. There were no survivors.

Communiques from Phnom Penh said South Vietnamese paratroopers killed 26 Viet Cong and North Vietnamese in fighting early today 10 miles outside Kompong Cham, Cambodia's third largest city. It was the biggest battle reported in the past two days in Indochina.

One American was reported killed and two wounded Tuesday in fighting 67 miles northeast of Saigon. The clash involved elements of the U.S. 1st Air Cavalry Division and an unknown-sized Communist unit.

The arrest of Sihanouk's son came after imprisoned terrorists said he had provided money and grenades for terrorist activities. The man arrested was Norodom Ramarith, a former professor at Phnom Penh University of Law. He was the third of Sihanouk's children arrested since the prince was overthrown as Cambodian chief of state last March 18. Prince Sihanouk has established a government in exile in Peking.

Ramarith was taken to military police headquarters.

Last month, Sihanouk's daughter, Botom Bopha, and another son, Norodom Naradhipo, were arrested for what the government of Premier Lon Nol called "involvement in subversive activities."

Inconvenient War Finds Hotel Royale

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Phnom Penh's Hotel Royale — which until now served fine wines and escargots with a dignified disdain of events — finally has bowed to the war.

Tuesday, the waiters exchanged their white coats for fatigues and jungle boots to form a hotel guard, menu prices were hiked by 20 per cent and Cambodian beer was unavailable.

The waiters were only on guard duty four hours a day, alternating with the clerks and cooks, and there were only five M1 carbines to go around, but the guard was installed nevertheless.

The foreign visitors, journalists and diplomats frequenting the Royale —an old French colonial officers' barracks resplendent with swimming pool and dripping with bougainvillea and colonial comfort —still had little to complain about.

Cambodian beer, fast becoming unavailable because of the Communist occupation of the road to Cambodia's only seaport —and brewery —was smartly replaced with American canned beer imported from Saigon.

Pre-war signs in every room warning against desecrating the temples of Angkor Wat —now occupied by North Vietnamese troops —disappeared. In their place were apologetic notes warning of possible police checks.

"There would be" —the management hoped —"No inconvenience to the guests."

CBS-TV Blacked Out 21 Minutes

NEW YORK (UPI)—CBS-TV was knocked off the air for 21 minutes across the nation Monday night by a power failure. The failure, between 9:17 p.m. and 9:38 p.m. EST affected 13 minutes of "Mayberry R.F.D." and eight minutes of the "Doris Day Show."

"I really don't know the exact cause of the failure," a CBS spokesman said. "It could be something in the line—that's the only explanation I can get from operations."

CIA Linked To My Lai Massacre

FT. MCPHERSON, Ga. (UPI)— A defense attorney placed the full blame for the alleged My Lai massacre on the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) Tuesday while military hearings resulted in court martials for two more soldiers in the 1968 assault.

Former Georgia Congressman Charles Weltner, representing Sgt. Esequiel Torres, 22, of Brownsville, Tex., won the right to subpoena three alleged CIA agents.

He also got one of the Mexican-American's four counts of premeditated murder reduced to assault, but Torres, and Pvt. Gerald A. Smith, 22, of Chicago, were ordered to stand court martial for allegedly participating in the March 16, 1968 sweep that resulted in death for between 102 and 310 Vietnamese civilians.

Torres was accused of machinegunning to death three civilians and charged with assault in the hanging of a fourth. Smith was charged with the premeditated murder of seven Vietnamese, at least one of them a woman, and of indecent assault upon a Vietnamese woman.

Weltner called the court's approval of subpoenas for the alleged three CIA agents a matter of "great significance."

"We will be able to show the function of the CIA in this case . . . was to set the whole stage for what happened at My Lai," Weltner said during a recess in hearings.

Disclosure of the CIA role at My Lai, said Weltner, would be "very, very valuable, not only in defending Sergeant Torres, but in opening up" how the CIA has operated in Southeast Asia.

Weltner, charging the CIA carried out terrorist activities including "assassinations and kidnapings" prior to the assault at My Lai, submitted testimony from 62 soldiers showing the "shooting, killing, assassination and torture of Vietnamese civilians pursuant to the director of the United States Army."

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Fuel Halt Over

NEW YORK (UPI) — A seven-day strike that left as many as 200,000 persons without heat and hot water ended Tuesday night when 2,800 fuel oil deliverymen and repairmen ratified a two-year contract which will give them $60 in wage and benefit increases.

Members of Teamsters Union Local 553 voted 901 to 415 to approve the contract in three hours of balloting. The contract, offered by the 300-member New York Oil Heating Association, provides $40 in increased wages and $20 in benefits. Drivers will receive $215 a week and repairmen $225 in two steps.

Riot Arrest

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — FBI agents Tuesday arrested Caroline M. Tanner, 22, sought on mob action charges stemming from the Weathermen's "four days of rage" in Chicago in the fall of 1969.

Miss Tanner, formerly of Greensburg, Pa., was arrested on a fugitive warrant. Agents said she changed her appearance "drastically," losing 20 pounds, cutting her hair and dyeing it blonde.

A federal warrant was issued in Chicago April 19, 1970, charging Miss Tanner with fleeing the state of Illinois to avoid prosecution on charges of connection with the Weathermen disorder.

Lunokhod Asleep

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union's Lunokhod moonrover today tucked itself in for a long winter's night, its batteries filled with enough stored sunshine to keep it warm until earth controllers wake it Jan. 7.

Tass, the official Soviet news agency, said ground control closed the lid Tuesday on the pot-shaped moon car as the sun dropped toward the horizon at the end of a two-week lunar day. The car began activating an internal air conditioning system, powered by solar energy stored up before sunset.

Struck Twice

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope Paul's physician said today the 73-year-old pontiff was struck twice last month when a Bolivian painter tried to assassinate him during his visit to Manila.

The physician, Dr. Mario Fontana, would not elaborate but Manila newspapers said at the time the Pope was actually hit or cut during the knife attack.

One newspaper said the blade of Mendoza's weapon, a Malay dagger, actually struck the Pope's stiff clerical collar.

"The Pope was struck twice," Fontana said, "But I am not in a position to say how or by whom."

Bayh Plans Some Top Spot Soundings

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., says that before long —"sometime next year" —he plans to open up an office to sound out whether he should run for president in 1972.

Bayh told a press conference Tuesday he has received support for the race from the state party chairman of an unidentified large industrial state, and from a defeated gubernatorial candidate, also unidentified.

SOLDIER RECEIVES BLESSING

Tate Trial Bar To Manson Defendants

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—The three women defendants were ordered barred from further sessions of the Tate murder trial today after a wild scene before the jury in which one struggled with the state prosecutor.

Superior Court Judge Charles H. Older ruled that Leslie Van Houten, Susan Atkins and Patricia Krenwinkel be kept in an antechamber and listen to the proceedings by loudspeaker until the case goes to the jury —probably the first week in January.

Deputy District Attorney Vincent Bugliosi was summing up the state's case against Charles Manson and the three female codefendants Tuesday when Miss Van Houten, 20, interruped.

"Ladies and gentlemen, I would like to put on a defense..." she began.

Bugliosi grabbed her by the arm and said, "Wait a minute, wait a minute." Older ordered the girl taken from the room by bailiffs but she had no sooner been escorted out than Susan Atkins began haranguing the jury about a state witness taking LSD.

The judge ordered her removed, also, but as she went past Bugliosi at a lectern she reached over and crumpled up his notes on yellow legal pads. Bugliosi grabbed her hand with his left hand and swung in her direction with his right.

"You bitch," he said.

The young woman tried to kick him and fell against a table. Moments after she had been taken out, Patricia Krenwinkel rose and turned to the newsmen in the back of the room, calling out: "You people in your greed are trying to make this trial into your profits." She was led out screaming and dragging her feet.

Bugliosi was expected to conclude his summation Wednesday afternoon. The trial will be in recess Thursday until Monday when the defense will make final statements.

Man, Nature Jar Holiday In Italy

ROME (UPI) — Snow, rain, an electricity strike and traffic jams combined today to make the Christmas season uncomfortable for 54 million Italians.

More than 120,000 electricity workers, demanding government ratification of their nine-mont-old contract, have been striking for four hours at the end of each shift since Tuesday. The series of strikes was scheduled to continue until next Monday.

The strikes and the electrical workers' refusal to answer breakdown calls left millions of homes, factories, offices and stores without light or heat for hours and trapped persons in halted elevators.

Stores and bars switched off millions of Christmas lights in response to a government appeal to conserve power.

The strike stopped traffic signals in some parts of Rome, making the usual pre-Christmas traffic jams worse.

The electricity strike coincided with a cold wave that froze water in some of Rome's famed fountains. Temperatures dropped to 22 degrees in Rome.

Rome and much of the south had rain. Windstorms swept Tuscany and whipped up the seas off Sardinia.

Alleged Hijacker Returns To U.S.

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Avin L. Glatowski, 21, one of two men accused of hijacking an American munitions ship bound for Thailand nine months ago, was returned here during the weekend and booked on federal charges of mutiny and piracy.

Glatowski, Long Beach, Calif., had asked for political asylum in Cambodia following seizure of the ship but turned himself over to the American embassy last Tuesday.

He said he surrendered to American officials because he feared harassment and "possible execution" by guards assigned to him by the Cambodian government.

Congress Rests For The Holidays

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Weary senators and representatives, home for Christmas, hope the holiday spirit and a brief vacation might resolve all their problems. There was some indication the legislative logjam was breaking.

Congress shut down Tuesday night for the Christmas weekend, with the Senate returning next Monday and the House, which has most of its work done, the following day. Before the lawmakers left they killed off any chance there would be a Social Security increase, trade legislation or action on welfare reform this year.

When Congress returns, it faces, in no particular order:

—A filibuster against funding of the Supersonic Transport plane SST, a debate which Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield called a problem "almost impossible to solve." It is considered the major bottleneck to final adjournament.

—A $66.6 billion compromise defense appropriations bill, already approved by the House, which contains language diluting a no-loophole ban against the introduction of U. S. troops into Cambodia. That ban was written into a bill already sent to the White House. The Senate will seek to reject the compromise, ask for new negotiations with the House, and try to strike the language. The House might be adamant.

—A $2.5 billion foreign aid appropriations bill compromise, rejected Tuesday by the Senate because it contains $200 million in military credit sales which have not been approved.

—A $1.8 billion supplemental appropriations bill, which includes actual funds to carry out President Nixon's aid to Cambodia, Israel, and several other nations.

—A compromise food stamp program. Sen. George S. McGovern, D-S.D., has asked the Senate to reject the measure because it denies food stamps where the head of a family refused to take a job.

Before departing for Christmas, Congress managed to solve, one way or another, some of its most vexing problems, renewing hopes it could adjourn before Jan. 3 when, under the Constitution, the 91st Congress expires.

Chairman Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., of the House Ways and Means Committee, and Rep. John W. Byrnes, R-Wis., issued a joint statement which killed all prospects for Social Security, welfare, trade, and catastrophic illness insurance legislation.

The Senate, however, broke through one major barrier when it approved, 41 to 20, legislation authorizing Nixon's long-range plans of economic aid to Cambodia, starting with $255 million.

Israel To Decide On Peace Talks

JERUSALEM (UPI)—If Israel returns to Middle East peace talks, Premier Golda Meir has rejected in advance any settlement with the Arabs short of a binding peace treaty laying down new secure, agreed and recognized borders.

Mrs. Meir spelled out Israel's stand in a somber and stern appraisal Tuesday at a Jerusalem press luncheon on the prospects for a resumption of talks and the likelihood that peace might result.

Mrs. Meir said Israel has completed its dialogue with the United States to obtain "clarifications" of U.S. Middle East policy before deciding whether to return to talks under U.N. mediator Gunnar V. Jarring.

"To the best of our understanding, this process of question and answer has ended and now the government has reached the most idfficult moment . . . now we must take the risks and consider whether it is possible or impossible to go to the talks," she said.

Take a break with our strawberry shortcake.
Imagine. Rich pound cake topped with creamy smooth vanilla ice cream.
Delicious. But that's not all.
Strawberries. Sweet and plump, straight from the garden. Picked at the peak of their dewy freshness.
And the whole thing topped with dairy-fresh whipped cream.
Now, that's a really sweet thought from Copper Penny.
Trouble is, you may want to forget about Holiday shopping.

County Zeroes In On Welfare Cases

By WAT TAKESHITA

Forty-four Marin families on welfare (Aid To Families With Dependent Children) have earnings in excess of $6,000 per year, the county director of public social services reported yesterday.

Director Betty L. Presley told the Marin County Board of Supervisors that the figures are based on reports received through Monday of this week and are not complete. (Other board of supervisor stories, page 28.)

The report shows 34 families earning between $6,000 and $7,200 per year; six between $7,200 and $8,400 per year; two earning between $8,400 and $8,700; one drawing between $8,700 and $9,000; and one grossing between $9,300 and $9,600 per year.

In AFDC cases with stepfathers as the wage earner, the total earnings in some cases exceed $10,000 per year because the law requires a stepfather to support his wife but not his stepchildren, said Miss Presley.

In the case of working mothers, an earned income exemption (first $30 plus one-third of the balance) is knocked off the gross as an incentive for the wage-earner to keep working and improving her position.

As she has pointed out in the past, Miss Presley repeated that this earned income exemption with no ceiling is what keeps wage earners in the $8,000 and $9,000 category on welfare.

Unless the federal laws are changed and a ceiling placed on income beyond which no public aid is allowed, welfare cases with high earnings will continue to crop up, she pointed out.

Among cases cited by Miss Presley were these:

A stepfather is grossing $868 per month, or $10,416 per year. He supports his wife, but his wife's child (who is not his responsibility) gets $72 per month in AFDC aid.

Another stepfather is grossing $795 per month, and his wife's two children draw $172 per month in AFDC aid.

"That comes to $11,604 per year," noted Supervisor Peter R. Arrigoni. "What is the law regarding the stepfather?"

County Counsel Douglas J. Maloney said that previously, the law said a stepfather was to help provide for the stepchildren. However, that law was changed, and now the stepfather is not required to support the stepchildren. The county has to prove that he is providing support for the children, Maloney explained.

The county counsel said Marin and Alameda County are challenging some of the loopholes in court. "If you want to do more, we'd have to ask Congress to put limits on the law or get the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to amend their regulations. In the final analysis, it will take legislation to button it up once and for all."

Supervisor William A. Gnoss suggested that the supervisors talk to Assemblyman William T. Bagley and Senator-elect Peter H. Behr to see what they can do in Sacramento.

"I'd like to take this up in a couple of weeks with some specifics on legislation," said Arrigoni.

Supervisors asked the county counsel to see when Bagley and Behr can sit down with the supervisors for a discussion on welfare law amendments.

In most welfare fraud cases, where recipients are suspected of failing to report income, Maloney said he finds that filing a civil suit is a waste of time because even if the county wins, the family has no assets from which to recover.

The best way to discourage welfare fraud is a speedy criminal action, said Maloney.

"I get a sort of helpless feeling," said Supervisor Michael Wornum.

On a motion by Arrigoni, the Supervisors asked Dist. Atty. Bruce B. Bales to give priority to welfare fraud prosecution.

Baby Dies In Crib At Santa Rosa

A 4-month-old Rohnert Park boy was pronounced dead yesterday at a Santa Rosa hospital after having apparently suffocated in his crib.

Sonoma County Coroner Andrew Johansen said Gary Michael Foster, 7471 Bridgit Drive, had been suffering from a cold and had vomited yesterday evening. His parents discovered he had stopped breathing at 7 p.m.

His father, Gary Foster, 23, attempted mouth-to-mouth resuscitation as did Rohnert Park safety officers, but did not succeed. An autopsy was scheduled.

Foster is stationed at the Two Rock Ranch Army Station, Petaluma.

Eisenhowers At Camp David

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Julie and David Eisenhower celebrated their second wedding anniversary yesterday in the privacy of Camp David, the presidential retreat in Maryland.

President Nixon's daughter and son-in-law flew by helicopter to the hideaway Sunday afternoon after church services, and will remain there until Christmas eve.

Seat Belts For Trains Proposed

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The National Transportation Safety Board has recommended that the Federal Railroad Administration explore whether seat belts should be used in passenger trains.

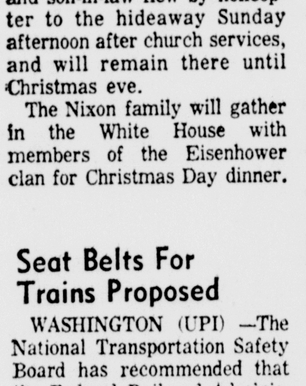
It made the recommendation as a result of its report on an Aug. 20, 1969, head-on crash of two commuter trains near Darien, Conn. The engineer and one passenger were killed, and 40 others were injured, the board said, mostly because of "the lack of restraining devices."

Undergrounding For Ridge Set

Utility lines will be undergrounded along the Ridge Avenue off Panoramic Highway near Muir Woods.

At the request of 11 property owners along Ridge Avenue, the Marin County Board of Supervisors yesterday set up an underground utility district. The district extends about 1,200 feet along Ridge Avenue.

Pacific Gas and Electric Co. estimated the cost of undergrounding at $5,000. Property owners will pay half, and PG&E the other half.



Denial To Dismissing Union Case

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — A U.S. District Court judge yesterday denied motions by defense attorneys to throw out civil and criminal contempt complaints against their union clients accused of a secondary boycott of Independent-Journal advertisers.

Judge William T. Sweigert ruled the National Labor Relations Board, which brought the complaints, had presented sufficient evidence during a seven-week-old hearing to compel the unions to present a defense.

The motions, in behalf of San Francisco Typographical Union 21, International Longshoremen's Local 10 of San Francisco and Teamster Locals 70 of Oakland and 85 of San Francisco, were made at the conclusion of the NLRB's case.

During the seven weeks, the NLRB, through a stream of witnesses and documents, sought to show that the unions violated an earlier order by Judge Sweigert against secondary boycott activity and are thus guilty of civil and criminal contempt.

The contempt complaints grew out of picketing of Marin stores in October.

W. David Smullin, an NLRB attorney, said the defense was to notify Judge Sweigert today whether it wished to present a defense to the complaints.

No Contest Plea To Felony Count

I-J Special Report

SANTA ROSA — Lewis E. Meyers, 59, of Petaluma, pleaded no contest yesterday in Sonoma County Superior Court to a charge of felony drunk driving.

Judge Kenneth E. Eymann requested a probation department report be submitted on Jan. 5. Meyers was arrested Nov. 17 after Petaluma police said his car struck Dennis Stankalis, 17, of 26 Huntington Drive, Petaluma, severing both legs.

Meyers is being held in the Sonoma County Jail in lieu of $6,000 bail.

Defense Rests In Feb. 14 Riot Case

I-J Special Report

FAIRFIELD — The defense has rested its case in the marathon trial of seven men arrested during the violent Valentine's Day rally outside the Independent-Journal.

Judge William E. Jensen instructed the jury to return to Solano Superior Court this afternoon to hear "any loose ends in evidence" before taking a four-day Christmas recess.

The prosecutor, Marin County Deputy Atty. Joshua W. Thomas said yesterday he wanted to check trial transcripts and might call one last witness today.

In the 10 weeks of trial, the jury has listened to 39 witnesses — 20 for the people and 19 for the defense — and been presented with 191 pieces of evidence ranging from two slingshots through a picket sign and scores of photographs of the Feb. 14 demonstration against the I-J.

The final defense presentation yesterday was a brief television film showing the arrest of John J. DeMartini, 47, of Mill Valley, vice president of San Francisco International Typographical Union 21. Local 21 struck the I-J Jan. 7.

The film showed DeMartini struggling with police who were trying to clear Julia Street on the afternoon of Feb. 14. During the few seconds the KPIX television photographer caught the action, DeMartini grappled with two officers. More police joined the fray. Club flashed from the struggling mass, sharply prodding at the union man.

The last of the seven defendants took the stand earlier yesterday. Joe Earl Reese, 32, of Hayward, said he arrived after 9 a.m. at the mass rally that Bay Area unions had called against the I-J.

Through an interpreter, the deaf-mute Reese described the confrontations in Julia Street. He denied seeing any objects thrown at police. He testified that when police formed a line to clear the street, "I think I did hesitate, but I was frozen in my tracks — by fear."

He demonstrated how he grabbed his picket sign stick by the middle, swinging its butt end in short arcs before him, "to protect myself." Thomas and defense attorney Robert D. Carrow argued whether he was "jabbing" with the stick. Judge Jensen said, "The jury saw his action; it will decide."

Reese denied knocking down California Highway Patrol Officer John Campion or striking him with his stick. He testified "someone else pushed Campion down."

Reese, a printer for the San Francisco Chronicle, complained that he was clubbed on the back by police, and handcuffed so tightly "that my fingernails turned blue."

The other defendants, whose cases were presented earlier, included James S. Brooke, 36, Alvis D. Bailey, 43, and Nimmes H. Shelton, 41, all of San Francisco; Charles P. Vance, 56, of South San Francisco and Terry W. Lansing, 20, of Oakland. The 34 charges against the seven men range from participating in a riot through possession of slingshots and blackjacks.

Joan Baez Says Husband Being 'Kicked Out'

PALO ALTO, Calif. (SPI) Folksinger Joan Baez says her husband, convicted draft resister David Harris, is being "kicked out" of prison rather than paroled.

Harris was sentenced July 16, 1969 to a three-year term for refusing induction, but the board of Parole Monday announced he would be released March 15 at La Tuna, Tex.

Miss Baez said Tuesday that the action "is proof of the fact that parole has nothing to do with good behavior in prison."

She said her husband had been involved "in four strikes and written up 28 times for nonos."

"I think he's being kicked out rather than paroled," she said.

Suicide Group Asks Space In Health Building

Marin Suicide Prevention will ask for use of part of the old county health department building in San Rafael as a telephone crisis center.

Kay Lyons, resident of the Suicide Prevention Board, sent a letter to the county board of supervisors, asking for use of the county facility at Fourfth Street and Grand Avenue.

"We have organized a corps of volunteers and obtained the acceptance of professionals in the community, using only our own time and resources," said Mrs. Lyons. "Lack of funding is preventing us at this time from obtaining a center facility and is leaving Marin residents without that 24-hour crisis phone service."

Marin Suicide Prevention hopes to start a round-the-clock telephone service, manned by trained volunteers, inJanuary or February.

Controversial Plan For Streets Backed

The San Rafael Planning Commission recommended last night that the city council adopt a long-shelved plan for improving the flow of downtown traffic.

The plan, offered to the city in June 1969 by D. Jackson Faustman, a Sacramento traffic consultant, envisions converting several downtown streets to one-way, as well as building an underground parking garage at the courthouse square.

Under the plan, two major east-west streets still two-way, Fourth Street and Fifth Avenue, would become one-way.

In making its unanimous recommendation, the commission suggested appropriating adequate funds in the event one-way movement on Fourth and Fifth didn't work out and they had to be changed back.

The plan, also proposing a new street in the G Street area to link Fifth and Fourth, would cost about $275,000 to implement, according to current city public works estimates.

Faustman's proposal had been pigeonholed by the council last year after merchants objected at a public hearing. But the council, acting on a recommendation by the city's traffic committee, has set another public hearing on the plan for Feb. 1.

Planning Commissioner Jorgen V. Lunding said last night that the public works department should look toward installing a "fully computerized-automatic traffic signal system for the entire downtown area."

The San Rafael Planning Commission also:

SUBDIVISION — Approved a lot split for Kenneth Solvason for 271 and 273 Locust Avenue with the provision that all utilities be undergrounded.

TRAILER — Approved the use of trailer for a car rental and sales lot at 170 Gary Place for Jack Brigham.

SIGN — Approved a free standing sign for San Rafael Auto Parts at 24 Ritter Street with the provision that the signs on the building be painted out. This is subject to review by the commission with 60 days after a sign ordinance is adopted.

POSTPONED — Postponed until its Jan. 12 meeting consideration of plans for an office building at 814 Fifth Avenue for Robert Greene and a 13-unit apartment building at 310 Bayview Street for Horst Hanf and Kenneth Levy.

REVERSION — Approved reversion from multiple residential to acreage lots at 180 Larkspur Street and 110 Novato Street for American Savings and Loan Association because the multiple residential buildings planned there had not been constructed.

ADJOURNED — Adjourned until 7:30 p.m. Jan. 5 for a public hearing on the proposed sign ordinance.

Two Road Jobs Get Awards

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — The state Department of Public Works has announced the award of $750,000 in contracts for two road projects in Southern Sonoma and Marin County.

Arthur B. Siri, Inc., of Santa Rosa was low among 10 bidders for the job of widening a four-mile stretch of State Route 116 between Highway 101 at Petaluma and the Lakeville Highway, at a cost of $705,881.40.

E. A. Forde Co. of Greenbrae received a $44,474.60 contract to install new guardrail and modify existing guardrail on Highway 101, from a point 2.3 miles north of Atherton Avenue, Novato, to the Todd Roadovercrossing north of Rohnert Park. Six bids were opened.

Novato Girl Reports Indecent Exposure

A 17-year-old Novato girl reported to city police yesterday that a man sitting in a car at the Novato Fair Shopping Center exposed himself after calling her to the car on the pretense of seeking information.

She told officers the man was in his early twenties, about six feet tall, with long brown hair and blue eyes and was wearing a blue plaid shirt. The incident occurred at 11:40 a.m.

The Great Garter-Length, Garter-less Stay-Up Sock That's Going Nowhere.

Mid-Lengths by Burlington.

It's a fact. Mid-Lengths won't dip. Or droop. Or slip. They stay a hip half-calf high without garters. Even after lots of fancy footwork.

Burlington used Lycra spandex in a special construction to put stay-up power throughout the entire sock. This makes Mid-Lengths conform to the shape of the calf, caress the entire leg. Gives them a snug-feeling hug that won't give in under action, won't give out even after the longest wear.

Mid-Lengths comes in many handsome styles, in a masculine array of colors. $1.50 and $2 the pair.

flight, and then only to ask for cigarettes or books from a large box of reading material which she brought with her.

The plane was rented from the Air National Guard for $3,500, Bales said, explaining it was the cheapest mode of transportation the state could find.

It was flown by a five-man crew, and Miss Davis was guarded by five sheriff's officers, two women deputies and two investigators.

Once in the jail, Miss Davis was booked in the usual manner, fingerprinted and had her picture taken. She then was allowed to make two phone calls, the first of which she used to call collect to her mother in Alabama.

Later in the afternoon, she was visited by San Francisco attorney Terrence Hallinan, who said he did not know whether he would represent her.

Through Hallinan, she asked jailers for a toothbrush and toothpaste and a "natural" comb. Those requests were granted, he said.

She and a young woman serving a jail sentence for sex perversion and attacking a deputy sheriff were the only inmates last night on the womens section. They were in separate cells, according to jailers.

Through Miss Burnham, Miss Davis complained today of being in isolation, but jailers said she was being treated like any other prisoner. She was served spaghetti for dinner.

Yesterday, supporters of Miss Davis, their numbers estimated variously from 100 to 300 persons, rallied in San Francisco's Civic Center Plaza to protest her arrest and the accusations against her.

A Christmas Day vigil is planned by her sympathisers for Friday outside the Marin County Jail where she is imprisoned. Among them is expected to be her mother.

At 10:44 a.m. today, the sheriff's department announced it had just received a telephone threat that a bomb would go off at the Hall of Justice at noon.

The Hall of Justice and the Civic Center's administration wing were then evacuated, except for Miss Davis, other prisoners and their guards at the county jail.

of America, largest in the nation, lowered its rates. The National City Bank of Minneapolis went even further, reducing its rate to 6¼ per cent.

Rep. Wright Patman, D-Tex., chairman of the House Banking Committee, said he still wants the rates, which have been as high as 8 1-2 per cent this year, reduced to 6 per cent. Some banking authorities said this might happen because current business loan demand has been light and has failed to respond to the usual end-of-the-year upturn.

The consumer will benefit from the prime rate cut only indirectly because they borrow from different markets to pay for homes, appliances and other durables.

Consumer loan rates have eased a bit within past weeks, but not on the scale of the prime rates. The Bank of America and Wells Fargo lowered their consumer rates a half per cent early this month and many banks in New York and elsewhere followed suit.

ance of the strip to the city.

In exchange, Rice said, the city will drop its pending condemnation suit against Northwestern Pacific. The suit had been scheduled to go to Marin Superior Court in February.

The 60-foot-wide right-of-way which the city has acquired runs from the Reed Ranch Road-Blackie's pasture area for two miles to Tiburon Boulevard near Mar West Street. The railroad yards in downtown Tiburon are not included in the land transfer.

The terms of the agreement are structured to fit the railroad's desire for a tax loss in 1970. With the city paying $1 a square foot for 100,000 square feet of land in the Blackie's pasture area, Northwestern Pacific can write off the gift portion of the property as a business loss, applying the unit price to the entire right-of-way.

Under the agreement, the city will pay $50,000 to the railroad before Dec. 31 and the balance before Dec. 31, 1971. The first installment will come from Tiburon's $85,000 land acquisition fund and the rest from a similar fund in the 1971-72 budget. No interest will be charged.

The council met only briefly last night to approve two resolutions unanimously, one opening escrow on the land and the other appropriating the first payment.

Councilman Albert H. Sennett thanked those who helped to acquire the property, including fellow Councilman Branwell D. Fanning, who was mayor during much of the negotiations for the land.

He also recognized the efforts of resident Bonnie Raisin, who was in the sparse audience last night, and Larry E. Hoyt, Northwestern Pacific vice president. Sennett said he hoped the "good relationship" the city has with the railroad through Hoyt will continue.

Fanning pointed out that, although the purchase of the right-of-way is assured, the city does not have the $60,000 said to be needed to pave the pathway, landscape it, provide parks along its length and build crossings over Tiburon Boulevard.

"We've had offers of assistance over the years from the city of Belvedere and many individuals," he said, "and now that we have the land I hope they keep their wallets open."

An application now pending before the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development would, if approved, provide half of the cost of buying the right-of-way and improving it.

Man Shoots Self Twice, Lives

Louis Cervantes, 39, of Petaluma, was reported in poor condition at Community Hospital of Sonoma County after suffering two gunshot wounds yesterday.

The Sonoma County Sheriff's Department said Cervantes shot himself in the head and chest with a .22-caliber rifle at 11 a.m. yesterday at his home at 1102 Bodega Avenue.

He underwent emergency surgery at Hillcrest Hospital and was transferred to the intensive care unit of the Santa Rosa Hospital.

Deputies said Cervantes, a janitor for Pacific Gas and Electric Co. in San Rafael, had been despondent over low wages.

indirectly acknowledged recipt of a prisoner list from Hanoi by dropping its persistent demand for such a list in the U.S. statement.

Thuy alluded to the current Christmas season in his statement, and then said:

"The delegation of the Democratic Republic of (North) Vietnam, on this occasion, calls upon the Nixon administration to agree to the withdrawal from South Vietnam of all American troops and those of the other foreign countries before June 30, 1971, as the (Viet Cong's) provisional revolutionary government has proposed, in order to obtain an immediate cease-fire between the popular liberation armed forces of South Vietnam and the troops and military personnel of the United States and of the other foreign countries of the American camp, and in order to permit the parties to enter into immediate discussions on the question of guarantees for safety for the withdrawal of troops and military personnel in question and on the question of liberating captured military men.

"Moreover, the Nixon administration must immediately cease all acts threatening the sovereignty and the security of the Democratic Republic of (North) Vietnam. (Hanoi's term for reconnaissance flights.)

"If the government of the United States acts in this direction, the parties could equally enter into immediate discussion on the total cessation of the cruel war which is going on in Vietnam, and on the question of respect for the fundamental national rights and the right to self-determination of the Vietnamese people."

Bruce made no mention today of the prisoner lists handed over to representatives of Sens. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and J. William Fulbright, D-Ark.

Permit For Dancing Instruction Approved

Over the objections of neighbors, the San Anselmo Planning Commission has granted a use permit for dancing instruction at 205 The Alameda.

However, the commission action Monday also imposed stringent restrictions upon the applicant, Beatrice H. Blum, according to commission secretary Catherine Mullins.

She said the board also tightened up the requirements on the existing use permit which permits guitar and accordion classes in the residence now owned by Helen O. Gui, according to Mrs. Mullins

Mrs. Blum has an option to buy the house that depended on obtaining a use permit from the city

Protesting neighbors who presented a petition signed by 20 at the Dec 7 meeting, again argued last night that the permit would mean increased traffic and noise.

To assuage the complaints the commission ruled classes must be held between 9 a.m and 6 p.m. with no classes on Sunday and no more than three dance students at a time, the secretary said.

There are to be no signs, no employees and no noise except a record player, the commission decided, according to the secretary.

The permit is to be effective on surrender of the one for music lessons, Mrs. Mullins said.

In the existing permit the commission cut Mrs. Gui's hours from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. to 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. and set a limit of two students at a time, Mrs. Mullins said.

The San Anselmo Planning Commission Also:

SUNNY HILLS — Deferred action on an application by the Ross Valley Co. to rezone part of Sunny Hills Children's Services on Sunny Hills Drive from commercial to planned development and decided to undertake rezoning of Sunny Hills to ensure it is developed as a school only.

REZONING — Rezone a parcel at 809 Sir Francis Drake Boulevard owned by A.H. Tucker Co. from general commercial to single family residential.

VARIANCES — Asked Harry Hertetz to come back with a plan for a single family dwelling on his lot at 210 Red Hill Avenue which is zoned for duplex development The commission felt that since eight variances would be needed to build a duplex, the plot ought to be developed as single family, according to the commission secretary

Plea of Guilty To Joyriding

William Wade Crabb, 32, of Fairfax, has pleaded guilty in Marin Superior Court to a reduced misdemeanor charge of joyriding.

He earlier had been charged with felony car theft in connection with the taking of a car from a San Francisco rental agency and abandoning it in San Rafael.

Judge Joseph G. Wilson set sentencing Monday for Jan. 29.

Policy On Pensions Reversed

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Treasury has ruled that private pension plans may no longer reduce payments to retired workers because of Social Security benefit increases voted by Congress, Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N. Y., said Tuesday.

Javits told the Senate that John S. Nolan, deputy assistant treasury secretary, wrote him that the department had reversed its 1967 policy regarding "offset" pension plans in which benefits were integrated with a retired worker's Social Security payments.

Javits said when Congress increased Social Security benefits by 15 per cent last year, he learned that some retired workers lost a like amount from their private pension plans.

He said he prepared an amendment to this year's Social Security bill, now pending in the Senete, to forbid this practice. In light of the Treasury ruling, he said, he was withdrawing his amendment.

The Senate bill calls for boosting all benefits by 10 per cent and raising the minimum Social Security payment to $100. The House has passed a bill calling for an across-the-board 5 per cent increase. If the Senate acts on its measure, the Senate and House bills will have to be reconciled in compromise legislation.

McCormack Tells Succession Plan

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Retiring House Speaker John W McCormack says he and President Lyndon B. Johnson drew up a written agreement which designated him president in the event of Johnson's disability.

The agreement was made one month after the November, 1963, assassination of President John F. Kennedy, McCormack said.

At the time, the constitution did not specify a successor once the vice president had moved to the presidency, and McCormack said the nation would have been without a leader if Johnson had become disabled before the 1964 election. A constitutional amendment adopted in 1967 designated the house speaker next in the line of succession.

Is Africa Charting New Path?

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Fears of wholesale racial war in Africa —especially in the South—appeared to recede in 1970 and there were signs the danger will become more remote in the year ahead. But the war drums still beat and Rhodesia took a defiant step towards greater racial segregation.

South African Premier John Vorster reaffirmed his government's "outward" policy of seeking to expand contacts with Black Africa. He became the first South African Premier to visit a Black African country when he flew to Malawi in May.

South Africa signed an agreement providing for a $3.2 million loan to Madagascar and urged South African businessmen to take steps to stimulate Malagasy's economy.

URGES TALKS

The Ivory Coast's President Felix Houphouet-Boigny urged the 41-nation Organization of African Unity to open negotiations with South Africa and Portugal aimed at improving relations between the OAU and those countries.

The OAU remains opposed to white minority rule in South Africa, Rhodesia and Portuguese Africa, but most member-states favor diplomacy rather than force to achieve black control of those areas. This principle was embodied in the OAU's 1969 "Lusaka Manifesto" which said:

"We would prefer to negotiate rather than kill. We do not advocate violence; we advocate an end to the violence against human dignity which is now being perpetrated by the oppressors of Africa."

At home, Vorster's ruling National Party won resounding national and provincial election victories over the ultraright-wing Herstigte Nasinale Party (HNP), which views any rapport with Black Africa as the beginning of the end of white rule in southern Africa.

The Rhodesian government, still defiant of world opinion five years after seizing independence from Britain, is expected to open negotiations in 1971 with the British Conservative government, which appears more inclined towards a reconciliation than its Laborite predecessors. But the Conservatives remain committed to eventual black majority rule in Rhodesia and observers on both sides give the talks little chance of succeeding.

MORE REMOTE

Prospects of a settlement grew more remote when the Rhodesian government introduced legislation in 1970 providing for the eviction of blacks and other non-whites from white residential areas, and announced plans to segregate cinemas, swimming pools and other facilities.

In Portugal's African territories, the costly war against guerrilla forces fighting for independence enters its 10th year in 1971 with little prospect of victory for either side. In an effort to undercut any popular support for the guerrillas, Portuguese Prime Minister Marcello Caetano introduced constitutional changes granting self-government to Angola, Mozambique and Portuguese Guinea.

About 35,000 Portuguese troops are stationed in swampy Portugese Guinea on Africa's western coast. Foreign observers agree that guerilla forces, well-equipped with Communist

POW Plans Under Study By Nixon

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The White House says President Nixon is considering several recommendations to win the release of American war prisoners in Vietnam, including an offer to unilaterally free 1,500 North Vietnamese prisoners being held by the allies.

Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler did not elaborate on what all the approaches were, but he call d attention to a proposal made by South Vietnam at the Paris peace talks for the release of 8,000 North Vietnamese prisoners in exchange for U.S. POWs.

AFRICA

arms, roam freely in about two-thirds of the territory.

Portugal claims the insurgents operate from bases inside the neighboring Republic of Guinea, a former French colony. The Republic's President Ahmed Sekou Toure said his Marxist-oriented regime repelled an invasion of African and European mercenaries in November, launched with Portugal's help. A United Nations mission which visited Guinea supported the claim. Portugal denied any involvement.

In Mozambique, Portuguese troops went over to the offensive in 1970, sallying forth from fortified outposts and employing the hit-and-run tactics of the guerrillas. The insurgents have suffered serious setbacks, including the loss of huge arms and ammunition dumps.

In the former French colony of Chad the revolt of the Chadian National Liberation Front against pro-French President Francois Tombalbaye enters its fifth year in 1971. France has said it will withdraw its 1,500-man force from the country by mid-1971.

Economically, Africa made substantial strides in 1970.

In the Congo, Belgians who fled the country's five-year civil war began returning to run industry, mining and schools. Gen. Joseph Mobutu, who seized power in 1965, was overwhelmingly elected president for a seven-year term in the nation's first presidential elections.

COPPER INDUSTRY

Mobutu has thrown the doors open to all but Communist investment. The state-controlled copper industry is expanding. Trade, even with South Africa, is booming. But education, transport and agriculture are still backward and soaring inflation has made Kinshasa, the capital, a more expensive city to live in than New York.

War failed to slow massive economic development in Angola and Mozambique. Oil flowed in increasing quantities from the Portuguese enclave of Cabinda at the mouth of the Congo river. Angola yielded diamonds and some of the world's richest high-grade iron ore. The economies of both countries gained from the presence of 100,000 Portuguese troops divided equally between them.

EXPORT TROUBLE

But in Portuguese Guinea exports were down by more than a half and the administration there remained wholly dependent on financial aid from Portugal.

Rhodesia's economy remained basically sound despite the economic sanctions impost against that country under the United Nations.

But in South Africa, economic experts said inflation is likely to worsen in 1971. A shortage of skilled labor has caused wages to rise faster than productivity. The shortage stems from the government's reluctance to tap South Africa's vast labor market of blacks and other non-whites to fill jobs normally given to whites. But continued pressure from labor-short businessmen and industrialists may force a reversal of this policy.

The East African Community linking Kenya, Uganda and Tanzania enters its fourth year with leaders of the three countries convinced teething troubles will soon be overcome in unifying the area in such areas as posts and telecommunications, and harbors, railways and customs and exercise.

Shelter Ridge Unit Rejected

The president of the Richardson Bay Sanitary District has said a 67-unit low-income apartment project on Shelter Ridge in Mill Valley cannot be served by his district.

Douglas De La Fontaine said directors have expressed interest in the project but stated that Shelter Ridge is within Mill Valley city limits and so will be served by the city's sewage treatment plant.

The Independent-Journal, on information supplied by the district, erroneously reported last Thursday that the project probably would be allowed to join the Richardson Bay District.

CIA's Guerrilla Army In Laos Worries Generals, Politicians

VIENTIANE (UPI) —The burgeoning size of the secret "special guerrilla unit" army of Laotians, which is armed, trained, paid and led by the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) is beginning to worry both Laotian generals and Laotian politicians.

The Army has grown from 10,000 men—most of them fighting for Meo tribesman Gen. Vang Pao in north Laos—to a total of about 25,000 fighting in all sections of the country in the past two years, high-ranking Laotian military sources report.

It is so large that it is now operating in units of battalion size (about 500 men), and its recruiters are draining troops away from the regular Laotian army, according to these sources. The regular army is, in fact, in a period of declining strength—its size is being brought down from a maximum of 70,000 men about a year ago to a goal of 45,000 men next year, mainly because U.S. officials believe they can run the war better than the Laotian High Command.

That is one of the things that worries Laotian generals a good deal these days. The other is that the Pathet Lao Communist army is on the upswing—intelligence says it is expanding toward a goal of about 50,000 active troops—and if a peace settlement in Laos should come out of current negotiations between the Communists and the government there will be serious problems over integrating a force that size with a regular army of equal strength.

The guerrilla units, or "SUGs" got their start back in the early 1960s when the CIA first recruited Vang Pao—then a major in the Laotian army—and hired a group of young Americans who had grown up in this part of the world and spoke the Meo dialect to go into northern Laos and help organize and train an army that could be capable of harassing Communist lines of communication from a series of hilltop outposts scattered across Xieng Khouang and Sam Neua provinces in the north.

When the American bombing campaign against North Vietnam began in 1964, and hundreds of American airmen poured into this allegedly neutral country to set up helicopter landing pads and refueling sites in support of rescue operations, plus radar and communications stations to monitor North Vietnamese air and ground traffic and other military movements, the SGU army was expanded to about 10,000 men and assigned the primary task of defending these bases.

Some smaller units also were assigned directly to monitor and occasionally raid supply shipments moving down the Ho Chi Minh Trail toward North Vietnam. The previous ambassador to Laos, William Sullivan, tried to restrict the scope of these operations, and to handle most Laotian military operations through the regular army command.

Now, however, a new American team is running the show here, led by Ambassador G. McMurtrie Godley.

Godley has encouraged an expansion of the SGU concept, and these troops fall directly under U.S. command.

As well as expanding in size, the SGUs have expanded their combat role. There now are more of them along the trail. Moreover, they have begun mounting sizable operations—such as the still-secret raid on the Ho Chi Minh Trail staging area around Tohephone, just east of the old U.S. Marine base at Khe Sanh in mid-November, which was conducted by four battalions of SGUs.

The SGUs are being expanded by paying them more money than regular Laotian troops get, according to Finance Minister Sisouk Na Champassak, who is also the number two man in the Defense Ministry.

Laotian soldiers receive base pay of $6 to $10 a month. The SGUs get $20 a month, and what's more, they get special combat bonuses of $1 to $2 a day. Laotian regulars get only token combat bonuses.

The SGUs also are better armed. All of them carry the M16 rifle, whereas only 20 per cent of the Laotian regulars have this powerful automatic weapon.

There are two things that particularly worry the Laotian command about the current SGU status. One is that the SGU recruiters are picking up not only the best privates and sergeants, but also are stealing Laotian army officers away from the regular army to run their own units.

The other is that the SGUs are beginning to remove from the Laotian command itself the last vestiges of government control over the military fate of the country.

Sally Stanford Joins Fight For Lady Bartenders

Sally Stanford has joined the debate over women's rights to serve liquor. She's all for it. The Sausalito restaurant owner had her attorney file application with the State Supreme Court on behalf of her Valhalla Inn.

Her attorney, Richard Gladstein, wants to file a "friend of the court brief" in the case of three Los Angeles County pubs which were cited by the state for having women bartenders.

Gladstein filed suit in Marin County because of the "threat of suspension or revocation" of the Valhalla license because "female employees are permitted to assist male bartenders in mixing alcoholic beverages."

The high court is expected to hear the case Jan. 7 in Los Angeles.

Pleas Entered In Drug Case

Three of four young men arrested Dec. 10 in a drug raid on a Santa Venetia house have pleaded innocent to felony charges.

A preliminary hearing was set for Jan. 19 for Kevin Sumner Orr, 20, of Ross, charged with possession of marijuana, and cocaine, and John Russell Warne, 23, of Corte Madera, and James Steven Preston, 20, both accused of possessing marijuana.

A fourth youth, Timothy Patrick Yarish, 20, of Fairfax, is to return to court later to enter a plea to a charge of being in a place where drugs were used.

Legislator Would Lower Adulthood

By ROBERT P. LAURENCE

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —A Republican assemblyman today announced he would reintroduce a constitutional amendment to lower the age of legal adulthood in California and propose a special election next year to resolve the issue.

John V. Briggs of Fullerton said a similar amendment, which failed in the Senate last year after passing the Assembly, would allow 18-year-olds to vote in state and local elections as well as for federal candidates. It would also drop to 18 the age limit for signing contracts, serving on juries, buying liquor and other adult activities.

He told a news conference he would also introduce a companion bill calling for a special election in November 1971 on the amendment, which would require approval by the people.

The Supreme Court Monday upheld the right of more than 1 million Californians now as young as 16 to vote in the 1972 presidential election.

The court supported the section of the 1970 voting rights law giving 18-year-olds the right to vote for congressional and presidential candidates, but it reserved to the states the right to set age limits for state and local elections.

Democrats welcomed the development as a help to their party, noting that younger voters are traditionally more liberal. But Republicans said the GOP could benefit.

Two other legislators—Assemblyman John J. Miller, D-Berkeley, and Sen. George R. Moscone, D-San Francisco—also said they would introduce legislation in January to lower the California voting age for all elections.

U.S. Will Pay Dearly For New Lease On Panama Canal

PANAMA CITY, R.P. (UPI) —The Panamanian government thinks the 67-year-old "lease" on the Panama Canal and Canal Zone has expired but "tenant" Uncle Sam is going to be a tough customer to budge out of the Zone.

But Panama, like most landlords, is going to ask the United States to pay dearly, and the price won't be in dollars and cents, to remain.

Panama seeks to abrogate the 1903 treaty. That treaty was granted "in perpetuity" and allows the United States to rule the Canal Zone "as if it were sovereign."

Twice before, in 1936 and 1955, the two countries negotiated revisions in the treaty.

Political observers say that sometime before the end of the year Panama will tell the United States exactly what it wants in a new treaty governing the Panama Canal.

By early 1971 Panama's ambassador to the United States, Jose Antonio de la Ossa, is expected to begin talks over the U.S. controlled Canal with U.S. negotiator Robert G. Anderson in Washington.

Diplomatic relations are now at their highest point since Strong Oan Omar Torrijos overthrew President Arnulfo Arias in October, 1968. Last month President Nixon told Panamanian President Demetrio Lakas that the U.S. was willing to negotiate to resume negotiations. It was the first assurance Panama has had at the White House level since August, when Lakas and Torrijos rejected three treaty drafts finished in 1967 as a basis for future negotions.

Those treaty drafts—dealing with the present canal, a possible sea-level canal and canal defense—set up an autonomous board with five U.S. and four Panama appointees. They guaranteed Panama a percentage of the Canal's revenues, a share that could have reached $15 million a year.

Before negotiations start both sides will study the recommendations of the U.S.-financed Atlantic - Pacific Interoceanic Canal Study Commission, headed by negotiator Anderson.

The $22.2 million feasibility study of building a sea-level canal was given to President Nixon Tuesday, December 1.

Informed sources on both sides of the negotiating table said Panama doesn't want control of the present Panama Canal nor the responsibility of defending the Canal Zone area.

"We only want what is fair for our country," Gen. Torrijos once told UPI. "We are certainly not getting what is fair at present."

Panamanian sources said at the bargaining table the Isthmian country would demand:

—Control of the Canal Zone police department and court system, which enforces law for 55,000 zone residents.

—Control of the Zone's customs's houses and collection duties.

— Guarantees the United States will stop improving and widening the Canal, which Panama considers a violation of the 1936 treaty revision.

—A reduction in the 12,000 military personnel connected with the U.S. Southern Command in the zone, that is now in charge of U. S. military missions in all of Latin America, and not only the Canal Zone as the 1903 treaty prescribes.

Restoring Medi-Cal Cuts Asked

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— The California Medical Association today petitioned the Reagan Administration to restore recent Medi-Cal cuts by Jan. 8.

The CMA said that emergency regulations cutting back health care services are "illegal" and said the order should be rescinded "to prevent irreparable injury, including serious illness and threat of death" to needy patients.

Doctors may be forced out of the program because of "burdensome and onerous conditions" imposed by the new regulations, said Dr. Ralph W. Burnett, CMA president.

The CMA asked for a public hearing on the regulations by Jan. 5 and for repeal of the cutbacks by Jan. 8.

The petition said under the new guidelines "Such care as is available is required to be substandard, because Medi-Cal patients will be denied necessary services, medication and continuity of care."

Dr. Burnett said it is possible that Medi-Cal could be lost completely with the 50 per cent of expenses now paid by the federal government falling directly upon the taxpaying citizens of California. He said that denial of health care services under Medi-Cal will require county governments to provide medical care to the poor.

Burnett particularly attacked a provision of prior authorization of specific medical treatments which he said actually works against the provision of care.

"Many times the physician must see his patient before he can determine whether the ailment is an emergency condition or is merely needed but non-emergency, and thus subject to prior authorization," Burnett said. "If the latter, while the visit was necessary to the patient's health, the patient isn't covered by Medi-Cal."

Other services deprived the Medi-Cal patient are restrictions in psychiatric services and medications, which are inadequate and can lead to dangerous situations, Burnett said.

Christmas Crush: 10 Million Calls

NEW YORK (UPI) —The American Telephone and Telegraph Co. is adding more than 4,000 circuits and putting 1,300 others in service ahead of schedule to handle an expected record number of interstate and foreign telephone calls this Christmas.

Company spokesmen said Monday they expect to handle more than 10 million calls during the holiday season, 12 to 26 per cent more than last year. AT&T said reduced interstate rates will begin at 5 p.m. EST Thursday and extend through the holiday weekend.

INCOME TAX FACTS

By PETER J. WIKEL

Start Now To Think About Business Automobile Expenses

Now is the time to take a good hard look at your business automobile expense for 1970.

Under the new rules you can deduct 12 cents per mile for the first 15,000 miles of business use of your automobile, plus nine cents per mile for every business mile thereafter.

If you have been itemizing your automobile expenses and they don't amount to 12 cents a mile including straight line depreciation then perhaps you should consider using 12 cents per mile this year instead of itemizing.

On the other hand, suppose you had been using the old 10 cents per mile allowance and you find this year that you have a big bill for repairs, tires, transmission or something, then you might change to itemizing.

You can change each year on the same or different cars provided you have not previously taken the extra first year depreciation allowance on your car or if you have not depreciated by one of the accelerated methods.

STRAIGHT LINE

You must always use the straight line method of depreciation in the years in which you itemize, and you must figure that you have used the straight line method of depreciation for the years you took the standard deduction.

If you are going to itemize this year then have all that needed repair work done, buy those new tires and get the old bus in shape so that next year you will have no expenses on the car and can use the standard rate profitably.

If your itemized expenses are a little soft, that is if your records are not complete, then you would be a lot better off to use the mileage rate because all you have to prove here is the number of miles traveled and the business use of the car.

If you are reimbursed for the business use of your car by your employer at less than 12 cents a mile you can include the reimbursement in income and deduct 12 cents a mile up to the first 15,000 miles and nine cents a mile thereafter.

OVER 12 CENTS

If your reimbursement is over 12 cents a mile but not over 15 cents a mile you wouldn't use this system but you do not have to account for your automobile expenses because you are considered to have accounted to your employer. If your reimbursement is over 15 cents a mile, you will have to include the reimbursement in income and itemize your automobile expenses.

You can use this system and in addition deduct parking fees, bridge tolls, etc.

Also, the mileage allowance for use of your car for charitable purposes or for medical purposes has been increased from five to six cents a mile.

Burglar Discovers Safe Combination

A burglar descovered the combination and then took $214 from a floor safe at E. L. Egger and Sons Nursery, 2000 Novato Boulevard, Novato, late Sunday or early Monday, police reported.

The burglar discovered a card containing the safe combination atop a cabinet shelf and then opened the safe, police said. The burglary occurred between 5:15 p.m. Monday and 8:20 a.m. yesterday.

NEW ATTORNEYS

Her Interest Is Criminal, His Is Tax Law

By PAT BALMES

"I was just scared to death my first semester at law school. I worked my head off," says new attorney Mary Lu Everett of Tiburon. "When my final grades were good, I relaxed and thought, 'This is just like anything else.' "

Now the Law Review graduate from Boalt Hall Law School at University of California is celebrating the news that she and her husband, Ken, both passed the recent California bar examination.

THE YOUNG couple spent their first year and a half of marriage finishing law school and studying for the exam.

"Friends asked us how we could stand to be together 24 hours a day all summer studying for the exam. We were too busy to have a fight! There wasn't even time to clean the house, but we both understood," says Mary Lu.

Attending a bar review course every night, the Everetts studied at the Civic Center law library daily from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

"The day before the three-day exam started, we hiked all day along Tiburon's railroad tracks, talking about law," says the young wife.

During the long exam, Mary Lu noticed, "My arm hurt from so much writing, ink in the pen wouldn't flow fast enough and there were too many people."

EACH NIGHT after the exam the Everetts relaxed at the movies.

"Afterward, we didn't care if we passed," remembers Mary Lu, explaining that only 50 per cent of the candidates pass.

"We just took off in our little car and drove for two months from coast to coast."

Will they practice together? Honor student Mary Lu is decisive: husband and wife should not compete.

"Maybe someday the position of women in marriage may be different, but right now I have to live in the system. My marriage is important to me," explains the young woman. She feels her husband is a practical, energetic oral advocate. Ken, a Hastings Law School graduate, plans a career in tax law. Mary Lu has waited to decide on her job, until Ken chose his and confirmed them as San Franciscans.

Since she is interested in criminal law, Mary Lu plans an interview with the Public Defender's Office in Oakland.

"They won't hire you until you pass the bar. Anyway somebody had to work on the house and do the Christmas shopping," remarks the young attorney, who is taking an interior decorating course at night. She has stitched draperies and huge toss pillows to brighten their neat, rented ranch house in Belveron West.

THE NEW graduate has already learned that being a woman in law is fashionable.

"Law firms like to have a woman to show how progressive they are," she remarks wryly. "A black, a Chicano and a woman lawyer are in demand, especially if they are at the top of their class." She is concerned, however, that the woman, though hired might not be promoted.

Being on Law Review dramatically increased interviewing law firms' interest in Mary Lu. She won her place on Law Review, reserved for the top 10 per cent of the class, through a writing competition.

"Writing is the trick in law school," she reveals.

MARY LU explains law firms' attitude toward an unmarried woman lawyer: she might marry a man who would take her to another city, so the firm would lose their investment in training her. "A car could hit me and they'd lose their investment, too," remarks Mary Lu. "Anyway, it's a myth that you are of no value to the firm for the first two years."

"If a woman lawyer seeking a job is married," continues Mary Lu," they may say, 'Let's be really frank. Women have children. How soon?' It's a legitimate complaint, but there is a high turnover of men, too.

"I really got mad at one attorney who interviewed me: 'What are you going to be doing in 10 years?' How do I know what I am going to be doing in 10 years?" she complains.

Mary Lu had a summer job with a Los Angeles law firm for $200 a week. Discussing her future after graduation, an attorney there suggested that if she wanted to be at home in the future with children, the firm could send a secretary to her home.

Legal work can fit into a married woman's life, according to Mary Lu. It can be done part-time. It can be gone back to after 10 years absence, without her education being obsolete.

SELF-CONFIDENT and with good credientials, Mary Lu finds it hard to be sympathetic to women's liberation movement, although she has attended a number of meetings.

"I have had more education and opportunities than many, many women. I don't need women's liberation. I can do it on my own. Those women are fighting the biological fact that they have the children. It's hard to be sympathetic, except for lower class women who have to have the money and have a lower pay scale. I am sure there is discrimination.

"I have gotten benefits from being a woman," says the young attorney.

Mary Lu didn't date other students in Boalt Hall very often. "It was hard to have good friends because they would ask you out. If you stopped dating someone, you still had to sit next to him in class through the next three years. I decided to make friends outside the law school. I made many friends my last year, after I was married."

At Boalt Hall there were about 18 women in her graduating class of 270.

"TEACHERS WHO tell dirty jokes in class keep right on doing it whether there are girls there or not," reports the new graduate. "Girls are call upon more by teachers. A hush would fall when I was called on. If a girl sounds stupid, they all laugh and think, 'Boy, what a dumb blonde!' They don't react at all if a man makes a dumb mistake."

In the three graduating classes preceding hers a woman stood at the top of the class, according to Mary Lu. There is a weeding out process among women students. The conflicts and taxes professors at Boalt Hall are women, she reports.

Mary Lu worked her way through law school. Summer jobs paid for her fees and books and to pay for her room and board, Mary Lu was student advisor in an upper classmen and graduate co-ed dormitory. She was on duty alternate nights and weekends. "Because I'm from a big family I could stand the noise" says Mary Lu, the second of seven children.

During her second year she was student advisor in a co-ed dorm for 200 students over 21, located near People's Park.

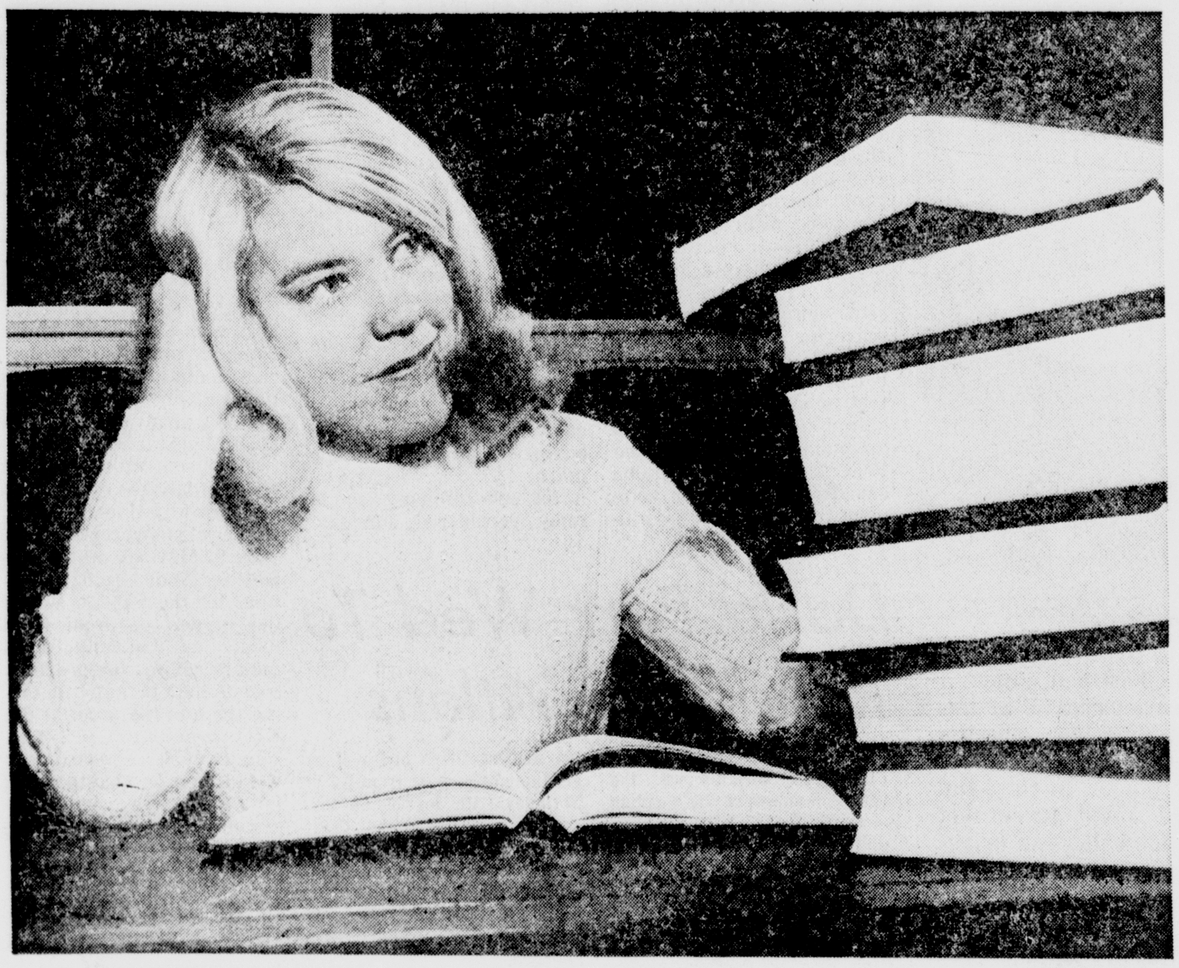
"They used it like a hotel. They had no together-spirit. Nobody would clean up coffee spilled on the stars. They didn't worry about others who would come tearing down those stairs. They wouldn't lock the front door, so there was stealing. Even clothes that were just dried in the laundry would be stolen. All kinds of strange men were walking around on the firls' floors. Strangers would come in and lie right down in their sleeping bags. Rsidents supposed they were somebody's friend," says Mary Lu.

MARY LU and Ken had an apartment in Berkeley after they were married in 1969 at the beginning of their third year in law school. They first met as undergraduates at University of California. Later Mary Lu invited Ken to crew for her father during a week of sailboat races in San Diego. The romance bloomed.

Relating her family background she says, "I think being from a big family makes you more competitive and selfish. You look out for yourself, because if you don't no one is going to.

A trip to the FBI crime laboratory in Washington, D.C., with her mother interested Mary Lu in a scientific and detective career. Studying chemistry at UCLA, she then majored in criminalistics at Berkeley in her junior and senior year. After a summer job as a trainee at Orange County crime laboratory Mary Lu was promised a job upon graduation. Later she learned that Governor Reagan's cut on state hiring closed her job opportunity.

"I had no other plans," relates Mary Lu. When I decided to go to law school my mother was appalled. All the time I was in college she was afraid I'd get married and not finish. But after I graduated she said, 'Don't you think it's time to settle down?' says Mary Lu. "I am sure they would have put me through law school if it did not look like I could do it on my own."



"A GIRL HAS to shine, then she can have her choice of jobs in law firms," says Mary Lu Everett of Tiburon, who with her husband, Ken, just received notice that they had passed the California bar examination. Mary Lu was one of the 18 women of the class of 270 who were graduated from Boalt Hall School of Law at the University of California this year. She was named to the Law Review for her writing ability. She thinks that being a woman in law is becoming fashionable. "A black, a Chicano and a woman lawyer are in demand," she says.

Besides Their Own, Addicts Ruin The Lives Of Loved Ones

DEAR HELEN:
I hope you print this so hat some of the kids who et their "highs" and say 's their thing, "don't hase us," will think about the her lives they ruin, or are out to ruin.

I am married to a drug ldict. It is pure hell for me go to work in the morng, try to do my job, while orrying if my husband has und a way to get down day.

Of course there have been rograms — $25 a week and u're cured. Or so many lls, or so much methadone om a center and you don't t sick any more. To all ese programs I say nuts! just wish I could sit at the N. table and do someing to stop drugs coming to this country, or find the ushers and get them bust- . . . something, anything . to turn back this epimic.

Helen, I love my guy so uch. His "friends" who ll him "to go and cop for em" think I am the one at is wrong. According to em, a little high doesn't rt . . .And then you're oked.

I found out a year ago, ien I came across a set of works" while cleaning. aybe I was blind before, t in our short marriage, I d never suspected. Dors don't act that much ferent at first. Only those close association with ers know the tortures I nt through while he tried quit, then shot up again, ne after time, when he s tempted.

Now he's on another proam, and he works steadi- But will it last? There'll a day when someone will , "I'll turn you on if you d me $2.00." Then there's e stuff. The best thing an dict can do for a buddy l addicts are "friends") give tastes. That's how u know you have a friend. But I don't have to tell u there are no real pals er a bag of dope. An act will steal from his own other to support his habit. husband learned, when mother's house was bed by a "close friend" o borrowed his car supsedly to look for a job, but lly for a cover-up. He d the loot for heroin.

Things have been good for nost a month, but I'm in nstant fear. I take care of the money, see to it he ver carries more than enough for lunch, because he can't trust himself. He's broken off with all his old friends, but they're still around, waiting, and his habit is just asleep for a while. He doens't miss a day saying he's sorry but, Helen, my insides have been torn apart by fear and hurt and not knowing. Is it really finished? I pray!

That's the other side of dope — the slow death users bring to people who love them. — ADDICT'S WIFE

P.S. My husband didn't think he had a habit — "H." was just a little something extra to do with your "brothers" — until he tried to quit.

DEAR WIFE:

Try not to expect the worst: Defeatism in you can make the needle awfully tempting. Addicts aren't doomed for life, especially when their habit is new and fairly small. Perhaps your husband has slipped because "friends" won't leave him alone. Would a move to a new location — away from the heavy drug scene — be an answer? — H.

DEAR HELEN:

In the past week my son paid out almost $200 for car repairs only to find that the repairman didn't install the parts he paid for. It's his word against the man's, and my son is under 19, has fairly long hair (though earns good money) and is therefore not listened to. The car runs no better than before — in fact worse. A lawyer would charge more than he'd get back. What can we do? — MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER:

Try the Small Claims Court. Though limits vary in different states, most such courts handle claims the size of yours — and filing costs are small. Good luck. — H.

LUMINARIOS WILL burn throughout Novato on Christmas Eve and Christmas night. Roxanne Kidder, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kidder shows Mrs. Jane Parsel, a new resident and neighbor in Novato, the way to make them. An old Spanish custom "to light the path to the birthplace of Christ." The custom was brought to Novato by a military family in 1959 and is now a tradition in various areas of the city. The luminarios —brown paper bags with sand in them and a candle placed in the sand — are placed about three feet apart on the sidewalks and driveways.

Christmas Eve Luminarios Are Tradition In Novato

Lighting candles on Christmas Eve and Christmas night has become a tradition in Novato.

The luminarios, as the candles are called are placed on the sidewalk and leading to the doorstep of the home. An old Spanish custom, several versions have been given for the custom but two of them are "to light the path to the birthplace of Christ and the lights will guide the Christ Child to the home."

In 1959, a military family back from the Southwest started the tradition on Hillswood Drive in South Novato with six families participating. Now it has spread throughout the Novato area.

More than 9000 luminarios will be placed in San Marin alone on Christmas Eve. However, if it rains, they will light them Christmas night. Other homeowners associations and neighborhood families are also participating.

The Robert Kidder's daughters, Maryanne 13, Roxanne 11, and Luanne, eight years old, supplied some of their neighbors with the luminarios and demonstrated making them. They are made by filling a 10-inch paper sack with two inches of sand, then turning the top of the bag down to form a cuff and anchoring the candle in the sand. The luminarios should be placed about three feet apart on the sidewalks and driveways.

A striking sight many Marinites will view them beginning at 6 p.m. Christmas Eve.

Shaggy Rug Story Told

NEW YORK (UPI) — Some 300 years ago Scandinavians were permitted to pay their taxes with shaggy rugs.

But past isn't prologue in this case. Not even the rugs remain the same. Contemporary shag rugs are made of nylon, which wasn't even invented say back then, says Karastan, a rug maker.

Santa Claus Is Alive And Well In The Body Of Ralph Nader . . .

By ARTHUR E. ROWSE

WASHINGTON — Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus, and his name is Ralph Nader.

If the editor of the New York Sun who wrote the famous letter to Virginia were still alive, he probably would have started the letter with the above words today.

For the people of the United States have received more presents already from Ralph Nader than they have received from any other source. And they are likely to go on collecting benefits from this man for many years to come even if Nader did not do another thing but play golf, which he would never do.

NADER'S LATEST caper — asking manufacturers for proof of their advertising claims — is the closest thing to a perfect gift for consumers, for it may become the most effective in the most difficult area for buyers: sorting out conflicting product claims.

This move has already sent more shock waves quivering through Madison Avenue than a thousand bombs. And his suggestion that manufacturers be required to submit the proof for public inspection at the Federal Trade Commission has drawn approving comment from several FTC officials.

Yet what Nader has done should not be so shocking. Almost any consumer could write to manufacturers and report the results. Some of the letters were signed by an associate, Aileen Adams, who also received replies although not as many as Nader received.

In their letters to manufacturers, Nader and Miss Adams simply reported what they saw in magazines and on television and asked company presidents for scientific evidence to back up the statements made.

PRODUCTS INCLUDED tires, tonics, soaps, enzymes, bleaches, cold remedies, analgesics, shampoos and gasolines. They included some of the most widely advertised products on the market.

Not one company sent a reply considered adequate by Nader and Miss Adams. Only three of the 58 firms chose to send any clinical data, the value of which was called "dubious" by Nader and Miss Adams.

Sixteen of the companies chose not to reply at all even after subsequent reminder letters were sent in some cases.

Six others refused flatly to furnish any information, saying they would do so only on request of an appropriate government agency.

FOUR ANSWERS included brief descriptions of company tests rather than detailed scientific data which was requested.

Fifteen companies sought to clarify vague statements. These included a suggestion from the maker of a weight-reducing product that Miss Adams "consult your physician and develop alternate methods of reducing your weight."

Eight letters contained personal assurances from company presidents or their representatives that promotional claims were truthful. Another firm retracted an advertising claim.

Two firms offered to send representatives to discuss their advertisements, one of which retracted this offer.

IN SUMMING up the responses, Nader said it was time for the FTC to switch the burden of proof from itself to manufacturers making claims for products sold to the public by requiring them to file proof at the FTC.

Individual consumers would then be able to check for themselves with renewed assurance that the truth still lives in American advertising.

Police, Maids In Ticket Battle

CHARLESTON, W.Va., (708)—Policemen in this capital city, apparently resenting the recent addition of Meter Maids to the force, are trying to give more parking tickets than the women, according to a municipal judge.

The judge, John Charnock, called for a cease fire in the latest version of the battle of the sexes.

Charnock said a lawyer had shown him two parking tickets issued to the same car on the same day: one time-stamped 1:00 p.m., the other 1:01 p.m.

He Got Powder

CINCINNATI (UPI)—James Dixon said he wanted a breath of fresh air, but he took a powder instead.

Following sentencing, Dixon told police he felt ill and needed some fresh air. He was permitted to step outside a rear door. He failed to return.

Police say they may have some difficulty in locating Dixon because he listed three home addresses.

Revised Student Code Adopted Quietly By San Rafael Board

The San Rafael Board of Education last night adopted a revised student policy, including rights and responsibilities. It drew little comment.

The quiet adoption was in contrast to the controversy that erupted when the citizens policy review committee proposed a student bill of rights in October.

The revised policy, described by Supt. John F. Plank as a "modification" of the originally proposed policy, reads:

"The board believes that the rights guaranteed to all citizens within the law shall not be denied to any student . . . so long as student conduct does not impair the safety, health, well-being or rights of the individual or others.

"The board extends to students those constitutional rights and corollary responsibilities which are consistent with orderly educational processes and goals of the San Rafael City Schools.

"Students shall be encouraged, through student government and other types of student activity appropriate to their levels of maturity, to assume responsibility for controlling their own conduct."

Student Member Charles Feden successfully argued that the section covering corporal punishment should provide for notice to parents before any punishment is administered.

Under the policy, the use of corporal punishment "is discouraged, but if a certificated employee finds that, in his opinion, it is necessary to administer corporal punishment, such punishment shall be allowed."

Supt. Plank said such punishment hadn't been "officially" administered since he became superintendent, about four years ago.

The only mention of grooming was a section that said students participating in interschool athletics are expected to be neat and well groomed and their hair "should be worn at a length consistent with good practice of health, safety and performance."

The policy also covers terms of attendance and transfers, handling of school records, discipline, tutoring and student body activities.

It bans hazing, and provides for removing any student possessing or under the influence of drugs or alcohol from the school premises.

Local Control Of Physical Education Rules Is Urged

The San Rafael Board of Education was urged last night to seek local control of physical education requirements for high school students.

John L. Levinsohn of 21 Lunada Court opposed the state mandate that requires students to take physical education for four years of high school.

Under the present system, a local board can't take any action of its own regarding physical education requirements, Levinsohn said.

The school board should have the opportunity to make changes in the requirements if it desires, Levinsohn contended.

A check of 23 states disclosed that 16 states "have no graduation requirements for physical education," as California does, he said.

Levinsohn suggested that the board seek to have the physical education requirement dropped for juniors and seniors.

Board member Carl J. Brown, a coach at Sir Francis Drake High School, agreed, saying that the mandated physical education requirement could be limited to the freshman and sophomore years.

Members agreed to consider Levinsohn's proposal Jan. 12 after hearing from the physical education department staff.

After board member Paul L. Jones expressed reservations about spending funds for sabbatical leaves in view of the district's financial state, the board voted to grant sabbatical leaves to four teachers in the high school district and one in the elementary district.

Supt. John F. Plank estimated the leaves would cost $10,600 in the high school district and $4,500 in the elementary district.

Jones felt the funds might better be spent to improve schools, and he questioned the value received by the school districts from sabbatical leaves.

Board president Herman L. Childress said he felt the districts had benefitted. "I've been quite pleased by the result of our sabbaticals to date," he said.

Sue Weinheimer, Richard Bayba and Sally Rupp, teachers at Terra Linda High School and Alan Barahal, San Rafael High School teacher, were granted sabbaticals for the 1971-72 school year at half pay.

Walter Benson, elementary district teacher, was granted a sabbatical for the spring semester, 1972, at full pay.

The San Rafael Board of Education also:

ANNEXATION — Petitioned the City of San Rafael to annex the San Pedro School site, about 10 acres, with the intent of increasing fire and police protection at the site.

FEDERAL GRANT — Authorized application for federal grants for library equipment under the program to improve education of disadvantaged children, $3,900 in the elementary district and $3,914 in the high school district.

FUND RAISING — Indicated that obtaining sponsors for a school literary magazine would be permissible under the policy governing fund raising by students.

NEW COURSES — Approved 18 new elective high school course offerings for the 1971-72 school year.

BUDGET — Received a report from Business Mgr. Charles L. Condrotte that as of Oct. 31, the elementary school district budget reserve was at $313,296, and the high school district budget reserve at $491,949.

CAFETERIAS — Received a report that high school cafeterias showed a profit of $521 and the elementary cafeterias a profit of $102 during November.

FIRING — After a closed hearing on an appeal by Lewis Watkins, custodian 1, Terra Linda High School, voted in open session to follow the recommendation of Supt. John F. Plank that Watkins, a probationary employee, be fired.

CLAIM DENIED — Denied a claim by Janet J. Peters for $10,000 for injuries to her right leg reportedly suffered in a fall at Coleman School grounds, Aug. 29.

HIRED — Authorized the hiring of Edward Montpart, substitute custodian, at $3.04 an hour.

RESIGNATION — Accepted the resignation of Alfred Silverira, custodian 1, Terra Linda High.

GIFTS — Acknowledged as gifts, for San Rafael High School, 64 science books from William Dresia, three fish tanks from Seymour Kashin, and a used refrigerator from Tom Ushino; for Terra Linda High School, a vacuum cleaner from Mr. and Mrs. Burton Bergstrom, a photo enlarger and assorted darkroom equipment from Robert Links, and assorted paints, varnishes and colors from Mrs. G. N. Compagno; and $800 from the San Pedro School Parent-Teacher Association for the school library.

NEXT SESSION — Adjourned until 8 p.m. Jan. 5 for a general discussion on education, with the next regularly scheduled meeting to be held at 8 p.m. Jan. 12, both sessions at the district office, Third and E streets.

TEXTBOOK — Approved "Tune In To Health," by Felice and Carolan as a textbook for a pilot course in health education at Terra Linda High School.

Board member John C. Pfeiffer was absent.

Council Hears Noise Ordinance, Protests

The San Anselmo City Council deferred action last night on a new antinoise ordinance after residents objected it didn't go far enough.

The council, worried about rising noise levels in the community, announced its intention to beef up the current law, which prohibits only "nerve-wracking noises between 9 a.m. and 8 p.m."

City Atty. John G. Buresh submitted a model ordinance which declares unlawful "excessive, unnecessary or unusually loud" noise and sets general standards for the playing of radios, phonographs, loudspeakers, honking of horns and construction and industrial noises.

An optional section of the proposed ordinance establishes precise noise levels permissible in certain districts.

While Mayor James F. Reed was prepared to take steps toward adopting only the first section of the measure, two residents objected that the standards were vague and made little improvement on the existing ordinance. They recommended adopting the optional section as well.

Reed, heeding the advice of Buresh, said, "I agree there is weakness in the first section but I'd rather have something that at least defines noise."

The council hedged at adopting the optional section as well because of enforcement cost. City Administrator-Controller Alfred C. Kaeppel said a portable noise measuring unit of the type needed would cost up to $2,900.

The council decided to present the model ordinance at the next meeting of the Marin County Mayors and Councilmen to determine interest in countywide adoption of the full measure. Costs could be divided among participating cities.

The San Anselmo City Council also:

LIBRARY — Asked for endorsement of a proposed reciprocal agreement with the Larkspur Library from the newly reorganized San Anselmo Library Board of Trustees before such a pact is considered. Several councilmen expressed concern an agreement with Larkspur was premature.

STUDY — Voted 4-1 to make a preliminary application for federal matching funds under the 701 program toward a project to determine how the city can lessen the tax burden on its residents for services. Mayor Reed stressed the application was not binding and the city could withdraw at a future time. Councilman Woodrow V. Capurro dissented, saying such a project would unduly encumber city funds.

CRIME — Endorsed creation of a crime laboratory in Marin after Police Chief Raymond R. Buchignani reported state officials would no longer accept for analysis narcotics seized in the county because of a heavy workload. It asked the council of mayors and councilmen to endorse the project as well.

WIDENING — Was told by City Engineer Charles R. Leitzell of the City of San Rafael's plans to widen the Miracle Mile to six lanes to the San Anselmo city line. Leitzell foresaw no adverse effect on San Anselmo traffic.

ZONING — Modified uses permitted in C-1 districts to allow greater flexibility in the types of businesses permitted in such zones.

SALARIES — Changed its negotiation procedure with city employees to try to avoid prolonged salary talks which require the city to give pay raises retroactive to July 1, the start of a fiscal year. The new procedure makes raises effective July 1, if adopted before that date, or on the first day of the month following adoption, if the raises are approved after July 1. The council also included department heads and the police captain and assistant fire chief in a negotiating unit.

SENIORS — Authorized Kaeppel and the local senior citizens' group to work out a program under which aged persons would sell permits to city parking lots to commuters, taking a percentage of the proceeds.

PARK — Decided to see if an employee of the San Francisco Parks and Recreation Department, who has said he would donate time to help master plan the Robson-Harrington Park, is available to attend public hearings on the issue. It also said it wanted planning cost estimates from a professional park planner.

COMMITTEE — Named James Cowperthwaite to the citizens committee on zoning and housing.

Bridge Mishap Injures Three

One person was hospitalized and two others treated at Marin General Hospital after a head-on collision at 12:05 a.m. today on the Richardson Bay Bridge, the California Highway Patrol has reported.

Patrick W. Finlay, 44, of 835 South McDowell Boulevard, Petaluma, was reported in good condition today at Marin General Hospital with multiple scrapes and bruises.

Officers said his car collided with one driven by Eugene Marty, 28, of San Francisco, who was treated at the hospital for a scraped right leg and low back strain. A passenger, Maureen Doherty, 23, also of San Francisco, was treated for scalp, knee and hand bruises and a possible concussion.

Four-Car Crash Injures Two

Two persons received minor injuries yesterday at 5:40 p.m. in a four-car pileup on the Manuel Freitas Parkway overcrossing of Highway 101 in San Rafael, according to the California Highway Patrol.

Lois L. Collard, 45, of Santa Clara, was treated at Marin General Hospital for a cut lip and bruised right knee and fingers. David A. Watts, 43, of 101 Garden Avenue, San Rafael, was to see his own doctor for pain of the right leg.

The highway patrol identified the other two drivers as Deborah J. Lundgren, 16, of 14 Cresthaven Drive, Santa Venetia, and Lynn D. Carter, 16, of 94 De La Guerra Road, San Rafael.

Two Change Their Pleas On Cocaine

SAN FRANCISCO — Two of seven Marinites charged with conspiracy to sell cocaine have changed their pleas to guilty in U.S. District Court here.

Maureen Booth, 24, and Sharon Ann Needleman, 26 of San Anselmo have pleaded guilty and are to appear for sentencing Jan. 15.

To appear on that date for trial are Mitchell J. Howard, 22, of Marin City, Steve Howard, 24, of Sausalito and Marcia Freet, 27 of Sausalito.

Robert Bernard Ford, 21, and Mark Robert Shanahan, also 21, both of Kentfield, are to appear Jan. 8 for setting of a trial date.

All but the two Howards were arrested May 22 at San Francisco International Airport after undercover agents purchased cocaine worth $250,000 on the drug market.

The Howards were arrested in Sausalito.

The arrests came after a lengthy investigation that included three purchases of cocaine by narcotics agents.

Nine Enter Race For Junior Miss

Nine Central Marin high school senior girls have entered the Junior Miss Pageant sponsored by the San Rafael Jaycees.

Judging of the girls for the pageant will be at 8:30 p.m. Jan. 2 at San Rafael High School auditorium, said Robert Callahan, publicity chairman. The winner will receive $100 in cash and go on to the state finals Jan. 23 to 30 in Santa Rosa, according to Callahan.

The Junior Miss program is not a beauty contest. Girls are judged on scholarship, mental alertness, youth fitness, poise and appearance, and talent in creative and performing arts.

Entrants are: Anita Stover, Peggy Jean Chater, Ruth Mackay and Anne Claire Fagley, all of Redwood High School; Amy Marie Strand and Suzanne Dee La Belle of Sir Francis Drake High School; Rebecca Olivia Jones of San Rafael High School; Alice Jacobs of Tamalpais High School and Karyn Nikas of Terra Linda High School.

Car Flips Over, Petalumans Hurt

Two Petalumans were treated today at Novato General Hospital for leg bruises after a single-car accident on Highway 101 south of Novato, the California Highway Patrol has reported.

Lula Georgeatos, 40, and Robert L. Georgeatos, 14, both of 75 Queens Lane, were injured when their car left the freeway and overturned at 12:05 a.m. today.

Officers said Lula Georgeatos apparently dozed at the wheel.

Man Bound Over

Anthony Luchessi, 18, of Corte Madera was bound over to Marin Superior Court yesterday on a charge of burglarizing and concealing property stolen from a Kentfield residence Nov. 3. Luchessi is also known as Tony Corbello.

Immunity Tests Can Save Babies

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI) — A revolution in microbiology may insure the health of millions of babies before they are born, says President J. P. Barger of Dynatech Corp.

Dynatech is presently developing a broad-range of low cost kits to test young women before pregnancy for specific immunities to diseases during pregnancy that cause birth defects and mental retardation.

Although tests for these specific immunities have been available in the past, costs of the tests made them prohibitive for most women. But Barger says doctors all over the world have been clamoring for a drastic reduction in costs and companies such as Dynatech are producing low cost test kits that eventually will put them within the reach of most couples.

Christmas Bonus In Bridge Commute Books: Ferry Tickets

Two one-way tickets for the ferry will be inserted in each bridge commute ticket book sold after Dec. 31.

The aim of the 90-day trial will be to see if the promotional scheme succeeds in shifting more bridge commuters to the ferry. The tickets will be valid only during weekday commuter hours.

The regular one-way fare on the ferry is 50 cents.

Bridge directors also set a special dime-per-person, round-trip fare for supervised groups of children.

Gen. Mgr. Dale W. Luehring pushed unsuccessfully for limiting the privilege to groups of 15 or more children and to midday ferry runs from Sept. 1 to June 15. But bridge directors brushed off his argument that the ferry often was too crowded at other times, agreeing to restrict the special fare if his fears were confirmed by experience.

Golden Gate Bridge District directors also:

COMMUTERS — Received report from Luehring that 71 per cent of the autos during commuter hours, counted last Wednesday, carried only the driver, that 24 per cent had one passenger and only 2 per cent carried three or more passengers.

FERRY RIDERS — Received report that 261,690 passengers rode the Sausalito ferry in its first four months of operation, and that the district earned $1,934 in November from the ferry concessionaire.

BUSES — Received report that 169 persons rode the bus run between North and Central Marin during its first week of operation, and that revenue totaled $45.

TRUCK — Accepted a low bid of $9,046 from A. L. Lerner GMC Truck Co. of San Francisco to furnish a truck cab and chassis.

SHAFT — Bought a spare propeller shaft for the Sausalito ferry at a cost of $3,803 from the Pacific Dry Dock & Repair Co. of Oakland, which proposed the lowest price offered by three companies.

FUNERALS — Extended the definition of immediate family to include in-laws for purposes of taking sick leave to attend funerals. The extension was asked by the Teamsters Union.

CLUB BUS — Referred to the transportation-finance committee a proposal to subsidize a charter bus between Mill Valley and the University of California Medical Center in San Francisco. The cost of subsidy will be under $6 a month per person if the 38-passenger bus is filled.

Apartment Plan Reprieve

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — A threatened bar to a 102-unit apartment project on Strawberry Cove was dropped yesterday by the San Francisco Bay Regional Water Quality Control Board.

The board's staff earlier this month had indicated that sewage treatment facilities may be inadequate to handle the project, but the board yesterday agreed it would not know until May whether its staff's fear justified blocking the project.

The board has no power to block the project, but its recommendation has been sought by the Bay Conservation and Development Commission, which is considering a fill permit for the project. Yesterday's decision was to agree not to recommend denial of the permit by the BCDC.

But the board warned that it may order a ban on all new sewer connections — in effect a ban on all new construction in the area — if the study due in May shows the sewerage system already is overloaded.

The study is to be done by the Sausalito-Marin City Sanitary District, which also treats wastes from the Tamalpais Valley and Richardson Bay sanitary districts. The board ordered the study as part of tough new standards set for the Sausalito-Marin City district's sewage treatment.

Cyril Hansen, president of the district board, assured the regional board that his board already had ordered steps to upgrade its sewage treatment. He disputed a statement by the regional board's staff that the district still was dumping raw sewage into the bay during heavy rainfall.

Dennis Mishek, the regional board's engineer for Marin, however, said that construction of the Strawberry Cove project would mean that raw sewage would be dumped into Richardson Bay above the Richardson Bay Bridge. Board members did not respond to this point.

Paul Broman, developer of the Strawberry Cove project, said he would not object to a ban on all new connections, but successfully urged the board not to make him "the whipping boy" by singling out his project for denial by the BCDC.

Broman said it would be "unfair" to make him postpone the BCDC permit until after the sanitary district's study is done in May. He noted that he was facing inflation at the rate of three-quarters of a per cent a month on the $2 million project.

Inmate Who Left Gets New Term

A San Quentin prison inmate has been sentenced to a year in state prison by Judge E. Warren McGuire of Marin Superior Court for failing to report back to the prison from a work furlough job Aug. 18, 1969.

Peter Dunham, 35, had less than a month remaining until his parole date when he did not return to the prison from his job on a Contra Costa County newspaper.

Judge McGuire on Monday ordered the new sentence to run concurrently with a five years to life term Dunham is serving for a 1958 Los Angeles County conviction for furnishing and possessing narcotics.

Tiburon Sanitary District Plans Hit

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Tiburon Sanitary District's battle to go it alone in Southern Marin was dealt an apparently fatal blow yesterday by the San Francisco Bay Regional Water Quality Control Board.

The district has refused to join other Southern Marin sanitary districts in a study of a joint sewerage system to solve the problem of pollution in Richardson Bay. Both the district board, and the City of Belvedere, which pipes its wastes to the district for treatment, have insisted that they were not polluting Richardson Bay because their wastes are dumped in Raccoon Straits.

The district has banked its opposition to joining the study on the basis of its plans for a new treatment system — a system that will require federal matching funds to build. But the regional board would have to approve the district's application for federal funds.

The regional board did not review the district's application yesterday, but it declared it will require the district to "participate" in the study as a condition of the regional board's approval of any construction grant application. The board cited a 1968 state study that recommended all Southern Marin sanitary districts consolidate and dump their treated waste in the ocean.

ROSS'S TB PATIENTS

Lonely Time Of Year

By LARRY MOWELL

The Christmas season is a joyous time for most families. Trimming the tree, exchanging presents and singing carols provide a closeness missing at other times of the year.

While most families will enjoy Christmas morning opening presents together, the 20 tuberculosis patients at Ross General Hospital will be forced by the requirements of their cure to remain in their segregated wing.

Modern drugs have saved sufferers of the respiratory disease from hopeless years in a sanatorium, but the disease still forces several months of hospitalization.

For the patients whose months of treatment overlap Christmas, the holiday season is a bittersweet time.

Mary Horn, 45, of Berkeley, who had learned of her illness less than a month before Christmas, said it knocked her Christmas plans "all to pieces."

Her four children and her husband will visit on Christmas, she said, but it won't be the same. Although the customary Christmas celebration is precluded, "we are decorating our own little cubbyholes and trying to get the Christmas spirit," Mrs. Horn said.

Mrs. Horn, Kathleen Sullivan, a San Francisco secretary, and Sausalito housewife Julie Taylor were the only ones on the ward the other day willing to discuss their situations and admitted being perhaps more optimistic than their counterparts.

Miss Sullivan, a fine-boned graying woman who said she hasn't been unhappy during her four months in the ward, told of a woman who has.

The woman was transferred from the ward to Marin General Hospital for two days last month to deliver a daughter. The young mother, Miss Sullivan said, has been upset since about being separated from her child.

Separations are required at first to protect others from the infection so the patient is cloistered for about two weeks. Patients are released when samples of sputum contain no tuberculosis, but must continue to take drugs for about two years.

Mrs. Taylor, 27, who lives at 95 Santa Rosa Avenue, also has small children, the youngest born only four months before she entered the hospital Oct. 16.

Nevertheless, she said, "I am beginning to enjoy the hospital better and better which worries me a little bit."

She said she has enjoyed the opportunity to pamper her artistic bent through ceramics, sculpting and weaving.

Those are only three of the crafts taught to patients by the Terrace's two occupational therapists during almost nine daily hours of free time, according to Mrs. B. Peterson, nursing supervisor.

Mrs. Peterson said the patients are awakened at 7 a.m. for breakfast, given medication and examined by a doctor. They are free from 9 a.m. until lunch at 11:30 a.m.

Following a rest period from noon to 2 p.m., they have free time until dinner for watching television, playing the piano, shooting pool, sunbathing or learning a craft, she said.

Dinner is followed by more free time, Mrs. Peterson said. Patients retire at 9:30 or 10 p.m.

The Terrace was established in 1925 when treatment consisted primarily of bed-rest and good food, according to Dr. Robert W. Clark, chief of the ward.

Because tuberculosis has declined since that time and a cure has been discovered, other sanatoriums went out of business leaving Ross's the only one in Marin. It attracts patients from all over Northern California, according to Clark.

While Mrs. Taylor said she is enjoying her stay and receives numerous visits from her family, she had misgivings about spending Christmas in the hospital.

"It is very sad when all the carolers come. It makes me feel awful. It makes me want to cry. It is easier if you are here not to celebrate," the slim, dark-haired housewife said in the slightly hoarse voice that typifies her ailment.

"It is just difficult to celebrate Christmas in the hospital and give it much meaning because so much of Christmas is being with the family and presents and the dinner," she said.

Two Of 15 Plants Are Up To Par

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Only two of 15 sewage treatment plants in Marin are in continuous compliance with disinfection requirements.

That report was issued yesterday by the San Francisco Bay Regional Water Quality Control Board.

The two, based on data for January through September, are the Sausalito-Marin City Sanitary District and the San Rafael Sanitation District's main plant.

The summary of performance issued by the regional board's staff did not deal with compliance with treatment requirements other than disinfection of bacteria.

Ocean Dumping Ban Set For Bay Area

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — The nation's first ban on ocean dumping of poisonous industrial wastes was imposed yesterday by the San Francisco Bay Regional Water Quality Control Board.

The action formally ordered the ban asked by the board after state biologists branded the wastes as the prime suspect in the long decline of the region's crab catch. (The ban and the reason for it were reported in detail by the Independent-Journal on Dec. 2.)

Board chairman William C. Weber of San Mateo said "we've got to stop using the ocean as a garbage can."

The board's staff explained that the ban will apply to wastes coming from the bay region. "We're not trying to tell Tokyo what to do," said one.

The regional board's action upstaged the Nixon administration, which has yet to introduce its proposed nationwide ban on ocean dumping. The administration's ban would be policed by the Coast Guard, and violators could be fined $50,000.

Just who will police the regional board's ban was unclear. Board members indicated that they expected the job to be aided by the State Department of Fish and Game, but a department spokesman told the board that it had neither funds nor equipment to do the job.

The regional board itself has only one 31-foot cruiser to police the bay.

The ban will be effective in the Gulf of the Farallones on Jan. 1, and bar dumping even beyond the gulf by the end of 1971. The primary targets of the order were U.S. Steel Copr., which was given until April 30 to stop all ocean dumping, and Standard Oil Co., which was given until the end of 1971.

Justice Black Writes Voting Law For Nation

Nobody, apparently, is exactly pleased with the United States Supreme Court's decision that 18-year-olds can vote only for federal candidates as a result of congressional action extending them the franchise.

And those who look to the supreme court for the final, definitive word on the law in this country cannot help being disturbed by the fragmentation show in its decision.

Four of the nine justices held that it was constitutional for Congress to lower the voting age to 18 for all elections — federal, state and local.

Four of the nine held that Congress has no power to set the voting age for anything.

The ninth, Justice Hugo L. Black, held that Congress has such power for federal elections only.

SO WHAT HAPPENED was that Justice Black's opinion holding the 18-year-old vote provisions of the 1969 Voting Rights Act constitutional for federal elections was concurred in by the four who feel the states do not retain the right to set the voting age. And 18, 19, and 20-year-olds will get to vote in 1972 for President, vice president, senators and congressmen.

This was unsatisfactory to Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, who sponsored the 18-year-old vote bill in Congress. It was unsatisfactory to the four justices who felt Senator Kennedy's bill was constitutional. And of course it was unsatisfactory to the four who felt that Congress has no authority to set the voting age.

MOST OF THE 18, 19 and 20-year-olds may not mind too much at that. Most of the political activity of college students, who make up nearly half this age group and have been most active in seeking the vote, has been directed at the federal level. They have campaigned principally for or against candidates for Congress.

There is considerable question, anyway, as to how many of them will exercise the franchise. Voter registration has long been lower among those in the 20s than among older citizens. It is likely to be lower still among those under 21.

THE "TEEN VOTERS" in most states — including California — will be in a position somewhat similar to that of women in some states prior to adoption of the 19th Amendment to the Constitution.

Long before the 19th Amendment was adopted in 1920, many states had given women the franchise — but not all permitted them to vote for senators and representatives. Wyoming extended suffrage to women 'way back in 1869, and when it became a state in 1890, insisted that women should have full voting rights. Colorado followed in 1893, Utah and Idaho in 1896. California gave women full voting rights in 1911. Yet only 11 states had completely enfranchised women before the 20th Amendment. In some others, they could vote only in local or local and state elections.

As to the vote for 18-year-olds, only two years have passed since Californians in an iniative referendum turned down a state constitutional amendment lowering the voting age. So complete enfranchisement for the "teen voters" may yet be years away.

In the meantime, Justice Hugo L. Black is in the position of having, in effect, single-handedly written a voting law for all 50 states.

"Yes, Nevada, there is a Howard Hughes — someplace."

Reagan's Medi-Cal Cuts Produce A Backlash Of Balderdash

By HENRY C. MacARTHUR

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — It's unfortunate that attempts to reduce government expenditures to sane levels should bring the dissemination of balderdash and build up the constantly growing distrust of all levels of government.

Assemblyman John T. Knox, D-Richmond, recently issued a "scare-head" release on the subject of Medi-Cal, which is a vital government issue today because its costs have increased to the point where they are jeopardizing the state budget and threatening new taxes.

Assemblyman Knox says that "Governor Ronald Reagan's cuts in Medi-Cal funds and other prescription service threatens to bankrupt thousands of local pharmacies in California."

It is peculiar that Assemblyman Knox would fall for a statement like that.

Had the good assemblyman said that thousands of pharmacies are threatened with bankruptcy because government paperwork under Medi-Cal is turning them under, there might have been some justification in his criticsm.

But the high prices charged for drugs preclude bankruptcies.

Drug costs have been a controversial subject in California for years on end, and in addition, there are discrepancies and variations in prices from one end of the state to the other. For instance, vitamins in Los Angeles are about a third cheaper than they can be purchased in Sacramento.

Most drug stores are run on a business-like basis, and if the costs of doing business are higher in the small pharmacy, which Assemblyman Knox is tearful about, then it is because they do not handle the volume warranting lower prices. This is true in several different types of business.

Assemblyman Knox is correct when he says that the paperwork in writing for prior authorizations for prescription drugs will send up costs, while many of the maximum charges for wholesale drugs will force pharmacies to take a loss when doctors order drugs by brand names.

In any event, there is probably no threat of bankruptcy of the corner drug stores because of the proposed increases. Rather, drug costs and profits may be brought down to sane levels.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

What Court Said On School Prayers

An Open Letter to Agnes J. Roderick of Novato and to Concerned Christians of Marin:

Your endorsement to the ban on student prayer at San Rafael High School in "What Our Readers Say" (Dec. 16) needs to be "clarified." In the U.S. News & World Report, Dec. 3 issue, Mr. Louis Cassels, religion writer for United Press International, has a very informative article entitled, "The Facts About Prayer in Schools."...

"What about voluntary prayers in the schoolroom? If they are private prayers of an individual, or the group prayers of students meeting on their own time and of their own volition, they are clearly permissible under the terms of the court rulings."

The article continues: "Few legal opinions have ever been more widely misinterpreted than those handed down by the U.S. Supreme Court concerning prayer and Bible reading in public schools. Even among school authorities and journalists, who should know better, the idea persists that the court "banned" prayer and Bible reading from public school classrooms. It did not. All that it held unconstitutional was the formerly widespread practice of beginning each school day with a miniature worship service which typically included a devotional reading from the Scriptures and unison recitation of the Lord's Prayer. This practice, the court said, infringed religious liberty and transgressed the line of separation between church and state drawn by the First Amendment to the Constitution. In Abington School District vs. Schempp case of 1963, the court said that a public school may not require the reading of a portion of the Bible or the recitation of the Lord's Prayer as part of a classroom religious exercise. That is all the court has forbidden public schools to do. . .The court went out of its way to emphasize that there is no constitutional objection to any of the following activities in public schools: (1) Use of the Bible for its literary and historic qualities. (2) Objective instruction in comparative religion. (3) Study of the history of religion and its role in the advancement of civilization. Relatively few school districts have had the courage and imagination to teach about religion and the Bible in the objective, constitutional way recommended by the court. Some school authorities use the court rulings as an excuse for avoiding what they see as a ticklish and difficult task — a dodge that helps to perpetuate public misunderstanding of the rulings."

I personally feel that one of the reasons why our schools are in such a chaotic state is because God has been shut out. Prayer and Bible study groups on a voluntary basis should be allowed on campus. I know of four high schools in the Bay Area where this activity is a vital part of campus life.

Teacher's View Of Reed Contract

Many times in the past I have taken pride in the I-J's fair and full presentation of issues, and I am grateful for the many kindnesses which the paper has extended to me. In the current school contract controversy I trust that you will permit me to present a teacher's view of the issue.

1. The I-J did not include in its news report or its editorial the clause in the "contract" which teachers found most offensive, the punitive, insulting stipulation contained in paragraph 8:

"It is specificially understood and agreed that any failure by employee to perform the specified services on each day and for the full day as directed by district will result in serious damage to the educational program of district with resultant detriment to the pupils thereof. It is understood and agreed that it is, and will be, impracticable or extremely difficult to determine the exact amount of damages which district will sustain in the event of, and by the reason of, a breach of this agreement by employee, and it is, therefore, agreed that Employee will pay the district the sum of $75 per day for each and every day, or a pro-rata portion thereof, on which the employee without good cause fails to render the services specified in this agreement."

2. The I.J. has obviously been wrongly advised that teachers do not want to sign contracts. I quote from the current issue of CTA "Action", page 7;

"Recent statistics from the National Education Association indicate that there are in excess of 3,300 master contracts in the United States outside of California. In California we currently have 10 contracts. . . .

"A master contract or comprehensive agreement is a written document that contains the policies mutually agreed to by teachers and the school board. . ."

Other teachers and I would like Mr. Richard V. Godino and the boards to come up with something like this — comprehensive, inclusive, specific, multi-lateral.

Getting back to the $75 fine, I see nothing in the "contract" which would give each teacher $75.00 were the board to "breach" (change) its terms. This, of course, would be impossible because the board's conditions of employment are not expressly stated. . .

3. What is behind this whole business? The teachers I know are professional, competent, dedicated, creative persons who have done their jobs well and would do so under any form of professional, mutually arrived at agreement with their employers. Until the present state of district malaise very few of us gave the matter a second thought. When hired at Reed a teacher felt that he was accorded an unlimited vote of confidence by the board and the administration . . .

Riles Looking Ahead To New Job

Before events begin to accelerate, I want to take an opportunity to thank you for your gracious support in my campaign for state superintendent. Your backing was, I believe, one of the major factors contributing to the victory.

Within a few weeks, I will be assuming the responsibilities of state superintendent. In that role, there is the opportunity to strengthen and enrich the educational lives of the children of California. That is a challenge both awesome and exciting, and a challenge I welcome.

I am grateful to your for helping to make this opportunity possible.

THE DRUMMONDS

Why Doesn't Senate Committee Back Up Its Vietnam Criticism?

By ROSCOE And GEOFFREY DRUMMOND

WASHINGTON — What's the matter with the Senate Foreign Relations Committee? No guts?

This committee continually shrinks from action to force President Nixon to a quick and total end to our helping defend South Vietnam.

It keeps saying that is what it wants. Then why doesn't it back up what it says?

It contends that President Nixon is escalating the fighting by sending armed planes to protect unarmed reconnaissance flights over North Vietnam and by threatening to destroy missile sites which shoot at these flights.

But it takes no steps to stop this alleged "escalation."

COMMITTEE CHAIRMAN William Fulbright says he believes the President has no intention to end the Vietnamese war unless the Communists capitulate entirely at the conference table. But, for some reason, the committee always stops shorts of taking action.

It is within the role of the committee to take the initiative to compel the President to remove all U.S. forces from Vietnam at any date it chooses to fix.

All it would have to do would be to introduce a resolution to cut off immediately — or at any hour or date it fixed — all funds appropriated for U.S. military use in Vietnam.

It doesn't do so.

It doesn't act on its stated convictions.

Why?

WE CAN THINK of four possible reasons:

1. — The Fulbrights and the Churches, the Symingtons, the John Williamses and other committee "doves" don't really believe that President Nixon is not acting to end the war; at least don't embrace their own arguments sufficiently to act on them.

2. — The Democratic majority on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee finds it politically advantageous to play out its role of constant critic. It's easy to say what should be done, far harder to be a doer.

3. — The committee simply can't bring itself to take visible responsibility for acting to put its views into law. That would be onerous. That would be riskful. That would be taking responsibility over and beyond the call of politics.

4. — When they come right down to it, most members of the committee may have an inner anxiety that the domino theory may be right after all, that if they force the President to withdraw so fast that enough can't be done to enable the South Vietnamese to defend themselves alone, then a Communist takeover in South Vietnam will lead to other Communist conquests-by-force elsewhere in Southeast Asia. Four American presidents — Eisenhower, Kennedy, Johnson, Nixon — have felt that to be true.

WE THINK THERE is no valid reason to doubt that President Nixon is steadily and irreversibly winding down the U.S. role in Vietnam. The South Vietnamese are bearing the brunt of the fighting. American casualties keep going down. The pace of U.S. troop withdrawal is ahead of schedule and a total of 265,000 men will be out in the next three months.

If this is not de-escalating, what do the foreign relations committee members think would happen to the war if the other side did the same? There wouldn't be any war there at all and that's what the United States is trying to bring about.

Agnew Meets His Match: Outspoken Governor

By ERNEST B. FURGURSON

WASHINGTON — Spiro Agnew may have been surprised when he got his comeuppance from the governor of Oregon the other day, but nobody who knows Tom McCall was.

The spade's-a-spade language of the casual Oregonian has made him a favorite of reporters for years at governors' conferences, where some of the most humdrum proceedings in political history take place behind doors closed to press and public — for no apparent reason unless it is to make those outside think something important is going on inside.

Because McCall thinks such secrecy is silly, he has a habit of coming out and telling anybody who wants to know just who said what, and for this we have occasionally called him our "pool reporter" on the inside. He doesn't mind: He used to be a newspaperman himself.

OUT AT SUN VALLEY, where the top five inches of McCall's head were visible above the six-foot snow, the Republican governors kept the doors open most of the time. For example, when the vice president made his speech excoriating columnists and commentators one more time, and praising his own divide-and-conquer campaign tactics, the press was there listening. So what McCall contributed afterward was commentary rather than straight reporting. (He used to be a television commentator, too.)

To quote him: "There was the most unbelievable, incredible misunderstanding of the mood of America in that rotten, bigoted little speech." It was "the most divisive ever given" by such a high official. It was "narrow, not hopeful — defensive and partisan."

Agnew's reaction, when informed of McCall's review of his performance, was not to congratulate the governor on his choice of phrases, although you might have expected some such recognition from a fellow wordsmith. Instead, the vice president said "Oh, my goodness," or the equivalent thereof.

NEXT MORNING, the assemblage had breakfast, this time behind closed doors. Agnew stuck to his attitude, although he condescended to try to rationalize it a little. And McCall stuck to his, although he did soften up to the point of saying he would not demand that the vice president be dropped from the party's ticket in 1972.

The whole exchange was interesting for two reasons. One was that Agnew finally ran into somebody just as outspoken as he is, and an elected official in his own party at that. The other is that in 1972 it is quite possible that the party ticket in Oregon will include Agnew for vice president and McCall for senator.

Needless to say, McCall does not consider that an ideal choice of running mates. Nevertheless, his friends on the west coast seem almost sure that he will abandon the mostly administrative job at Salem to apply for one more to his style in Washington.

The seat he would like to fill belongs now to Mark Hatfield, the former professor who preceded McCall in the governor's office. Hatfield has been fighting with others in his own party ever since he came to the capitol because he is a dove in a hawkish party and a liberal among GOP conservatives. It is believed he would jump at the chance to take a prestigious university presidency.

IF THAT SHOULD develop, McCall would have the Senate nomination in his lap. If not, there would be one hell of a primary fight for it. Hatfield may be a dove, but he likes a fight.

It is not stretching it to say McCall fired the opening shot in that 1972 campaign when he leveled on Agnew at Sun Valley. If he eventually succeeds in it, he will promptly notify the whole nation of what Oregon already knows: He is the freewheelingest politician to speak for the Evergreen State since Wayne Morse's defeat.

THE PEOPLE'S SCHOOLS

Performance Contracts Bring School Accountability

By BRYCE W. ANDERSON

During Wilson C. Rile's campaign for California state superintendent of public instruction, he bore down repeatedly on the issue of accountability.

The schools and their teachers must be held accountable for the progress of the pupils, insisted Riles. If a teacher cannot bring his pupils' learning up to pre-set goals, "he should find some other line of work."

Many teachers took exception to this. They brought up various objections. But Riles's reply was that there is no choice. "If we don't do it, someone else will do it for us, and we may not like the way they do it," he asserted.

THE CALIFORNIA Teachers Association and California Federation of Teachers wound up supporting Riles. CTA sent letters to all its members urging that they vote for Riles rather than incumbent Max Rafferty.

The CTA evidently read the same handwriting on the wall that was apparent to the candidate: If the public schools refuse to enforce accountability, it will be forced on them in ways school people may not like.

One such way is the performance contract.

UNDER THIS SYSTEM, a contracting company takes over teaching of whatever subject or subjects the school officials feel need improvement. It agrees to bring the pupils to a predetermined level within a specified period, at so many dollars per pupil. If it exceeds the goals, it is paid a premium. If it falls short, it is paid nothing.

CTA has come out strongly against performance contracting. So has its parent organization, the National Education Association. And so have NEA affiliates in nearly all 50 states.

In California, two bills to permit performance contracting in the public schools were killed in this year's legislature. Similar bills may be expected in the 1971 session, because performance contracting has become too widely accepted to ignore.

IN GARY, IND., for instance, all teaching of the "three R's" at Banneker Elementary School has been turned over to a contractor — and a California contractor at that. The school's instructional program is being run by Behavioral Research Laboratories of Palo Alto, which was organized to promote the "programmed learning" materials developed by Maurice W. Sullivan.

Behavioral Research Laboratories has reorganized Banneker into an ungraded school with each pupil assigned at his own learning level rather than his age level (which would be possible in a graded school if the automatic year-end promotion system were dropped and mid-year promotions for those deserving them were restored).

The contracting company will receive $800 per pupil per year. If at the end of three years it has not brought the children to the learning level specified in its contract, it must refund for those still behind.

THE INDIANA Federation of Teachers, AFL-CIO, fought the arrangement. Its Gary local at one point threatened a strike.

Richard Wells, the Indiana state superintendent (who, like Rafferty, was defeated for re-election), also opposed the contract and appointed a committee to investigate it.

But the Gary Board of Education — with more freedom of local action that is allowed school boards in California — went ahead with the deal, which is still in its first year.

The same opposition to performance contracts will come in California from the California Federation of Teachers and California Teachers Association. And, faced with the threat of having independent contractors take over the teaching, both organizations may accept state-imposed accountability as (in their eyes) the lesser of two evils.

Oklahoma Leader In Consumer Protection

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Joe Doe of Oklahoma City, who isn't the handsomest or brainiest guy in town, had trouble getting dates.

He sought the help of a computer dating center which was supposed to match men and women with similar tastes and backgrounds. After some conversation, he signed a $500 contract for eight dates. He decided later that the woman with whom he was "matched" didn't meet the agency's claims.

Joe complained to Richard L. Wheatley, Jr., Oklahoma's new administrator of consumer affairs. The company moved out of Oklahoma rather quickly.

In another case, a 70-year-old woman with an income of about $180 a month signed up for $10,000 worth of dance lessons.

Wheatley called that "a strong example of unconscionability." The woman's contract eventually was set aside by a court, her money was returned and the studio was ordered to stop making contracts with persons who obviously could not pay the stated amount nor derive full benefit from the lessons.

Wheatley got his job after the Oklahoma legislature enacted its version of a consumer credit code after years of painstaking work by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws (NCCUSL). A coast-to-coast campaign now is underway to move the model code through other legislatures.

Target areas include Florida, Illinois, Kansas, Missouri, Texas, Maryland and North Carolina. Today, Utah is the only other state to pass the measure.

The uniform consumer credit code is designed to supersede the chaotic collection of state laws on the subject, make competition the main regulatory agent and satisfy demands of consumer groups, particularly those speaking for ghetto dwellers.

The idea is to give administrators such as Wheatley flexible authority to deal with types of fraud not now foreseen. He also is supposed to generate programs designed to help consumers understand their rights and obligations.

Wheatley said that one of Oklahoma's answers was suggested by state Education Director Burton Brown. Brown proposed a traveling bus similar to the well-known bookmobiles of city libraries.

A 38-passenger bus was purchased, air-conditioned and fitted with 20 carpeted booths containing swivel seats and audio-visual units. A visitor can pick up a telephone and hear a 12-minute explanation of the benefits afforded by the new law:

—A householder may cancel a home-solicitation sale within three days.

—Garnishment of wages is not permitted until after a court judgment and then only in limited amount.

—If a purchaser defaults on a television set or other appliance, the retailer can repossess it or sue, but he can't do both.

—Discount sales made on the basis of referrals to other potential customers who do not buy are easily cancelled.

"A lot of poor people can't come to a meeting and it isn't easy to get around to their homes to talk to them," Wheatley said. "The bus will park at a shopping center or other place where they can be informed that they do have certain rights and they do have a place to go for help."

Wheatley's office also is cooperating with the state Council on Economic Education to fit the subject into all learning levels of the public schools, starting with the first grade.

"You've got to begin somewhere to teach children how to shop for credit," he said, "where taxes go, how much it costs to put up a public building, etc. No one has had any real responsibility for this kind of education. The code gives the administrator the duty of establishing education programs. We've kind of grabbed that and we're with it."

Elderly Woman's Purse Snatched

Enes M. Mager, 60, of 1632 Joan Drive, Petaluma, has told police a youth stole her purse as she walked in front of her home.

She said the young man lunged at her from behind last Friday and ran off with the purse that contained $6.

Criminal Charges Ignored In Propaganda For Angela

(Reprinted from Los Angeles Times)

In the short time since her apprehension on a fugitive warrant charging her with murder and kidnapping, Angela Davis has been transformed by her supporters from a woman accused of felonies into a Cause. The process is interesting, not simply for its revival of once-familiar tactics, but also for its probability of some success.

In the scenario, still unfolding, the crimes of which Miss Davis is accused go almost entirely unmentioned. The emphasis instead has been shifted to Angela Davis as victim, who deserves not only mass sympathy but immediate restitution of her freedom. Bothersome legal technicalities, like due process, are ignored.

THE RHETORIC of the campaign being waged evokes, or at least is intended to, visions of monstrous injustice.

Miss Davis is not being held to answer criminal charges, she is being "persecuted." The accusations made against her are not based on any evidence, but are a "fraud and a frameup." Her only crime is that she is a "black woman." The real aim of the authorities who brought charges against her is "to terrorize all who fight against racism."

These quotes are from Gus Hall, general secretary of the Communist Party, which is openly and loudly leading the effort to transform the Davis case into a purported example of political and racial oppression by the government.

IF HER ATTORNEYS can be believed, Miss Davis, the avowed Communist, is adding to the propaganda. We are told that in her New York jail, Miss Davis has been placed in solitary confinement and has gone on a hunger strike. Authorities at the Women's House of Detention, however, tell a different story.

"Solitary confinement" consisted of a large private room, they say, which Miss Davis might leave for two hours of open-air recreation a day and one hour a day in the jail library. The hunger strike story stems from Miss Davis' complaints that she was served a cold lunch.

Those whose memories go back to other Communist-backed causes of the early 1950s will find the campaign being waged for Miss Davis rather shopworn in its techniques. For others, however, it is likely to have some credence. Miss Davis is young, feminine, black and a revolutionary. Alone or in combination these assure a certain constituency. . . .

THIS IS WHY it is so important that the real issues in this case not be permitted to become obscured. Miss Davis is charged with specific crimes. Politics, race, everything else is irrelevant, and no one should be taken in by attempts to play on these themes.

The best answer, the only answer, to this effort to paint Angela Davis as a martyr to a "repressive" system is to assure that our system, through its judicial processes, gives her every right she is legally entitled to.

The attempt to prejudice the Davis case, to poison the atmosphere, comes now from Communists and others who claim to support her. The antidote to that poison is in the most scrupulously fair administration of justice and due process of law.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Propranolol Cuts Chest Pains, Not Heart Attacks

Favorable reports following the use of propranolol (Inderal) in angina pectoris continue to appear. This agent lessens the heart muscle's need for oxygen by decreasing the rate, slowing the contractions, and reducing the cardiac work load when resting and exercising. It also may lower the metabolism of the heart muscle. The drug has all the earmarks of being ideal because angina pectoris is chest pain that develops when the heart muscle fails to get enough oxygen on exertion.

Propranolol, however, is not perfect, even though it relieves anginal distress in 85 per cent of the users. It does not correct the basic cause of angina, which is a narrowing of the coronary arteries because of arteriosclerosis. In other words, it does not prevent heart attacks caused by a blockage of the coronary vessel or other complications of the disease.

IN ADDITION, one-third of the users develop side effects such as nausea, abdominal cramps, fatigue and light-headedness. But despite these objections, the drug is an improvement over existing remedies and can be used effectively for many years.

Angina is refractory when the symptom persists despite the best of care. The pain usually responds to nitroglycerin tablets, but distress may recur so frequently that the victim must avoid even mild activity and the tensions of business. Many sufferers are unable to walk more than a few blocks, even when the weather is mild. Now and then, chest pain occurs when resting at night (nocturnal angina).

ACCORDING TO Dr. Arthur M. Master, New York, refractory angina is not always so serious as it might seem to be. Nineteen of his patients have been followed for an average of 12 years. In some instances, the angina disappears spontaneously. Many, however, take as many as 15 to 30 nitroglycerin tablets a day. Nowadays surgery is recommended for refractory (persistent) angina. Propranolol also may be helpful.

(Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the Independent-Journal.)

PRESSURE DIFFERS IN EACH ARM

K. V. writes: Could you tell me if it is possible to have blood pressure of 125/85 in the left arm and pressure of 145/100 in the right arm? I take my own pressure and cannot understand this difference. I have a cuff-type instrument which was given to me by a friend.

REPLY

Yes, when the pressure is considerably higher on the right side there is a possibility that the aorta is constricted by a scar. May I suggest that you bring this to the attention of your physician?

CONSTIPATED AFTER SURGERY

E. M. writes: Can a person become constipated from adhesions that followed an appendectomy?

REPLY

Yes, but only if the adhesions completely block off the intestine. Under these circumstances, the ensuing pain is more troublesome than the constipation. There also is a possibility that after the operation the individual became careless about maintaining regularity. This is more likely to be the case if the abdominal muscles were too sore to strain

DISHES AND DIABETES

J. M. J. writes: Someone once told me that diabetes can be contracted by eating or drinking from dinnerware used by a person who has the disease. Is this true?

REPLY

No. Diabetes is not a contagious disease.

LAW IN ACTION

From the State Bar of California

Laws Must Be Flexible

The law has to be flexible yet stable to meet new conditions.

For example cities may one day soon have controlled climates under one big roof, recreational facilities, and huge shopping centers. These would be big private enterprises, not cities as we know them now.

Owners of such enterprises have great power over the "city" or center. Even so, the law limits their power.

For example, take the Giant Shopping Center in Central City. Central City's code says a person must leave when a land owner tells him to. The code also says that no one can distribute papers on someone else's property without his consent.

Seems reasonable, but workers were on strike at one of the stores in the shopping center. Two pickets kept several yards from the store, but still walked on the center's land. They were passing out handbills urging customers not to buy at that store.

The store owner and the shopping center manager ordered the pickets off, and told them to pass out their handbills on "public property." When the pickets refused, police arrested them for breaking the city law. After conviction, they appealed their case, claiming that the city law violated their right to free speech.

The appellate court agreed. Though on private land, they had been peaceful and would have been allowed to pass out handbills in places generally open to the public.

In an early case under the free speech clause of the Fifth Amendment, the Supreme Court had ruled that a person could hand out religious tracts on a "business block" of a company-owned town. The company could not deny a resident the right of free speech.

Earlier, the Supreme Court also noted that the typical shopping center brings together individual stores on one large privately owned tract. It found the roadways and sidewalks within the center's mall are like the streets and sidewalks of a normal city. From these facts, the court concluded that "the state cannot delegate to private owners the power through the use of trespass laws, to restrict the free exercise of constitutional rights."

The city can regulate sizes of signs, times for passing out handbills, numbers of people that may assemble, and the like. These rules must relate to health, safety, or some other legal goal.

Bus Plunge Kills 10, Injures 44

SAN LUIS POTISI, Mexico (UPI)—An overcrowded bus plunged over a 75-foot cliff Tuesday, killing 10 persons and injuring 44 others, many critically, federal highway police said.

Police said the third-class bus was packed with 54 persons—20 more than capacity—when it spun off the road outside this city, 216 miles northwest of the capital.

Most of the passengers were peasants who were heading for work on nearby farms. Driver Pablo Macias and ticket-taker Fernando Nino were among the dead.

Office Funds For McCormack Passes

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The House has passed a bill that would give retiring speaker John W. McCormack $38,000 for each of the next two years to maintain his congressional office in Boston.

The allowance, covering rent, help and supplies, is in addition to the congressional pension of about $44,000 a year for which he will be eligible.

Murphy Says He Won't Resign

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Sen. George Murphy, R-Calif., has indicated he will not retire before the end of his term to allow Gov. Ronald Reagan to appoint his successor ahead of the beginning of the regular session.

Such a move would allow Senator-elect John V. Tunney, a Democrat, to gain seniority over other newly elected Senators.

Murphy, arriving here for a Christmas holiday, told UPI Tuesday night, "I haven't heard anything about that (rumors of his planned resignation.)"

He said he would return to Washington "to vote for the SST," indicating he had no intention of giving up his Senate seat ahead of schedule.

Blood Bank Branch Open Next Tuesday

The San Rafael branch of the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank will be open next Tuesday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. instead of New Year's Day.

Normally open Monday from noon to 6 and Wednesday and Friday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., the blood center announced it would be closed Christmas and Jan. 1, but open Tuesday. Monday and Wednesday hours will be unchanged, the blood banks said.

Inductees Fail To Show Up

More than half the Marin men ordered to report for induction into the military this month failed to show up or refused to serve, according to Joy M. Kinzer, secretary of Local Board 25 in San Rafael.

Mrs. Kinzer said 15 of the 31 called did not show up, two refused induction and two more walked out of the processing.

Charles S. Kvitky of Novato and Patrick F. Robertson of Sausalito submitted to induction, Mrs. Kinzer said.

Four others failed their physicals, five were transferred to other boards and one enlisted rather than be drafted, Mrs. Kinzer said.

The names of those who refused induction or failed to report were withheld.

Mrs. Kinzer said the January draft call will include those with numbers below 195 not called in 1970 and those in the 1971 draft pool with numbers below 100.

The Marin quota, which usually is not met, is 94 for January, Mrs. Kinzer said.

CHP Plan For Fogbound 99

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The California Highway Patrol is setting up a special control system to guide motorists through dense fog on California 99 during the Christmas and New Years holidays.

The system, the CHP said today, is designed "to maintain a safe and even flow of traffic despite the coincidence of heavy traffic and heavy fog."

The CHP is calling the program "Operation Fogbound" and explains that there will be the pacing of traffic by patrol cars with flashing amber lights in the rear window.

TV REVIEW

Jack Paar Has Some Fun Ideas

By RICK DUBROW

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Jack Paar, the masterful entertainer-journalist, has long been pursued by all the commercial television networks to do more than his acclaimed annual specials.

Now, for the first time since making himself regrettably scarce, he has devised a unique and typically Paar series format that would allow him to do five or six specials a year for an indefinite period.

Paar, former host of the "Tonight" show and his own weekly series, is aware that next year's market for television specials is going to be rough because of the tight economy and the cutback on network prime time. But his idea for the series of specials is so delightful that any sensible network would go out of its way to get the shows.

OFFBEAT SERIES

The series title is "Breakfast, Lunch and Dinner," and constant-traveler Paar would be globetrotting again by having offbeat--and sometimes famous—dining companions for unique get-togethers at the three different meals in different geographic locations.

Paar says the idea came to him when, during a trip to Africa for a future special, he and some friends were camping out while descending from Mt. Kilimanjaro, and he thought: "Why not breakfast here with these witty, wonderful people—then fly to Majorca for lunch with Peter Ustinov on his yacht —then to Switzerland for a very elegant dinner with Noel Coward?"

He adds: "I thought: If it worked once, I could do it forever. And it could also be in America. You could have breakfast with some hoboes, and learn why they are that way. Then lunch with some campus militants on a campus. Maybe they'll talk to me like that. Then an elegant dinner by candlelight with Ethel Kennedy."

On the phone from his home in Bronxville, N.Y., Paar was full of enthusiasm. He thought there might even be a series in the format of another special he recently finished: "Some of My Best Friends Are," which deals with what he describes as British eccentrics—Robert Morley, Ustinov, Victor Spinetti, some colonial types and Malcolm Muggeridge, who fascinates him because "he's become very religious. It's so strange from this man who was such a wild guy."

HUMAN SITUATIONS

Another show on Paar's mind would be a sort of "how to" guide about common human situations. For example, one segment might deal with how to avoid legal entrapments. Another might concern how, when traveling, one should go through customs, pointing out "the innocent little dumb things we shouldn't have done, but do."

Paar says NBC-TV has been in contact with him, "wanting me to go back into a variety show. But, really, the world doesn't need another Dean Martin. I don't want to go through the rest of my life introducing Kate Smith."

Enlistment In ROTC Is Off

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Enlistment in college Reserve Officer Training corps (ROTC) programs has dropped more than 100,000 in the past two years and now is at the lowest level since before the Korean War, the Defense Department reported today.

ROTC courses are the major source of new officers for the armed forces, and officials feel much ROTC enrollment in the past was prompted by the draft. They said a wait-and-see attitude on the part of students, based on the new draft lottery and the prospect of an all-volunteer Army, apparently caused the decline.

The enrollment of 109,598 ROTC students for fiscal 1971 is the lowest since 1947, defense officials said.

$900,000 Asked In Fatal Hub Accident

The widow and eight children of a Marine sergeant killed in an auto accident last March have filed a $900,000 wrongful death suit in Marin Superior Court against the City of San Anselmo and four San Anselmo property owners.

Gunnery Sgt. RFonald W. Richmond, 42, of Tustin, Orange County, died of head injuries when a pickup truck in which he was riding crashed March 17 into a drainage ditch on Red Hill Avenue near Ancha Vista Avenue, San Anselmo.

The suit, filed on behalf of Richmond's widow, Elizabeth L. Richmond, and the couple's children, alleges that the City of San Anselmo and four unnamed property owners in the area of the accident were negligent.

The suit charges the road was too narrow and the drainage ditch was not marked.

Richmond's brother, Marin County Deputy Sheriff Robert F. Richmond, 41, who was driving the truck at the time of the accident, told police the truck went into the ditch when he swerved to avoid a motorcycle that had cut in front of him.

Libya Nationalizes All Foreign Bank Holdings

TRIPOLI, Libya (UPI)—Libya nationalized foreign shareholdings in all banks and insurance companies in the country in a surprise move Tuesday night.

Nationalization came in two decrees by the ruling Revolutionary Command Council.

The decrees banned any commercial company from performing banking operations in Libya unless it is 100 per cent Libyan-owned. All foreign shares in banks are to be transferred to the state and the shareholders will be compensated in cash by the bank of Libya.

In the case of insurance companies it is stipulated that the government will own 60 per cent of the capital and will also appoint the majority of directors on the board and fix their remuneration. Foreign shareholders will again be compensated in cash to the net value of their holdings.

The Ministry of Economy will supervise government interests in the nationalized companies. All employees of the insurance companies are compelled to continue working until authorized to leave by the ministry.

Italians Repeal Bird Catch Law

ROME (UPI)—The government confessed to a past blunder Tuesday and asked parliament to kill an 11-month-old law permitting the use of nets for capturing small migratory birds.

A cabinet meeting approved a one-paragraph bill that would repeal the law passed by parliament last January with government support. The measure brought an international outcry from wildlife experts, who said it could threaten the migratory birds population throughout Europe. They estimated as many as 10 million birds could be trapped in Italy each year as they pass on their way to North Africa in the winter and back to Europe in the spring.

Next to me they got the most in Marin County!

ALMANAC

Today is Wednesday, Dec. 23, the 357th day of 1970 with 8 to follow.

The moon is between its last quarter and new phase. The morning stars are Venus, Jupiter and Mars. The evening stars are Mercury and Saturn.

On this day in history:

In 1783 George Washington resigned his commission with the Army and retired to Mount Vernon.

In 1928 the National Broadcasting Co. established a permanent coast-to-coast bookup.

In 1948 ex-Premier Tojo of Japan and 6 other war leaders of that country were hanged in Tokyo by the Allied War Crimes Commission.

In 1962 the first of some 1,100 prisoners captured by Cuban Premier Castro in a 1961 invasion attempt began arriving back in Miami.

A thought for the day: Thomas Wolfe said, "Most of the time we think we're sick, it's all in the mind."

Mercury Found In Tuna In Britain

LONDON (UPI) —One in four of 100 cans of tuna fish tested by the British government chemist's laboratory contain substantial amounts of methyl mercury, government sources said today.

The sources said the level was similar to that which led to some tuna being withdrawn from U.S. grocery shelves. This was announced as 0.1 and 0.5 parts per million.

The Principle Of No-Trump Used For Trump Hand Victory

If you don't find the right things in your stocking tomorrow night, don't blame me. I've spent years trying to teach the principles of goodcard play to Santa's helpers, but they simply won't learn. Why, only the other night Santa put one helper and two reindeer on bread and water for 30days for the way the helper played today's hand.

KING OF HEARTS

West led the king of hearts and continued with the jack. Santa's helper, playing the South hand, ruffed the second heart, drew four rounds of trumps and led the queen of diamonds for a finesse.

East won with the king of diamonds and led his remaining heart. South ruffed with his last trump and ran the diamonds, coming to nine tricks — six trumps and three diamonds.

CLUB LEAD

Declarer then led a club, and West took the last two tricks with the ace of clubs and a good heart. Down one.

Santa Claus made quite a fuss about the hand because his helper should have made the contract. That would have been the rubber, and they could have set out for a delivery of toys in Patagonia.

CHOOSE RIGHT SUIT

South makes the contract by applying a simple no-trump principle: Knock out the dangerous opponent's entry first. West was the dangerous opponent because he had the long hearts.

After drawing four rounds of trumps, South should lead a club to force out the ace. West leads a third heart, and South ruffs with his last trump. But now when South loses the diamond finesse, East is unable to return a heart. South loses only one heart, one club and one diamond, making his contract.

If any of your gifts arrive next Monday, you can blame this hand. Those reindeer never will learn that no-trump principles often apply in the play of a trump contract.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with one heart, and the next player bids one spade.

You hold:

♥ - 10 6 5 2

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid two hearts.

You have six points in high cards and one point for the doubleton. This is enough for a raise, whether or not there has been a bid by the intervening player.

A CHAMPION SANTA CLAUS

Santa with kids on his knee is not unusual this time of year, but this time the Santa is played by former light heavyweight champion Archie Moore, and from the looks on the kids' faces, he's doing a great job. Moore donned the red suit for nearly 1,000 underpriveleged kids in Compton.

Montreal Player Turns Salesman

Johnny Boccabella, that strong young utility man for the Montreal Expos of the National Baseball League, is selling mitts and balls and other sports items at Rome Brusati's Taveggia-Brusati Sports Shop in San Rafael.

MASTER MIKE SUYDERHOUD, the world's water ski champion from San Anselmo, left Sunday for a six-week stay in Australia where he will coach and train at Bendigo, near Melbourne. With a heavy 1971 schedule in his plans, Suyderhoud, a student at Sonoma State College, likes the warmer climate Down Under at this time of the year.

TERRY McGOVERN of Sausalito, a real football fan, couldn't wait for the results of Sunday's 49-Raider game, so last week he asked the students at Elkins Institute to computerize the game.

The Students made it a class project, fed all possible variables into the machine, including Blanda, and the overall strength of each conference. End Result, said Mr. Computer: Raiders 20, 49ers 13.

HEY, THE MARIN ROD AND GUN CLUB is getting old. Just got a note from club president Mel N. Zell and secretary Paul B. Ware reminding me that the club's 44th annual birthday banquet is scheduled for next Jan. 23.

Also at Davis playing varisty basketball are Mike Murray of Greenbrae and Will Curley of San Anselmo.

MICHAEL HAGGERTY, former assistant publicity director of the Baltimore Orioles, has been named Director of Public Relations for the Oakland Athletics. Mike, 27, is a Communications Arts graduate of Notre Dame.

The same company has fixed that crazy mixed up computer. The other day he received a letter addressed to Mrs. Shoes Chapman.

Adds Irv: "Now that they have corrected the computer, I really don't know who the hell I am."

49ers Need Ball Control

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (UPI)—Coach Dick Nolan of the San Francisco Forty Niners figures his team is a bit tougher than oddsmakers figure.

When told Nevada betting houses have installed the Minnesota Vikings as seven-point favorites in their National Football Conference semifinal playoff game Sunday at Minneapolis, Nolan said simply: "That's kind of a big spread."

He also said possible snow or freezing temperatures shouldn't affect the performance of the Prospectors. After looking at films of the final two Minnesota games of the season, Nolan said he was more concerned about the Vikings than the weather.

"For us to win, we'd have to beat them at their own game—ball control," said Nolan. "Then we'd have to get some breaks in other areas, say in our kicking game."

Overcoming the Viking defense, tops in the NFC, will be a "big problem," added Nolan.

He also said quarterback Gary Ruozzo has improved the Minnesota offense.

"They execute and they don't make mistakes," said Nolan. "Cuozzo is a lot better passer than Joe Kapp. He has better touch and timing."

Running back Doug Cunningham and linebacker Skip Vanderbundt, who missed the last two games with injuries, were at practice Tuesday and doing some running. But Nolan says it's too early to determine their status for Sunday's battle.

Cunningham is still bothered with a hamstring pull while Vanderbundt has a sore knee.

The Forty Niners leave San Francisco at 2 p.m. Friday, their usual debarking time for an away game on a Sunday. That will allow the players a few hours with their families on Christmas morning

THE GREAT HOCKEY MYSTERY

TORONTO (UPI)—The Stanley Cup and two other National Hockey League trophies stolen from the Hockey Hall of Fame here Dec. 5 showed up mysteriously today in the driveway of a Toronto police constable.

Sgt. Wally Harkness was aroused by the barking of his dog in the early hours. When he went to see what was disturbing the dog he found the Stanley Cup, the Masterton Trophy and the Conn Smythe Trophy in his driveway.

The Stanley Cup is presented each year to the league's playoff champion.

The Masterton Cup is awarded at the end of each regular season by the NHL Writers Association to the player displaying the greatest perseverance, sportsmanship and dedication to hockey.

The Conn Smythe trophy is awarded each year to the player judged most valuable to his team throughout the playoffs.

Blackman To Illinois

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (UPI)—The University of Illinois made it official today—Bob Blackman, head football coach at Dartmouth College for the past 16 years, will be the new head football coach at Illinois.

Gene Vance, Illinois's athletic director, announced an action that had been published for almost two days and lacked only official confirmation by the Big Ten school seeking a drastic turn-about in its football misfortunes.

Vance said Blackman "would be recommended" for the post. The recommendation has the concurrence of the University President David H. Henry and Chancellor Jack W. Peltason, he said. Formal approval by the board of trustees on Jan. 20 was regarded as routine.

Blackman, 52, will replace Jim Valek, who was fired at the end of the season and woundup four seasons at Illinois with one of the poorest football records in the school's history.

Joe Ellis Is Award Winner

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Joe Ellis will have a nice Christmas, but the rest of the San Francisco Warriors might be a trifle glum.

Ellis was named today the winner of the Eddie Gottlieb award, given after a vote of fans and experts to the Warrior who has made the greatest contribution to the team.

Previous winners included Guy Rodgers, Rick Barry, Nate Thurmond, Rudy LaRusso and Jeff Mullins. The award includes $1,000 in cash.

The rest of the Warriors will have until Saturday night to mull over one of their worst showings, a 138-108 pasting by Boston—their second loss in a row. And things may not get better Swturday when they have to call on Milwaukee.

Jo-Jo White and John Havlcek combined for 68 Celts points Tuesday before a good crowd of 7,199.

Nate Thurmond had a season-high of 35 for San Francisco and Jerry Lucas added 26, but nobody else had over 14.

Los Angeles also lost so the Lakers lead the division at 19-14 with the Warriors (21-17) and San Diego (20-18) fighting for second.

Madden Expects A Toughie

OAKLAND (UPI)—The Miami Dolphins have always played the Oakland Raiders close to the vest and Raider coach John Madden expects things to continue in that vein.

"Miami has always been tough on us. . . even before Don Shula went there to coach," said Madden Tuesday.

"You have to respect the Dolphins. They have a 10-4 record, second best in the American Conference, they beat us 20-13 and they gave Baltimore (AFC East champ) one of their two losses by a 34-17 score. No, we respect them thoroughly."

Last year, Miami and Oakland tied 20-20 and the Raiders pulled out a 20-17 win.

Shula is not one to degrade an opponent, either, before a big game. The Raiders and Dolphins meet Sunday at the Oakland Coliseum in an AFC semifinal playoff.

"The Raiders are a fine football team with a lot of talent and with experience in big games," said Shula. "I don't feel our win over them in the early part of the season gives us any kind of an edge."

Behind the strong running of Larry Csonka and Jim Kiick, Miami emerged as the AFC's top running team, averaging 148.7 yards per game on the ground.

Csonka, a tough 238-pounder from Syracuse, moved ahead of Oakland's Hewritt Dixon in the final game of the season to finish as No. 2 rusher in the AFC behind Floyd Little of Denver with 884 yards. Little had 901 and Dixon 861.

Oakland is favored by seven points over the Dolphins.

Packers In Market For A New Coach

Bengtson Resigns Head Job

GREEN BAY, Wis. (UPI)—Phil Bengtson has resigned as head coach and general manager of the Green Bay Packers. The job of finding a successor is the immediate task of the team's ruling executive committee.

"The ideal thing would be to get a successor as soon as possible. But we won't panic and grab the first one that comes along," said Dominic Olejniczak, Green Bay Packer president and head of the executive cmmittee.

Although Olejniczak did not elaborate on the kind of man the Packers are looking for, he did say "we feel we need a man who can do a total job."

The 57-year-old Bengtson, who succeeded the late Vince Lombardi as Packer coach three years ago after molding the team's great championship defense of the 1960s, said he was making his move because of a "disappointing season" and a hope that a change would improve the Green Bay record in 1971.

"I want to emphasize that my experience with the Packers has been very enjoyable and I wish them every success in the future in the National Football League," Bengtson said Tuesday.

Bengtson's 1970 team finished with a 6-8 record, its worst since 1958, and managed to score only 14 points a game—the poorest Packer performance in 21 years.

Bengtson submitted his resignation in a letter to Olejniczak, who accepted it saying Bengtson "certainly is an outstanding gentleman and a fine citizen."

Bengtson just Sunday had indicated he hoped to be back next season as coach, but it was learned that at least some members of the executive committee met "informally" Monday at Green Bay.

The committee would have the final word on whether a change would be made, and although neither Bengtson nor Olejinczak would confirm it, there were reports the committee had derided some time ago to replace Bengtson and give him Monday an "either-or" decision to make.

The executive committee is scheduled to meet next week to establish ground rules for selecting a successor to Bengtson, Olejniczak said.

Olejniczak denied rumors the Packers have contacted other coaches.

"We could not without consulting the other teams," he said "That's the tampering rule."

Bengtson said he had no immediate plans except to rest for a while. He said he would like to stay in coaching in the Green Bay area.

Packer players expressed reactions varying.

"I was not completely surprised," said veteran defensive end Lionel Aldridge. "I firmly believe we lacked something. We didn't have togetherness."

When asked what type man the Packers should have as head coach, the eight-year veteran replied, "we need a guy who can speak and wouldn't have to repeat it.

"It will probably be one that we don't know—perhaps even out of the college ranks. But in any event, he's got to be tough with the players."

5-2 VICTORY

Streaking Seals Whip The Hawks

OAKLAND (UPI) —Credit the Hicke brothers for lifting the California Seals out of the basement of the National Hockey League West for the first time this season.

And they did it in convincing fashion Tuesday night by beating the high-flying Chicago Black Hawks 5-2 before 8,692 screamers at the Oakland Coliseum and a regional television audience.

Rookie Ernie Hicke scored two goals to take a 10-9 edge in goals this season over older brother Billy, who netted a tying score in the opening period.

With the Hickes providing a lot of the scoring power, the Seals have now won four straight to match a similar streak earlier in the season.

More important, it lifted the Seals out of last place in the West and dropped idle Los Angeles into the depths, one point back of California.

Oakland now has a chance to solidify its lofty standing by beating the Kings in head-to-head combat Saturday at the Los Angeles Forum. Then the Seals play road games at New York, Toronto, Montreal and Detroit before returning home Jan. 6.

Defensemen Carol Vadnais and Ron Stackhouse tallied the other two Seals goals against the Black Hawks who got lamplighters from Bobby Hull, in the first period and Pat Stapleton in the middle stanza.

Ernie Hicke broke a 1-1 deadlock in the second period when he pushed in a rebound after coming onto the ice as a sixth skater during a delayed penalty call on Chicago.

Stackhouse received credit for his second goal of the campaign midway through the final period when his shot from the point glanced off a Chicago stick and into the net. Ernie Hicke then tallied his 10th goal into an open net when Black Hawk goalie Jerry Desjardins was yanked for a sixth skater with the final seconds ticking away.

Eleven penalties were whistled in a rough second period. Chicago defenseman Jerry Korab received a misconduct and game misconduct after wrestling a lineman in an attempt to get into the middle of a fight between teammate Pit Martin and Dennis Hextall of the Seals.

Hart Rests After His Operation

Dr. Lloyd Taylor, who performed the operation at St. Mary's Hospital, said he removed some bone from the shoulder. The surgeon said he found "multiple, recurrent and chronic degenerate changes" in the shoulder bone which the surgery would remedy.

Hart was expected to take about three months to fully recover from the operation. He will be ready in time for spring training.

Dr. E. C. Sailer, Giants team physician, said Hart's shoulder "should be all right." Sailer said he would recommend a recuperative program in the near future for Hart.

The $35,000 a year veteran has been bothered by the shoulder since 1968 and aggravated it again at the start of the 1969 season. He finished the 1969 season with a .254 batting average and three homers in 95 games, his worst year of seven with the Giants.

After a successful stint with Phoenix of the AAA Pacific Coast League to start off the 1970 season, Hart was recalled by San Francisco. He hit a solid .282 in 76 games, including eight home runs and 37 runs batted in to finish out the season.

But constant pain in the shoulder after making a throw from the outfield late in the season persuaded Hart to have the operation.

A DIVE BY BRUCE TAYLOR

Webster Signs New N.Y. Giants Contract

NEW YORK (UPI)—Alex Webster has survived the battle to make the New York Giants a contender again in the National Football League.

The Giant coach signed a one-year contract Tuesday for an estimated $40,000, a raise of about $10,000 over his present salary, after leading the team to a 9-5 record. The Giants had been 6-8 in Webster's first season as head coach in 1969.

A former running back with the Giants, Webster was the surprise choice to take over after Allie Sherman was fired. During both of Webster's seasons the Giants have gotten off to poor starts, and in 1971 they lost their first three games before coming within one game of their first divisional title since 1964.

Although New York owner Wellington Mara was agreeable to a longer contract, Webster said he would be happier playing it one year at a time.

"If he'd wanted it, I would have given him a longer term contract," said Mara. "When he first signed, I gave him a two-year contract because I told him it was like a battlefield promotion and the first year wouldn't be a real test. Even then, though, I knew he only wanted one-year contracts."

Mara said they "haggled for about 35 seconds" before reaching agreement on the terms. Then they launched into a two-hour discussion over plans for next season and the college draft.

Unselfish Letter To Santa Claus

I guess it's been 45 years since I wrote to Santa Claus. As I remember it, I wanted things like a three-wheeled bike, a dog, a Graham McNamee football game, a catcher's mitt, an Indian suit, shoe skates, an Erecter set and a pony.

But that was only my first childhood and now, if I wrote to Santa, I would want things like teeth and eyesight and just one night's sleep like I had when I was five years old. I wish all my friends were 20 years youngers. I wish my feet and stomach didn't hurt all the time. I wish people laughed more and that I didn't need blood tests and electrocardiograms. I wish the kids were little and there's a lot of people I wish were still standing around the piano with us and singing old standards and drinking egg nogs.

I WISH I could sit once more in the Polo Grounds and see Hubbell for the first time. I wish I could watch Dizzy fogging the fast one in. I wish my uncle would take me to Pope Park and see Clay Hills play football against the Holy Name Society and I wish I could go to the Armory with him and see Bat Battalino and Louis (Kid) Kaplan and just once more I wish it were a rainy Labor Day in 1933 and Ruth hit one in the seats the only time I saw him play.

SOMETIMES I even wish I could cry.

But, never mind, Santa, my grandmother always told me Santa didn't like selfish children and that you were always meant to put in your letters requests like that the boy down the street with braces could walk again without them, or that the sightless man who sold papers downtown could one day see a tree.

SO, FORGET me, Santa, but here's the list:

1. Give Baseball another Stan Musial.
2. Give Boxing one more Joe Louis.
3. Give Basketball a young Cousy, or a healthy Baylor.
4. Give Golf an Arnold Palmer.
5. Give Doug Sanders that putt at St. Andrews over again.
6. Give Tennis a Bill Tilden.
7. Give Cincinnati just one pitcher.
8. Give the Los Angeles Kings double-runners.
9. Give the young, wisdom and the old, ideals.
10. Give us antoher Irving Berlin or, at least, keep Burt Bacharach cheerful.
11. Take back the atom bomb.
12. Give Timothy Leary a bum trip.
13. Give Henry Aaron 10 more years.
14. Give Ernie Banks one World Series.
15. Give Maury Wills one more pitcher he can get the jump on, then give him a team of his own.
16. Give Roberto Clemente one more MVP.
17. Give Willie Mays one more 420-foot drive to haul down with the bases loaded.
18. Give the Dodgers another Koufax, Drysdale, Podres rotation and a one-game lead going into September and print up the Series tickets — for four games only.
19. Give Jim Plunkett a good day in the Bowl where his mother can hear it and be happy.
20. Give us plays like "Fiddler on the Roof," movies like "Sound of Music," and songs like Gershwin's and books like Dickens'.
21. Take back 10 pounds, give me one more ride on a Park Street trolley on a snowy Christmas Eve, let me see one more kid's face light up at the sight of electric trains on Christmas morning and give the readers of this column all they want and I'm going to take five — days, that is — and see you at the chimney. Put a contract in the stocking for George Allen, tell Woody Hayes to smile, he's in light, and see you all after the holiday.

Grant: Weather Won't Be Factor

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI)—Minnesota Viking Coach Bud Grant doesn't believe the weather will favor either team Sunday when the Vikings host the San Francisco Forty-Niners here in a National Football Conference playoff game.

"Cold weather won't be much of a factor," he said Tuesday, explaining that if it gets extremely cold the Vikings will have to cut short their outdoor practices while the Forty-Niners will be working out in full-length drills in San Francisco.

The Forty-Niners will not arrive in Minnesota until late Christmas Day.

Fred Cox, the Vikings field goal specialist and the NFC's top scorer of the year, said the weather can be a factor in kicking "once you get below 20 or 15."

"On a cold day the field goal kicking is limited to 40-45 yards," Cox said. "There may be as much as a five-to-6-yard difference in the length of a kick. The real problem is the second half late in the game. By the end of the third quarter, the ball is well cooled off."

The cold weather, he explained, affects the resiliency of the ball, making it harder.

Grant said the Vikings have not had a chance to study films of the Forty-Niners and the players were not yet familiar with the team since the Vikings did not play them during the regular season.

He said the Vikings and Forty-Niners will exchange films of only their last two games. "But, a film going from New York to San Francisco just might pass through Minneapolis on the way," he said.

He said Forty-Niner quarterback John Brodie "is a premium quarterback," but "he's not the whole team."

The Forty-Niner defense "might resemble Dallas," Grant said. He said there was no real way to compare them with any other team.

Grant said linebacker Roy Winston and safety Paul Krause, both hurt in last Sunday's game against Atlanta, will be ready for the playoffs. Cornerback Ed Sharockman, who sat out the Atlanta game with a bruised knee, also should be ready.

Showers May Force Grid Teams Indoors

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI)—Showers may force Stanford and Ohio State football squads indoors today in their drills for the Rose Bowl game but the coaches seemed unworried by that prospect.

Woody Hayes, the Ohio State mentor who bars sports writers from Buckeye practice at East Los Angeles College, said he has had much experience with stormy weather.

"Many years ago when I coached at Dennison University," he recalled, "we had to work the kids inside and then shovel the snow off the field one or two days a week when we were able to get outside. There are some things you can do inside to improve the team although we don't do any hitting. They don't leave their feet."

The going was a bit wet Tuesday for the Buckeyes who went through an apparently routine workout. "It's too early to key up a team right now," said Hayes. "At this stage we're busy just working."

Hayes said his teams "really get up" only about three times a year. They got up emotionally for Northwestern and Michigan in compiling a 9-0 record.

"You have to pick the teams you want to get emotional about," he said.

The implication was that the Buckeyes would be needled a bit by their coaches to get up for the Indians on New Year's Day.

Stanford coach John Ralston described the two workouts his squad had Tuesday at Cal State Long Beach field as "very good."

"The field drained off well from the rains," he said. "We worked under dry conditions."

Intermittent rains hit the area on the weekend and a new storm was forecast.

Ralston reported two defensive tackles, Greg Sampson and Dave Tipton, are suffering from the flu. Tipton did not work out Tuesday.

Ohio State fullback John Brockington was a major wheel in the Buckeye offense. He gained more than 100 yards in five games and had a total of 1,040, a new school record.

Ralston permits sports writers to watch Indian drills.

He pointed out Ohio State has had the opportunity to view 11 films of Stanford games and said, "I don't think there's anything new they can learn about us."

Chargers, Oilers Trade Linemen

SAN DIEGO (UPI)—The San Diego Chargers sent tight end Willie Frazier to the Houston Oilers Tuesday in exchange for guard Doug Wilkerson.

Frazier, 6-foot-4, 250-pounds, played with the Oilers in 1964 and 1965. With the Chargers during the past season he caught 38 passes for 497 yards and six touchdowns.

Wilkerson, 6-3, was Houston's No. 1 draft choice. He was a reserve guard for the Oilers.

NBA ROUNDUP

By United Press International

Walt Hazzard made himself right at home in Los Angeles although he was wearing an Atlanta Hawks uniform.

Hazzard, traded away by Los Angeles, scored the winning basket, a 15-foot shot with 36 seconds left, to give the Hawks a 119-115 victory over his old teammates Tuesday night.

The Hawks trailed by 19 points in the second quarter, but Hazzard almost singlehandedly brought them back in the third quarter as he scored 19 of his game-high 32 points. The Hawks outscored Los Angeles 41-21 in that third period with most of Hazzard's baskets coming on his Alley Oop shot.

In other National Basketball Association games, Seattle beat New York 119-108, Chicago defeated Cleveland 121-80, Boston turned back San Francisco 138-108 and Philadelphia overcame a 25-point deficit to beat Phoenix 133-129 in overtime.

New York's flu-stricken center Willis Reed and Bill Bradley, out with a turned ankle, will be back later this week, but the Knicks could have used them against Seattle. Tom Meschery and Lenny Wilkens led Seattle with 20 points each.

Philadelphia rookie Dennis Awtrey and veterans Archie Clark, Billy Cunningham and Hal Greer led the comeback against Phoenix, which had led by 72-47 at one point. Awtrey finished with 23 points, including 15 in the last 11 minutes of the third quarter, and Cunningham added 25, 21 in the second half and nine in overtime. Clark had 26 and Greer 23.

Jo Jo White got 35 points, 22 in the first half, and John Havlicek got 33, including 20 in the second half, as Boston coasted past San Francisco.

The Chicago Bulls also had an easy time, coasting to their biggest victory margin in their five years in the NBA over hapless Cleveland. It was the Bulls' eighth win in nine games, and Cleveland's 36th loss in 39 games.

BOATING

By STAN DAVIES

Safety Always Is In Season

Good boat handling techniques are something a boater can acquire only by experience. There is no other way. You have to get the "feel" of handling a boat yourself and incidentally make a few mistakes.

HOWEVER, I find that a lot of knowledge about boating techniques can be gained without ever having been afloat. I firmly believe that if beginners in the sport do a lot of reading, and perhaps think about boating and sailing, they will learn much more quickly when they do the thing for real.

So this is an admonition to get a few boating books this winter while the action is slow and study some of the basic principles of seamanship, piloting, navigation and motor or engine maintenance. You'll be better for it when the boating season gets back into full swing next summer.

I FIND, too, that people who know the most about boating generally know the most about SAFE boating specifically. Here are typical questions that could be answered quickly by anyone who had read even a rudimentary text:

Q. I have an outboard boat that is speedy and agile. Recently I drove a large powerful inboard boat. Response to the helm was sluggish. Is this normal?

A. Everything is relative, and by comparision with a speedy outboard any big inboard is "sluggish." In an outboard, when the motor is turned, the whole thrust of the outboard is used to cause the boat to turn. But in an inboard there is never more than half the "discharge current" from the propeller acting upon the rudder.

Q. I have just read that sailing craft no longer have the right of way. . .is this so?

A. The law change is now five years old, but I guess some people still have not heard about it. The new rule says that large ships are no longer required to give way to small maneuverable sailing craft in harbors or narrow channels. However, on inland waters, the rule is the same as ever . . . a power driven craft is obliged to keep out of the way of a sailboat.

Q. It seems to be poor design, but the stern of my boat is so low that water comes in every time I stop the outboard motor.

A. At one time the outboard motor manufacturers got together and agreed on a uniform 15-inch height for the transom. . .that's the flat area at the stern. This was to make all motors standard. However, now you can get long shaft motors. . .20 inches. This will let you build up your transom and put in a self bailing motor well ahead of it. This will catch any water that comes aboard.

Q. What's a trim tab?

A. It's a gadget installed on the stern of a boat flush with the bottom, as a kind of extension of the bottom. Tabs, usually installed in pairs, can be adjusted so that they react on the water rushing under the boat to keep the bow down if it rides too high.

UCLA Comes Back Strong After Layoff

By United Press International

When a basketball team has had a 10-day layoff and is so cold on its return it can make only 20 of 40 free throws, it hasn't a chance, right?

Wrong, when that team is UCLA.

Despite the obvious slowdown because of the break for quarterly exams, the great Bruins beat Missouri 94-75 at Pauley Pavillion Tuesday night. Missouri had come into the game with a 7-1 record.

The great one-two punch up front of Sidney Wicks and Curtis Rowe combined for 57 points and 26 rebounds.

The Pacific Eight followed up its 5-1 Monday with a 3-0 Tuesday.

California, lone Pac-8 loser Monday by a point, took consolation honors at the Michigan Invitational at Ann Arbor with a 77-74 squeaker over Harvard. Charlie Johnson scored five of his 16 points in the last 56 seconds to bust it open.

Washington State's Jim Meredith hit 12 of 17 shots to lead Washington State to the 90-68 win over Nevada-Reno for the Cougars' seventh straight win.

Elsewhere, Brigham Young got off to a fast start and hung on to win at Santa Clara 68-67. Mike Stewart of the losers had 18.

Redwood Cagers Whip Alumni Team

Scott Trobbe and Steve McGee led the victory with 27 points each. Score at half saw Redwood ahead, 43-31.

AAU President Has Hopes For Changes

NEW YORK (UPI) —Jack Kelly, president of the Amateur Athletic Union, has served notice that his reign will be an iconoclastic one.

"I would like to see some of the Philadelphia Eagles or the 76ers take up rowing," Kelly said Tuesday. "And take the case of Wilt Chamberlain. He was a great track star in high school and would have been a great decathlon man, if he could have competed in that event as an amateur while maintaining his pro basketball status."

Kelly, the Henley Regatta winner in 1947 and 1949, Pan-Am game winner in 1955 and 1959, and Olympic bronze medal winner in 1956, believes that the AAU and all amateur sports "need a little more consistency, a little less hypocrisy."

He sees no reason why a man cannot be an amateur in one sport, a pro in another.

Kelly claimed Communist countries maintain athletes "in training at least six months a year. By American standards, that would be blatant professionalism.

"Our concepts of amateurism originated in Victorian England when only the aristocracy competed," Kelly observed. "Amateur sports for a long time was a recreation for the rich. The past organizers of amateur sports did not conceive of the problems of athletes today, or of the universality of participation in sports."

Kelly spoke as the AAU disclosed a new television pact for 18 Sunday afternoon telecasts during 1971.

Five gymnastics and swimming events are scheduled, marking the first time non-track-and-field events will be shown. Track and field rounds out the remainder of the schedule.

West Plans On Passing

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The West squad in the Shrine game may sacrifice one running back spot to get an extra pass receiver in there.

Coach Eddie Crowder's West team has only two running backs, Willie Armstrong, a 230-pounder from Grambling, and Washington's Bo Cornell.

Armstrong could handle the up-the-middle stuff and pass blocking with Cornell to spell him off. Then receivers such as Missouri speedster Mel Gray or Houston's Elmo Wright might start in the backfield. USC's Bob Chandler, Oregon's Bob Newland and SMU's Ken Fleming round out the sensational group of pass-catchers on the West.

Crowder also gave indications he planned to pass a lot when he told the Shrine luncheon Tuesday that all three of his quarterbacks would pass. They include UCLA's Dennis Dummitt, SMU's Chuck Hixson and Santa Clara's big Dan Pastorini.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

Real Estate Loans Offer High Interest

By ROGER E. SPEAR

Q. I would like your opinion on the investments offered on the enclosed brochures. Their high rate of return is very tempting. — J.W.

A. Your brochures are from real estate loan brokers, members of a young and fast-growing West Coast industry. These firms serve as intermediaries between individuals seeking loans on real property and private investors.

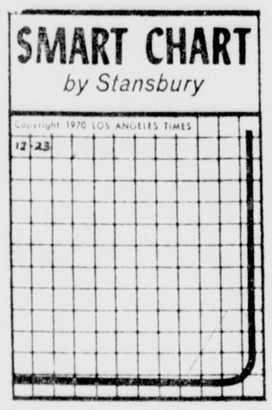
The loan broker appraises the property, investigates the applicant's finances, arranges a title search and provides property and title insurance if necessary. The borrower is usually a person with limited credit standing, no collateral other than the equity on his home, or a person lacking the down payment required for purchasing real estate.

In addition to paying interest on his loan, the borrower must also pay the loan broker's commission and escrow fees. The loans described in these brochures are second trust deeds, returning 10 per cent and more if the loan is paid in advance. The trust deed is officially recorded to secure a promissory note executed by the borrower to the lender with the loan broker as trustee.

Although many safeguards have been incorporated in the system, the possibility of loss remains. If the borrower defaults, the second trust deed holder, as well as the first, can request the trustee to institute foreclosure proceedings. If after three months the loan is still in default, notice of sale is published and following a three-week waiting period the property can be sold.

You, as second trust deed holder, may face paying the first loan in full, or at least making it current, in order to protect your own capital. Thus, although most loan brokers have an excellent record with no losses to investors, you could incur additional expense or a prolonged wait prior to collection.

Careful investigation of the particular loan broker's standing as well as your own ability to assume risk is a must before making a commitment of this sort.



"Sales are up in the hot buttered rum division."

'Phone Profits Down In Quarter

SAN FRANCISCO (BW) — Pacific Telephone has reported a drop in earnings to 36 cents per common share for the quarter ended Nov. 30, the second quarter in a row in which earnings declined.

Earnings for the previous quarter ended August 1970 were 37 cents per share, and for the November quarter a year ago 38 cents.

For the 12 months ended Nov. 30 the company earned $1.49 per common share, compared with $1.50 for the comparable period ended Nov. 30, 1969.

This wingless model plane is scheduled to take off on an unmanned test flight late this year. Safety Belts On Trains Proposed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Government safety investigators have suggested it may be advisable to put seat belts on passenger trains.

The National Transportation Safety Board recommended that the Federal Railroad Administration investigate the relationship between rail passenger car design and passenger injury — including the value of "occupant restraining devices."

The recommendation grew out of the board's investigation of a head-on collision between two Penn Central commuter trains Aug. 20, 1969, near Darien, Conn.

Caustic Soda Price Hiked By Kaiser

OAKLAND, Calif. (BW) — Kaiser Chemicals has announced a price increase of $5 per ton for 50 per cent liquid caustic soda.

The increase is effective immediately to spot buyers and to contract customers as contracts permit. Kaiser Chemicals is a division of Kaiser Aluminum & Chemical Corp. headquartered in Oakland.

Prices Up In Trading On Exchange

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices were slightly higher in moderate trading on the New York Stock Exchange Wednesday.

As trading rounded the halfway point, advances were leading declines, 703 to 543, on 1,624 issues crossing the tape; Standard & Poor's 500 stock index was up 0.15 at 90.19; and the Dow Jones industrial average of 30 selected blue chips showed a gain of 0.14 at 822.91.

A three-hour turnover of 8,970,000 shares compared with 9,120,000 shares traded at a comparable period Tuesday. Among the day's most active issues American Cement off ⅜ on 156,300 shares, Xerox up ⅜ on 147,200 shares, Scott Paper off ⅛ on 129,100 shares, General Cable 1⅛ higher on 110,900 shares, and American Telephone up ⅜ on 99,000 shares.

City Investing and Burroughs rose a point or more. Bank stocks also gained despite continued easing of interest rates. First National City and Chase Manhattan rose 1⅛ and 1⅝ respectively.

Steels were slightly higher. Armco, Bethlehem and U.S. Steel gained ¼ apiece.

In the weak automotive group, Chrysler and Ford surrendered ⅛ each. General Motors held unchanged. Midwest Oil rose 1½ in its group. Jersey Standard added ¼, but Natomas and British Petroleum lost fractions.

Less active Penn Centra held unchanged. The Penn Central Transportation Co. operator of the Penn Central Railroad reported net losses of more than $252 million for the first 10 months of the year, with total liabilities of about $4 billion.

The railroad filed for reorganization last June 21, and is now being directed by four trustees appointed by Federal Judge John P. Fullam, who oversees the operations. The House Tuesday approved a $125 million government guaranteed loan to keep the railroad operating.

Insurance Pact Near Formal Nod

Marin County Board of Supervisors yesterday approved in principle a compromise proposal for damage insurance on Civic Center buildings.

However, supervisors would not give blanket approval until the terms of the insurance had been "tied down in writing" by the two insurance companies involved.

The compromise offered by Fireman's Fund American Insurance Companies would drop the amount of deductible from the $100,000 mentioned last month to $25,000 or $15,000 per claim.

At present, the main insurer of the Civic Center buildings is United States Fidelity and Guaranty Co. Firemen's Fund is the re-insurer. The county pays $29,000 premium for $16 million coverage, with $100 deductible. Under the new proposal, Fireman's Fund would become a co-insurer with USF&G, each taking 50 per cent of the coverage.

Thomas F. Campanella, assistant county administrator, said Fireman's Fund offers the county these two choices:

1. A maximum deductible of $25,000 for any one claim arising from riots or explosion and maximum deductible of $5,000 for any one claim resulting from other causes.

2. Maximum deductible of $15,000 for each claim resulting from any cause, and a maximum of $30,000 deductible for a combination of all losses incurred between now and next July 1.

Campanella recommended the county accept the second alternate, which limits the total deductible for all losses for the next six months to $30,000.

Fireman's Fund said these offers are conditioned on various security measures to be taken at the Civic Center and Hall of Justice.

"Are we locking ourselves in to taking additional security measures?" asked Peter R. Arrigoni Jr.

"Pete's point is well taken," agreed chairman John F. McInnis. "We must know more about what those additional security measures are."

On a motion by Arrigoni, the supervisors approved Fireman's Fund's offer in principle and asked the county administrator to work out the details and get them in writing, particularly from the county's present carrier, USF&G.

Chefs Competing For Cafeteria Bid

Two San Rafael chefs who offer personalized service, are competing against Manning's Inc. for the right to take over the Civic Center cafeteria beginning Jan. 11.

Michael A. Chrystal, senior administrative analyst in the county administrator's offic e, said the best offer of the six bids came from Manning's.

Manning's will buy $27,000 worth of initial equipment such as tables, chairs and plates and lease them to the county at an interest rate of 5 per cent. Manning's wants 9 per cent of the gross receipts.

Donald A. Giovannoni, lunch chef at West End Villa in San Rafael, and Camille Bamatter, night chef at the same restaurant, also put in a bid for the Civic Center cafeteria.

"If only price is considered, I can't compete with a company like Manning's," Giovannoni told the Marin County Board of Supervisors. But if it is quality food and personalized service, such as special suites for county supervisors and their VIP guests, Giovannoni said he could provide it.

Giovannoni wants 9 per cent interest from the county on the initial equipment which he will buy, and between 3.5 per cent and 28 per cent of the gross receipts, depending on the amount of total sales.

Giovannoni, who lives in Novato, got support from Supervisor William A. Gnoss.

Supervisor Peter R. Arrigoni Jr. said he could not accept Giovannoni's offer as presented because of the uncertain percentage of gross receipts that Giovannoni seeks. It ranges between 3.5 per cent and 28 per cent, whereas Manning's asks for a straight 9 per cent regardless of sales.

At Arrigoni's request, supervisors put off action until next Tuesday so they can study the detailed offers, including menu and prices, by both Manning's and Giovannoni.

Chrystal said Giovannoni offers quality hot meals for $1.20 to $1.40, whereas Manning's price would be 85 cents to $1.05.

Firemen's Pay Raised; Deputies' Appeal Heard

Marin County Supervisors ate yesterday approved a 1970-1 contract for 35 firemen and 5 communications workers, giving them a 5 per cent pay raise retroactive to Dec. 1.

The 5 per cent raise from this month is in addition to the 5 per cent granted by the county on Sept. 1. A fire warden II, now getting $717 per month, will go up to $753 as of Dec. 1.

The new contract means that the total salary for firemen and communications workers this fiscal year will average out at slightly less than if they had accepted a 7.5 per cent raise at the start of the fiscal year last July 1, but will be more next year.

With firemen and communications workers coming to terms on this year's contract, the only group now working without a contract are the 118 sheriff's deputies, who broke away last month from the other emergency services employees (firemen and communications workers).

San Francisco attorney J. W. Ehrlich, hired by the sheriff's deputies to bargain for them, appeared before the county supervisors yesterday to appeal for a pay raise of at least 7.5 per cent.

Since deputies got a five per cent raise on Sept. 1, another 7.5 per cent would mean a 12.5 per cent raise for this year. Deputies had held out for a 12.5 per cent raise when negotiations broke down three months ago.

"I'm not threatening you," Ehrlich assured the supervisors. "But suppose that these men said well, the only salavation for us is to become a part and parcel of labor. Suppose they became members of the Teamsters Union and were ordered out. Where on God's green earth would we be?"

Supervisors then met behind closed doors with the county negotiating team to give instructions for further negotiations with Ehrlich.

DONALD K. STUART
Retiring executive

Stuart Ends 47 Years With PG&E

Donald K. Stuart of Novato, North Bay Division superintendent for Pacific Gas and Electric Company, will retire Jan. 1 after 47 years, the company has announced.

Stuart assumed his present position in the San Rafael office in 1956.

He joined the utilities company in 1923 as an assistant file clerk and in 1944 was named supervising foreman of an electric line crew in Hayward, the company said.

He was transferred to San Mateo in 1953 as district electric superintendent.

Stuart, a widower, has a son, Navy Cmdr. Donald Stuart of Virginia and a daughter, Katherine White of Columbia, S.C. He lives at 5 Kaden Court.

Two Injured In Auto Accident

Two persons have been injured in a two car accident at Third Street and Hetherton Street, San Rafael police reported.

Monita Gerson Waldo, 42, of 514 Main Street, Sausalito, was treated for chest bruises Marin General Hospital officials reported. Marywinn Ekstrom, 34, of P.O. Box 894, Sausalito, was treated for cuts on the forehead and left eyelid, hospital officials said.

The Waldo car, southbound on Hetherton, collided at 5 p.m. Sunday with a westbound car on Third Street, driven by Louis Stanley Overhouse, 55, Box 17, San Quentin, according to police.

Report Is Due On Court Action

The case of Robert Morrison Gould, 19, of Novato has been referred to the probation department for a report on whether he is acceptable to Marin Juvenile Court.

Gould was arrested in October by the California Highway Patrol on a charge of possessing marijuana for sale.

Bids Rejected On Drydocks Removal

The huge drydocks mired in Richardson Bay off Sausalito may have to be burned to the water line because conventional demolition is too expensive, the Marin County Board of Supervisors decided yesterday.

A low bid of $74,475 to remove the four drydocks came from Willamette-Western Corp. of Richmond. Two other bids ranged to a high of $295,452.

Supervisors rejected all bids. "We can't afford to pay that kind of money," said chairman John F. McInnis.

The supervisors turned instead to a new burning proposal presented yesterday by Fred Grange of San Rafael and Ralph L. Fenner of Oakland, a specialist in high energy burning.

Fenner said he can burn the drydocks to below the water line with no smoke or hazard, then float the remaining hulk and tow it away — all for less than $30,000.

Fenner added that he and his partners are prepared to appear before the Bay Area Air Pollution Control District board of directors for a special burning permit.

Supervisors asked the County Administrator to investigate the Grange-Fenner proposal and come back with a recommendation.

The drydocks, owned by J. Christopher Roberts of Mill Valley, were ordered demolished or removed by Marin Superior Court Judge Samuel W. Gardiner.

Unanimous Approval To Marin Logging Ordinance

Marin's logging ordinance, drafted after two years of work by the county's natural resources committee, won unanimous approval of the Marin County Board of Supervisors yesterday. (Other board of supervisors stories, page 1).

The 21-page ordinance, outlining in detail the requirements imposed on timber harvesters, including erosion control and reforestation, will be administered by the Marin County Planning Commission.

John F. Barrows, who headed the natural resources committee, said his group split over one issue: Who would administer the ordinance.

Barrows, Jean Barnard and Normand H. Traverso held that the public works department could administer the ordinance and issue logging permits because the ordinance is so specific, there is little room for policy judgment.

But the majority, including Public Works Director Donald R. Frost declared a logging permit is too important an issue to be decided on the staff level.

"Either the planning commission or the board of supervisors should issue the permit," insisted Frost.

On a motion by Michael Wornum and a second by William A. Gnoss, supervisors gave the job to the county planning commission. The new logging ordinance will go into effect in 30 days.

Installation cost will be $3,494, and service charge and maintenance cost will be $267 per month. The contract is for a minimum of two years.

DISCRIMINATION — Denied that the county is discriminating against women in hiring and promotions. Arthur Padilla, representing the National Organization for Women, Marin County chapter, charged that the county does not even send a list of county job opportunities to the State Department of Human Resources office in San Rafael. Supervisors ordered that job openings be sent to the Human Resources office.

PAY RAISE — Put off action on a proposed special pay raise for three county officials because Supervisor Louis H. Baar is ill and did not attend yesterday's meeting. Pay raises are proposed for Undersheriff Sidney Stinson; Erick F. Yarchin, superintendent of Juvenile Hall and James V. Burdick, director of county services office.

Baptiste seucceeding William A. Gnoss. Transit district meetings are usually held on the first Tuesday of each month.

Robert Louis Stevenson is buried on the island of Samoa.

Detectors For Civic Center Due

Metal detectors will be used at the entrances to the Civic Center and Hall of Justice so that body searches can be lessened somewhat, county administrator Alan Bruce reported yesterday.

He and Marin County Board of Supervisors assured the public that women will not be led into booths for frisking. However, present security measures, including the closing of buildings at night, will continue.

At the request of the Marin Human Rights Commission and a group of citizens and county employees supervisors set a public hearing for Jan. 19 for a report from Bruce on the security measures taken so far.

Marin City Firemen Get Temporary Mobile Home

water and rats, and it is impossible to keep men there."

County Fire Chief Louis J. Bloom said the morale of his men is low, and firemen refuse to continue working in the substandard firehouse.

The poor condition of the firehouse was revealed last week at a meeting of the Marin County Personnel Commission. Commissioners ordered an immediate investigation.

The county fire station in Marin City will be temporarily replaced by a mobile home, leased at a cost of $965 for six months.

Marin County Board of Supervisors voted for a mobile home,, 10 feet by 57 feet, to be placed next to the existing structure for use by firemen until a new firehouse is built.

County Administrator Alan Bruce told the supervisors yesterday that the existing firehouse across the street from Manzanita Center is "full of
